DRAMATIC HUNT FOR WHITNEY'S LETTERS TOLD

What to Do with 33 Billets Doux?

Miss Evan Burrows Fontaine's presentation of what may lightly be termed "the case against Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney," if there were such a case, turned up from odds and ends of interviews in Chicago yesterday. Or, better still, it might be termed "the hunt for the thirty-three letters."

No one can be quoted; so for this reason the publicity which has attended the statements that Miss Fontaine's infant son is also the son of Mr. Whitney is only enlarged and embellished by interesting hearsay. It is not really Miss Fontaine's presentation, but a recital of incidents from the Fontaine side of the love tangle.

Come from Fontaine Front.

It is not alleged that the tale of mysterious happenings is true; only that they are related from the Fontaine battle front. It is alleged that there are thirty-three letters in existence; that they were written by Mr. Whitney; and that their possession has caused rare energy and resourcefulness.

Details include intercepted telegrams, ruled baggage, a secret tunnel, eavesdropping private detectives, dictaphones, purloined papers, politics, and finally an alleged clandestine offer, a copy of which at present remains unexplained, while the letters repose in a Chicago safety deposit box in the name of a person who does not exist.

The letters are alleged to have been written by young Whitney to Miss Fontaine in 1919 and 1920—during the several months when they are said to have been motoring between New York and New Haven on week end outings, and before young Whitney's father, Harry Payne Whitney, is reported to have been advised of the upshot of these romantic trysts and brought them to an abrupt conclusion.

Letters Are Boyish.

For the most part the missives are described as boyish effusions—protestations of deathless love, quaintly interspersed with gossip of Yale athletic and social events, comments on the latest books and newspaper stories. One of them, written by young Whitney on a train en route from New York to New Haven, is quoted as follows:

"I can hear the old wheels rumbling over the track, and every time they go around they tell me that they are taking me further and further away from you. I wish I could stop them, dear. I wish I could go back."

The packet also contains, according to report, a photograph of young Whitney and Miss Fontaine, taken in one of the numerous studios that flank Surf avenue at Coney Island. The young man, whose father is one of the leading horsemen of America, is pictured by the camera holding the driver's papier-mache donkey, while Miss Fontaine sits smiling beside him in the camouflage cart.

Also the most important document in the portfolio is said to be a photographic reproduction of the register of a New Haven hotel where a "Mr. and Mrs. Crane of New York" sojourned at the same time that young Whitney and Miss Fontaine were making their weekly pilgrimages in the former's roadster through the New England hills.

All of this evidence, including the letters and the photographs of the hotel register, are now in the custody of Leslie H. Whipp, an attorney in the Ashland block, who was Miss Fontaine's original counsel. But Mr. Whipp explained yesterday that none would detect the documents in his possession, since he had hidden them in a safety deposit vault under an assumed name.

The events which this situation climaxes had their beginning late in 1919, when Mr. Whipp received Miss Fontaine, her mother, Mrs. Florence Burrows Fontaine, and her grandfather, Judge Charles Evan of Tennessee, in his office and listened to Miss Fontaine's case. The letters thereupon were given into his keeping, and having had them photographically reproduced, he placed them in his safe.

Saved from Gun.

Judge Evan, according to Mr. Whipp, at that time contemplated dispatching young Whitney with a pistol, but he was able to dissuade him, and the whole party repaired to New Haven to see if the affair could not be adjusted matrimonially.

A telephone call from Evan summoned young Whitney from his studies

BALL FAN SLAIN BY MISTAKE AS HE WATCHES GAME

Follansbee, W. Va., July 29.—A pistol shot halted a red hot baseball game here today between Follansbee and Weirton, and 4,000 spectators temporarily forgot the diamond struggle when John J. Kallapka, 21, fell dead with a bullet in his heart.

Louis Olivero, 45, pistol in hand, walked fifteen feet to his victim—then turned and shouted:

"My God! I've shot the wrong man."

Olivero, surrounded by a crowd, sat on a knoll and waited for the police.

At the police station the prisoner said he intended to kill Samuel Basil, brother-in-law of Kallapka. They had a quarrel a few days ago. Kallapka closely resembled Basil.

MOTHER, 10, TRIPS LAW AND SCIENCE

Ohio Girl Balks Inquiry, Baffles Physicians.

Lima, O., July 29.—[Special.]—Elizabeth Irwin, youngest mother on record in this part of the country, will live to care for her seven pound son. Physicians who have been attending her tonight denied the rumor that she was dying.

Elizabeth, who will not be 11 years old until Aug. 4, steadfastly defies efforts of relatives and officials to ascertain the identity of the child's father. Weak and wasted from her ordeal, she lies at her home in Hardin, Shelby county, caressing the infant who came into her life several days ago. The child is normal, physicians say.

Stepfather a Clergyman.

The girl mother is the daughter of Mrs. L. W. Irwin, wife of the Rev. L. W. Irwin, pastor of a church at Hardin. They moved from Harrod, Allen county, last October.

The stepfather, the Rev. Irwin, has demanded that officials start an investigation to learn the identity of the child's father, if possible. So far prosecutors of Allen and Shelby counties have been unable to make headway in their work. The condition of the child mother has made it imperative that they proceed slowly.

The case will reach the grand jury of both counties, R. R. Trubey, assistant county attorney of Allen county, said tonight.

Two Counties Concerned.

The case will be pushed to the limit no matter which county makes the prosecution, he said. It is being handled in both counties because of lack of evidence as to where the offense was committed.

Ohio physicians declare the case is without parallel in the annals of medical practice.

"The most puzzling phenomenon of the age," said Dr. H. H. Ryan, head of the obstetrics department of McKinley hospital at Columbus. Dr. Ryan said he had been present at the birth of a child to an 11 year old girl, several years ago. "Had the case occurred in the tropics I would not have been surprised," Dr. Ryan said.

BLAIR, QUINLAN SEE NO WAY TO PREVENT TIEUP

Lines Reject Offer of 8 Cent Cut.

In a final effort to avert a walkout of 20,000 street car men and elevated employes on Tuesday, W. D. Mahon, international president of the union, last night sent a telegram to Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, appealing to him to intercede.

At Col. Smith's home in Dwight, Ill., it was said he had left for a vacation in New Hampshire.

At the same time President Mahon addressed letters to the Illinois industrial commission, the state arbitration body, and the local transportation committee of the city council, advising them of the seriousness of the situation and requesting any suggestions they might have to offer.

Schwartz to Call Conference.

Ald. U. S. Schwartz, chairman of the local transportation committee, announced he would make every effort to reach the attorneys for the committee—Leo Frank, Stephen Foster and William H. Sexton—in time to call a conference this afternoon.

He expressed doubt he would be able to obtain a quorum of the committee before tomorrow morning.

Little hope is held out that outside intervention can now avert a tieup of Chicago's transportation systems day after tomorrow. Both the traction heads and all union officials, with the exception of President Mahon, gave up all hope of settling the controversy peaceably following the breaking off of negotiations between President Henry A. Blair of the Chicago Surface Lines and the union committee.

Blair Opposes Intervention.

Mr. Blair stated last night he will not consent to the intervention of "any elective or appointive" body and that he will submit the matter to arbitration only on a basis of no restrictions and before a board selected jointly by the company and the union. He informed Ald. Schwartz yesterday that he thanked him for the tender of the offices of the local transportation committee, but that he did not see that that body would be able to accomplish any results.

"There will be no further conferences that I know of," said Mr. Blair. "We are willing, of course, to meet the union committee again at any time they request another conference, but they indicated today that they are through."

"All Off," Quinlan Says.

"It's all off," said William Quinlan, president of division 241, the street car men's union. "We are through with conferences. I can see nothing except a walkout following Monday night's meeting."

In the meantime Chicago began preparing in earnest for a cessation of all car service. So sure was Chief Fitzmorris last night that the emergency is only two days away that he canceled the summer furloughs of 900 policemen who were to have begun their vacations today. The police force numbers about 5,650 men, 600 of whom are now detailed to special duty in the shopmen's strike.

Smith Holds He's Powerless.

Chairman Smith of the commerce commission informed President Mahon during their conference on Thursday that that body is without power under the law to act in a mediatory capacity in labor disputes. In view of this and of the wording of Mahon's telegraphic appeal, his message was interpreted as suggesting the issuance of some emergency rate order by that body to meet the crisis.

Alex J. Johnson, a member of the commission, expressed the view that even were it possible to call a meeting of that body in the absence of the chairman it could do nothing because of the temporary injunction issued by the federal court restraning the commission from enforcing the 6 cent fare order. A different view was taken, however, by Mr. Blair.

Blair Takes Opposing View.

"The commission can issue an order any time it pleases," he said. "The court's order simply restrains the commission from enforcing one certain order. If it saw fit to issue an order fixing any other rate I fail to see what difference the injunction on the 6 cent rate makes."

Broker Drops Dead at Skokie Country Club

Frank S. Cowgill, for six years president of Bartlett, Frazier and company, grain brokers with offices in the Western Union building, dropped dead from heart disease last night while chatting with friends on a veranda of the Skokie Country club at Glencoe.

Pulmotor squads were sent to the club from the Wilmette beach guards and the Evanston fire department. They were unable to revive him after an hour's effort.

Came from Omaha.

Mr. Cowgill lived at 521 Stratford Place. He came here six years ago from Omaha, where he was president of the Cowgill Elevator company, correspondents for the Bartlett-Frazier firm.

On his arrival here he took the place of H. E. Rycroft, formerly vice president of the firm.

Mr. Cowgill, with his wife, formed a party which attended the opening of a new outdoor dance floor at the club last night.

Sitting on Veranda.

According to James M. Sheton of Glencoe Mr. Cowgill was sitting in the midst of the party on the veranda following a dance. He was laughing and talking; appeared to be his usual self.

Suddenly he fainted. Efforts were immediately made to revive him; they failed. Then physicians and pulmotor squads were called.

GIRL TAKEN AS BOULEVARD VAMP SUES FOR $25,000

Haled into the municipal court as an alleged "boulevard vamp," and subsequently discharged, Miss Frances Cecelia Carlson, 4061 Sheridan road, yesterday filed suit for $25,000 damages in Superior court against George Edwards, 4643 Sheridan road; Edward Abt, 4455 Broadway, and Sergeants Matt Barden and Fred Able of Town Hall police station.

The suit, according to Attorney Charles E. Erbstein, grows out of a competitive flirtation indulged in by Edwards and Abt, who, seeing Miss Carlson walking toward her home, vied with each other to offer her a ride in their respective machines.

Narrowly averting several collisions, the men followed Miss Carlson for several blocks, both, meanwhile, attempting to attract her attention. Edwards finally opened the door of his car, and as Miss Carlson stepped off the curb, apparently to enter, Sergts. Barden and Able arrested the trio. Miss Carlson is employed in the stock department of the Rand McNally company.

DREAM GIRL, 79, FOUND BY J. DOE, 80, IN POORHOUSE

Racine, Wis., July 29.—[Special.]—Romance is blooming at the county poorhouse. Eighty year old "John Doe" has wooed, won and wants to wed 79 year old "Jenny Roe."

"John," as he must be called because the superintendent refuses to reveal the identity of the lovers, says:

"For eighty years I've been a bachelor, because I never met the right girl. At the poorhouse I met my prospective wife. From the very first I realized that she was the one who could make me happy. We've talked it over and decided to marry."

The love affair, however, places Superintendent Martin Overson in a peculiar position, he says. The women and the men have separate quarters. Special provision must be made if the marriage of Johnny and Jenny is approved.

SENIORITY MAY DEFEAT PEACE IN SHOP STRIKE

Statement by Erie Assails President.

Seniority rights—the question of restoring strikers to their former status—loomed formidably last night as a rock upon which President Harding's railway peace plan may be wrecked Tuesday, when railroad executives, meeting in New York, and union leaders, convening in Chicago, take up the President's proposal.

Violent and resounding opposition to any sugestion of restoring seniority to the 300,000 shopmen who walked out July 1 developed among the carriers yesterday, notably in New York and Chicago.

The union leaders, on the other hand, are reported as generally favorable to the program of the President.

His Seniority Plan.

Mr. Harding, according to reliable reports that followed his conferences Friday with railway executives and union chiefs, has proposed the following seniority preference: Union shopmen who did not join the walkout to have first rights; union men who did strike to come next; and new men recruited since the strike to come third.

The President's peace proposal, definitely drafted, was transmitted to strike leaders and railway executives yesterday, according to Washington press dispatches.

Many influntial railway officials, according to present indications, will go into the New York conference on Tuesday solidly lined up against the President's compromise project.

Carriers Primed for Fight.

A prepared statement by the presidents' committee on public relations, appearing as an advertisement in this issue of THE TRIBUNE, a telegram sent out from New York by R. S. Parsons, vice president of the Erie railroad, and another from New York by L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson and chairman of the eastern executives' committee, piled up yesterday as evidence that the carriers are girded for battle.

Vice President Parsons' statement follows:

"Those interested should not be misled by statements recently issued, first in the interests of the striking employes; second, in the interests of politicians, and, third, to the effect that the strike on the Erie railroad will be settled by some governmental authority.

"These statements are untrue.

Denies Power to End Strike.

"There is no strike settling power vested in any branch of the government. Its function is to keep order, not to settle strikes.

"The Erie railroad will settle with its employes whenever they are ready, without any outside interference, and that is the only way.

"Do not overlook the fact that the Erie has not been stopped since July 1 and it is not to be stopped through the act of any person or part of the community which is interested in having it stopped."

Loree Scores President.

In a telegram from New York to several senators, Mr. Loree criticized the President for "failure to inform himself as to the position of more than 175,000 workmen on railroad payrolls."

Vice President Worcester of the Big Four railway issued a statement in Cincinnati in which he said restoration of seniority rights to strikers would be "lying to new men."

Other telegrams from various individuals and organizations throughout the country, including the Illinois Manufacturers' association, supported the stand of the carriers on the seniority question. They were addressed to President Harding.

Sees Future Reaction.

In an advertisement addressed "To the Public" the western presidents' committee calls attention to pronouncements of President Harding and Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the United States railroad labor board, since the strike started, as bolstering the position of the carriers on the seniority rights dispute.

One portion reads:

"If those who have struck against the labor board and tried to interrupt transportation are favored in any settlement that may be made, the incentive of men to stay at work in case of future strikes will be destroyed and the difficulty of maintaining transportation service increased."

In reading the foregoing, some observers pointed to the fact that the carriers have yet to deal with other classes of railroad labor whose wages were not reduced by the recent railroad labor board decision.

"Rights of Workers" Issue.

Concluding, the western presidents' statement reads:

"Thus will be seen the fact that all the men who are now working have claims upon the railways and the public superior to those of the strikers has been recognized by government bodies and officials; the question now is whether their rights shall be protected or sacrificed."

The Pennsylvania, the Erie, the Delaware and Hudson, the Santa Fe, and the Illinois Central railway officials are, according to reports, leading the fight of the carriers against any recession from the stand on seniority privileges.

Union Leaders Return.

B. M. Jewell, head of the striking shop crafts; Timothy Healy, leader of the stationary firemen and oilers, who joined the walkout in full strength, and chiefs of the six shop crafts, returned late yesterday from Washington, where they were in conference with Mr. Harding Friday.

Mr. Jewell and the other shop crafts heads declined to speculate on peace prospects, but President Healy was more communicative. He said he believed a settlement would be made this week, with the strikers regaining their seniority standings.

"Our people will consider no settlement that does not give the men back their seniority rights," he added.

Mr. Jewell confirmed reports that he had sent out the call for his committee of ninety to deal with the White House proposal.

Strike Violence Renewed.

Renewal of strike disorders developed with a vengeance yesterday. Two strikers were shot, one seriously wounded, in an early morning riot at the Burnside shops of the Illinois Central.

About the same time, George Wilson, a car repairer employed by the Wabash railway, was slugged and bundled into the automobile of his assailants. The police had found no trace of him last night.

Vincent Kaluza of 1347 West Huron street, employed in the shops of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, was beaten by four supposed strikers last night who entered his home. His skull was fractured and four of his teeth were knocked out. He was taken to the county hospital.

Ex-Shopman Captured.

Sergt. Fred Reed of the Central station was passing when he saw the four men run from the house. He gave chase and captured John Koeink, 1722 West Erie street, who refused to name his companions. Koeink was formerly a railroad employé.

Kaluza was in the kitchen with his wife and three children when the four men entered. They seized Kaluza and began to kick him. One of the men picked up a sugar bowl and struck him on the head.

Marshal Wounds Two.

The Burnside trouble occurred early in the day. A mob of seventy-five men assembled outside the gates leading to the shops. J. H. Morgan, one of several United States deputy marshals guarding nonunion shopmen there, stepped outside.

"Let's get him!" some one cried, and the crowd surged forward. Deputy Morgan whipped out a pistol and commanded the men to back away. But they did not heed the warning.

The deputy marshal fired. One bullet hit Clifford Bailey, 9338 Cottage Grove avenue, lodging in the abdomen. A second struck Carl Baltakris, 4337 Evans avenue, in the right leg. Both were taken to the Burnside hospital, where Bailey's condition was reported to be grave.

The firing scattered the mob. A squad from the Burnside police station, responding to a riot call, arrested Joseph Zoltata, 9302 Calumet avenue, following a chase. Zoltata and Bailey, according to Deputy Morgan, were leaders of the mob.

Western Roads Near Normalcy.

Western railroads are "practically unaffected by the shopmen's strike," according to the following statement issued last night by the western presidents' committee on public relations:

"Both freight and passenger traffic on the western lines with headquarters in Chicago practically are unaffected by the shopmen's strike. Freight traffic demands are being met currently and passenger trains are being operated normally with but slight delays. All of the roads report increases in the number of men at work in their shops, the total increase since July 24 on all of the western roads being 7,169 shopmen.

"The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy today reports that 250 shopmen were added to their forces on July 27 and 309 men on July 28. The Burlington, in the first twenty-seven days of July, handled 12 per cent more business than in the same period last year, and there is no traffic congestion reported.

"The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé today had 10,201 shopmen at work, an increase of 229 over yesterday. The shop force on that road is now approximately 57 per cent of normal.

"The Illinois Central reports that it now has at work 10,402 men in its shops, as compared with 12,701 on the day before the strike began. Its gain in number of employés within the last ten days has been 2,353."

BISHOP WILSON GIVES LUNCHEON TALK HERE AUG. 11

Bishop Luther B. Wilson of New York, secretary of the board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, will be the principal speaker at a luncheon at the Hotel Sherman Aug. 11. His subject will be "The World Need and Our Reply." Bishop Thomas Nicholson and 100 prominent laymen and women and ministers will attend.

Bishop Wilson is a graduate of the medical school of the University of Maryland and has been a bishop since 1904. Until last year he was president of the Anti-Saloon League of America. He is now on a speaking tour through Michigan, Minnesota, and Illinois.

Church Fight in Mexico Forces Factories to Close

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, July 29.—Reports from both union and nonunion sources state there is a reign of terror in the Hercules factories in Queretaro. The owners have been forced to close the factories. Catholic workmen are determined to avenge the lynching of their leader, Señor Ponce. The factories are surrounded by state troops with orders to fire to kill. The governor throws the blame on the union, exonerating the Catholic workmen.

MAHON ASKS FOR STATE ACTION TO AVERT CAR TIEUP

Blair and Quinlan Give Up Hope.

the street car men's committee followed the flat rejection by the company's board of control of an offer made by the men to accept a 10 per cent wage cut, amounting to a reduction of 8 cents an hour. Mr. Blair replied that the company still stands pat on his compromise offer of a 15 cent cut with a maximum hourly wage of 65 cents.

"They ask us to accept 72 cents an hour and we cannot do that," he said. "They are asking us to pay them approximately 13 cents an hour more than the average wage paid in thirteen of the other larger cities in the country. I think this averages around 52½ cents an hour. We simply have made them the best offer we can. We will make no further offer."

Admits Bankruptcy Peril.

Mr. Blair admitted that a strike of any considerable duration would force the company to file a petition in bankruptcy and turn the lines over to be operated by the Federal courts, but pointed out also that it would be compelled to pursue the same course in case it yielded to the wage demands of the men. Since the 7 cent fare went into effect the daily receipts of the company have run from $146,000 to $155,000, which means that a week's strike would entail a loss of $1,000,000.

It was stated the company has funds with which to meet the next interest payments on the bonds and "hopes" to have enough to meet next February's payments, but it was also stated that it would not take a strike long to cut down these "hopes" to the extent of seeking relief in the courts, no matter how drastic the course might be considered. It is known that bankruptcy proceedings were being considered as one possible course in event that the federal court denied relief from enforcement of the 6 cent fare order.

Union Chiefs' Statement.

A report of the conference with Mr. Blair was made by Mr. Quinlan, William Taber, financial secretary, and Joseph J. Kehoe, recording secretary, of Division 241, as follows:

"In the communication received from Mr. Blair last Thufsday evening he invited us again into conference, saying that he believed that it was yet possible for us to reach a settlement. Upon receipt of that letter we decided to again go into conference with him, which we did yesterday morning.

"Before going into that conference we carefully went over the situation and decided that it was our duty to make every effort possible to bring about a peaceful settlement, and after going into conference we offered Mr. Blair that if he would leave the conditions stand we would recommend to our membership that they accept a 10 per cent reduction. That would make our maximum pay for motormen and conductors 72 cents an hour.

Blair Refuses Offer.

"This proposition Mr. Blair took under advisement and submitted the same to his board of directors, and we met him this morning to receive his answer. His reply was that the company would not agree to it, and he stood on his original proposition. We cannot understand why the company made the suggestion to us in their letter that they hoped there was still an opportunity for a settlement and then reiterated their old position.

"At this morning's meeting we asked Mr. Blair if he had any other proposition to make and he stated that he had none and that he would make no proposition but his original one. This leaves us standing in the same position that we have been in for the last several days. As to our future actions or movements we will await the meeting of the joint committee."

Joint Committee Meets.

As soon as the committee representing the elevated employés returned from their conference with Britton I. Budd, president of the Chicago elevated lines, a meeting of the joint committee was held.

With the exception of a few minor clauses in the working contract, the "L" committee and Mr. Budd cleared up practically all working rules and the conference was continued until tomorrow afternoon. It is doubtful if the question of wages will be reached at that time, however.

Mr. Mahon's statement on behalf of the joint committee follows:

"Our committee representing the surface lines have already made a statement informing the public of the results of their conference held this morning with President Blair of the surface lines company. There is nothing further that we can add to that statement.

Hope for New Offer.

"Our hope is that the company may reconsider its position and again open up negotiations. We pleaded to them this morning to make us another proposition. We felt that after the proposition we had made to them, offering a compromise, it was the duty of the company to make another in reply, and we still hope that they will do so.

"Our committee representing the elevated men was in conference with the company until noon today, when the company requested an adjournment until Monday afternoon at 2:30. They were willing, however, if we felt a conference was needed Sunday, to meet with us. We have practically covered and settled the working conditions, so far as the committee's work is concerned, and we are in readiness to report that to our membership for their consideration and action."

Postman Refuses Job of Being a Salesman, Too

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The postoffice department today stopped the practice of certain firms in advertising that their merchandise might be sent through the mails subject to inspection by purchaser before acceptance and payment of charges. All postmasters were instructed to refuse to accept such merchandize.

Mahon Makes Final Pleas to Head Off Car Walkout

The following statement was issued last night by W. D. Mahon, international president of the street car and elevated men's union, in connection with the Chicago dispute:

"The situation is a serious one. The surface lines companies have taken a firm stand and are insisting upon a sweeping reduction of 15 cents an hour, and the destruction of the eight-hour day.

"I was in hopes last night that the offer of the surface men to accept a 10 per cent reduction would be accepted by the company, but this they have refused, and, with no other offer before the men than the original one made by the company to be laid before them Monday night, this meeting will, I fear, only result in a walkout.

Still Has Hopes.

"However, I still have hopes that we may find some way of averting a strike. I am appealing to every force I know of with the hope that some of them may be able to offer something that will bring these forces together. I feel on the elevated lines that an understanding can be reached. If we could only get the same situation on the surface roads, peace would be assured.

"I have sent out the following letters to the different committees and commissions with hopes that something may be brought about that will bring the two contending forces together. If that does not do it I know of nothing else that I can do, but I feel that I have done my whole duty to the citizens of the city of Chicago and at the same time have tried to protect the best interests of the membership of my association."

Letter to F. L. Smith.

Mr. Mahon then states he has sent the following letters and telegrams:

"Hon. Frank L. Smith, chairman, Illinois commerce commission, City Hall Square building:

"For the last ten days, I have been struggling day and night to bring about a settlement between the Chicago Surface lines and their employés on the question of wages. The employés have finally offered through their committee to recommend to their membership acceptance of a 10 per cent reduction in wages which I feel would be acceptable, but officials of the company refuse to consider or accept this offer, contending that it would bankrupt their company and place it in the hands of a receiver. They are still insisting on a sweeping reduction of about 19 per cent.

Men Refuse to Accept It.

"The employés deny the company's contention and will not accept this sweeping reduction. They have called a massmeeting for Monday night to take action. If something is not done to avoid this a strike seems imminent. Your commission is the only authorized body within the state that can deal with questions of this kind. Is it not possible for your commission to intercede at this time and help prevent what seems to me to be a great calamity for this great city?

"W. D. MAHON."

Notifies Ernest Withall.

"Ernest Withall, chairman, Illinois industrial commission, City Hall Square building:

"Dear Sir: In compliance with my promise made to your representative that I would keep him informed of the result and progress that was being made in the negotiations with Mr. Blair, president of the Chicago Surface lines, I take this means of informing you that negotiations between the committee representing the surface men and Mr. Blair have been brought to a close without any satisfactory results being reached. Trusting this will inform you of the situation, I remain, yours respectfully, W. D. MAHON."

Also Informs Schwartz.

"Honorable U. S. Schwartz, chairman local transportation committee:

"Dear Sir: In compliance with my promise made to your attorney, Mr. William H. Sexton, that I would keep your committee informed of the progress being made between the street railway men and the various companies in their negotiations looking to a settlement of their disputes that are now on, I will inform you that the negotiations between the committee and Mr. Blair, representing the surface lines, have been brought to a close without any agreement of any kind having been reached. Trusting this will inform you of the situation and awaiting any suggestions you may make, I remain, yours respectfully,

"W. D. MAHON."

Buffalo Committee Fails to Settle Street Car Strike

Buffalo, N. Y., July 29.—[United Press.]—Mayor Frank E. Swab's committee investigating the street car strike here failed to agree in their final report submitted to the mayor tonight. The majority report, signed by four, favored the striking car men and criticized the international railway company for failing to participate in the investigation. The remaining three members favored the company's stand. Street car service will not be changed tomorrow, company officials announced.

Col, Hackett Not Yet in Legion Election Race

In response to hundreds of telegrams and personal calls, Col. Horatio B. Hackett, commander of Advertising Men's post, American Legion, authorizes the statement that he has, as yet, made no announcement of being a candidate for state commander of the American Legion, department of Illinois. He also denies that he has indorsed any other candidate. In conclusion, he states that he feels that some man of highest executive ability should be elected.

CHICAGO POETESS, DIVORCEE, BRIDE OF MILWAUKEE MAN

MRS. ETHEL WAHL YEWDALE.

Mrs. Ethel Wahl Harmon, Chicago poetess, whose "Harpstrings and Bowstrings" was published several years ago, ventured again on to the sea of matrimony last Thursday when she became the bride of Percy Yewdale, Milwaukee, business man. The ceremony was performed at the home of her brother, Oplin I. Wahl, 833 Cornelia avenue.

In December, 1920, the poetess was granted a divorce from James L. Harmon, Chicago broker, on the ground of infidelity, she naming a Mrs. Thompson.

"Harpstrings and Bowstrings" was a slender compilation of verses, written while Mrs. Yewdale was in her 'teens, and gathered together in 1914.

CHEER AND JEER FOR N. Y. PARADE OF "NO MORE WAR"

New York, July 29.—Heckled at intervals by soldiers and former service men, several hundred members of the Women's Peace society and other organizations tonight paraded from Union square to Columbus circle in a "no more war" demonstration.

As the various groups formed in Union square there was mingled applause and jeers. One section was composed of Bahaistas, led by Urban Ledoux, the "Mr. Zero" who auctioned the services of idle former service men. Another was formed of followers of Gandhi.

Prince Hopkins, editor of a labor publication, was marshal. Accompanying him under a great white dove were several score young women in white.

'LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND' ON JOB WITH LABOR

Wages Up in Industries Short of Workmen.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Wage tendencies in July have been upward in industries which have revived to the point of experiencing a labor shortage, while in industries which have a slack season and a labor plenitude, wage rates have been downward.

Some members of the United States railroad labor board yesterday dwelt on this in connection with the rail strike. They argued the wage movement outside the carriers shows that the "old law of supply and demand" is doing business at the old stand, and that if there had been no walkout of the shop crafts, wage rates would sooner or later have been readjusted by the condition of the labor market.

The faster all industries hit top speed again, they point out, the quicker will be the improvement in wage earnings, and the worst effect of the strike is to impede full business resumption.

Steel Pay Increased.

The United States bureau of labor statistics in a review of wage changes during the month ended June 15 presents some interesting figures. Iron and steel plants increased their forces 5 per cent during the month, and a labor shortage led to wage increases in several leading establishments. Twelve plants made increases ranging from 5 to 13 per cent, while two plants made cuts. Per capita earnings in the industry increased 1¼ per cent.

The automobile industry increased its forces 7 per cent in June. Four factories gave increases ranging from 4 per cent to 20 per cent.

Car building plants increased their forces 7 per cent. One establishment gave one-fourth its workers a 10 per cent raise. The industry showed an increase of nearly 3½ per cent in per capita earnings.

Men's clothing had an increase of over 8 per cent in workers. One plant increased wages of one-half its employés 66 per cent; another raised wages 10 per cent for one-fourth the workers. Against this one concern reduced wages 10 per cent. Per capita earnings in the industry, however, showed an increase of 11 per cent over May.

In lines like boots and shoes, silk and paper making, where the month's increase in employment was slight, the tendency was towards further wage cuts, ranging from 5 per cent to 25 per cent.

Analysis of Shopmen's Pay.

A study comparing wages of railroad shopmen with those paid in foundries and machine shops in other industries has just been completed by the national industrial conference board, an employers' organization.

As announced last night, the survey indicates that the average hourly earnings of railroad shopmen are 25 per cent above those of men employed in similar lines in other industries, while weekly earnings in the rail shops are one-third greater than in other machine shops and foundries.

The survey covers the wages of 388,560 men employed in 1,388 plants, which is about 73 per cent of all the wage earners in foundries and machine shops as shown by the census of manufacturers in 1919.

Finding of Board.

The board's findings may be summarized as follows:

	Av. hourly rate.	Av. weekly earnings.
Rail shop men after July 1 cut	.70	$33.87
Outside machine shops and foundries	.56	25.06

The conclusions set forth by the Industrial Conference board are that the railroad shop men are in a more advantageous position than they were in 1914, in three ways:

"First, that the hours of employment have been reduced giving them more time for leisure and recreation.

"Second, that their economic status, even under the new wage cuts, is 10 per cent higher than eight years ago.

"Third, that the average weekly wages of railroad shopmen are at least 32 per cent higher than those of men doing the same work but employed by other industries where wages are regulated by the supply and demand for labor."

Union Takes Another View.

The conference board says its figures on outside machine shops were taken as of Jan. 1, and since then there has been a "further wage decline which makes the position of the railroad worker even more favorable."

The union view is that these figures are not an exact portrayal of conditions, that general averages for an industry do not tell the story, and that so far as the wage factor in the strike is concerned the real issue is that of a "living and saving wage."

They have presented masses of figures setting forth that, measured in purchasing power instead of in mere coin, railroad shop wages have never kept pace with the cost of living since the outbreak of the war, and that the buying power of the new wage scale is considerably below that of the wages of 1915. The labor board majority maintains that the buying power of the new wage is above that of 1917.

Hardwood Institute to Move Offices to Chicago

Memphis, Tenn., July 29.—[Special.]—The American Hardwood institute, composed of nearly 150 members of the hardwood industry and numbering among its personnel some of the leading manufacturers of hardwoods in the world, will move its office forces and headquarters to Chicago within sixty days, it was decided at a meeting of the executive committee today.

200 K. OF P. MEN LEAVE HERE FOR COAST SESSIONS

About 200 Knights of Pythias from all sections of Canada and the United States left here yesterday for the Supreme lodge convention in San Francisco, Aug. 8. The Pythians came here to join the special train party under the direction of William C. Edens, vice president of the Central Trust company of Illinois and official press reporter of the convention.

The membership of the Knights of Pythias is said to have increased by nearly 200,000 during the last two years.

RAIL WORKMEN TORTURED; HOME OF ONE BLOWN UP

Violence Reported in Strike Zones.

Pittsburgh Pa. July 29.—[Special.]—Authorities at Uniontown, Pa., are investigating reports that striking miners are mutilating the ears, noses and noses of miners who refuse to quit work.

Shop Foreman's House Dynamited.

Salamanca, N. Y., July 29.—The home of John F. Didas, foreman in the Erie railroad shops here, was dynamited today. No one was injured.

Tar and Feather Trace Widens.

Hagerstown, Md., July 29.—[Special.]—Batt of Winchester, Va., and W. Thompson of Baltimore, track walkers of the Western Maryland railroad, were set upon by a party of masked men near Williamsport, Md., last night, badly beaten, stripped of their clothing, and tarred and feathered. They were brought to the hospital here and today were reported to be in a serious condition.

More Troops for Texas Town.

Austin, Tex., July 29.—The entire battalion of the 142d infantry of the Texas national guard left here tonight on a special Missouri, Kansas & Texas train for Denison to augment the troops doing strike duty there. They were ordered to Denison by Gov. Neff, following a request last night from Col. Charles H. Nimon, commanding the martial law area, for additional troops.

Jail and Fine for Striker.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 29.—John Madden, striker, charged with violating the United States court injunction and assault, was sentenced to sixty days in county jail in federal court here today by Judge M. J. Wade and to pay a fine of $1,000. Two other men were to have hearings before Judge Wade this afternoon.

Guards Use Machine Guns.

Cadiz, O., July 29.—Several hundred shots were fired during an encounter last night and today between mine guards and striking miners at the Penova mine of the United Coal company, near Adena, Jefferson county, according to reports made to the sheriff. No casualties were reported, however. The mine guards used machine guns in returning the fire of the miners.

WORK DECRIES LAXITY AFTER HERRIN CRIMES

Rebukes Illinois Officials in Speech at Pageant.

Failure of Illinois officials to punish the perpetrators of the Herrin massacre drew a rebuke yesterday from a member of President Harding's cabinet. Postmaster General Hubert W. Work, here to represent the national administration at the opening of the Pageant of Progress, delivered the rebuke, referring to the Herrin affair as a "pageant of savagery" that would have "pallored the painted Indian."

The occasion was his address at the formal opening of the pageant on the Municipal pier.

Cabinet Officer's Warning.

In his address Dr. Work coupled his implied rebuke to state officials with a warning to organized labor. He said that if tactics such as were employed at Herrin were persisted in the 100,000,000 persons of the unorganized public, though slow to anger, would rise and frame laws to meet rigorously such situations.

Discussing the reaction from the war, the postmaster general said that "perhaps the call of an evangelist is waited for to lead a crusade for the order of law."

"Our people seem to be living in protest," he continued, "albeit in silence, against the spurious in ethics, the fictitious in morals, and the spurious in law."

Three Essential Activities.

The problems confronting the farmer in the present day came in for discussion from the postmaster general.

"Those who produce our food, those who produce our fuel, and those who contribute their labor to distribute both are the three essential bodies of men in commerce," Dr. Work said. "Every other occupation is contributory to our existence by multiplying industries through which more food for more people may be bought and prepared. But class consciousness has been fostered among them until they have lost their sense of relation to each other and to the public.

"There are six millions of farmers in the United States producing food, and there are three-quarters of a million coal miners to produce the needed fuel.

Dependent on Each Other.

"There are approximately 200,000 railway employés engaged in moving freight. These three, collectively, are essential groups and no one is independent of the other. There must be, under agreement if possible, under compulsion if necessary, or under stress of want if both fail, an equitable relation established between the earnings of these three groups.

"The farmer can no longer pay the freight charges to market his product, they being made prohibitive by the high wages paid trainmen and miners of steam coal, which, in turn, reacts upon them in the higher cost of living and the demand for higher wages."

Surplus of Miners.

Dr. Work then turned his attention to those who produce the nation's fuel.

"The average annual earning of coal miners is said to be $1,500, this being pay for only half time, because we have twice as many miners as are necessary to produce sufficient fuel. If so, it logically follows that the price of coal must be doubled to provide each miner a living wage.

"Nothing costs too much if it is worth it, but the sabotage of time by the idle under pay, and of property intrusted to them, must be added to the cost price of any product and finally paid by the consumer—themselves wage earners, but helpless to redress the industrial crimes committed by a labor monopoly which seeks to protect itself in its place by outlawry.

"I would make an appeal for the relief of those who work with both head and hand from those who work only with their hands and who are being exploited by leaders for their immediate personal gain.

Cites Herrin Outlawry.

"One-half of organized labor is conservative. They are home owners and their children become good citizens. They must very soon break away from those in their own crafts who disregard the rights and necessities of others, who do not approve or practice the creed 'An honest day's work for an honest day's wage,' or who are willing to do murder to kill competition.

"The pageant of savagery that recently stalked abroad by day in this fair state, still unrebuked, would have pallored the painted Indian. Have these people wholly forgotten God?

"I WILL" BRAVES MUTTERING SKIES TO OPEN PAGEANT

First Day Is a Winner Despite Clouds.

Despite the handicap of inclement weather, Chicago's second Pageant of Progress got under way yesterday with its parade of 600 colorful floats, its thousands of marchers and its scores of bands.

Total attendance at the Municipal pier for the day was estimated at 30,000.

The day's festal activities opened at 9 o'clock in the morning, when federal, state and municipal officials were hosts to Dr. Hubert Work, postmaster general of the United States and speaker of the day, at a reception at the Drake hotel.

Mayor Thompson, Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the pageant; Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, and Dr. David Kinley, president of the University of Illinois, were also among the speakers.

Twenty-one Guns.

A twenty-one gun salute at the pier at 9:45 o'clock announced the official opening of the exposition.

Led by the mayor and marshalled by Chief Fitzmorris, te parade, which wended its way through the loop and out to the pier at noon, provided an impressive opening for the exposition. More than 600 brilliant floats presented a picturesque appearance, notwithstanding the drizzle which fell almost continuously up to the hour for the caravans to march.

Thousands of City Toilers.

Several thousand policemen, firemen, federal employés, public health nurses, and city employés marched in the parade. Twenty bands, chief among them the firemen, policemen, and street cleaners, furnished music for the marchers. A small group of "no more war" enthusiasts brought up the rear.

As sections of the parade reached the end of the line of march at Ohio street and Lake Shore drive they passed in review before Dr. John Dill Robertson and Mayor Thompson before dispersing and entering the pier.

At 2 o'clock more than fifty entrants dived from the north side of the pier and started on their three mile swim to the mouth of the Chicago river in the Illinois Athletic club's fourteenth annual swimming marathon for men.

At the same hour Carl Craven's chorus of 500 singers opened its musical program in Congress hall, near the east end of the pier.

At 3:05 the pageant operatic extravaganza, "Push Along," with a cast of singers and dancers and a symphony orchestra, gave its initial performance. The Knights of Pythias, uniformed rank, and Chicago temple, Knights of Khorassan, held sway at 4 o'clock at the west end of the plaza.

Fireworks at Night.

The second performance of "Push Along" started at 8:10 in Congress hall, and at 10 o'clock the Thearle-Duffield fireworks, followed at 10:20 by a high flaming dive by Harold "Stubby" Kruger, concluded the opening day's events.

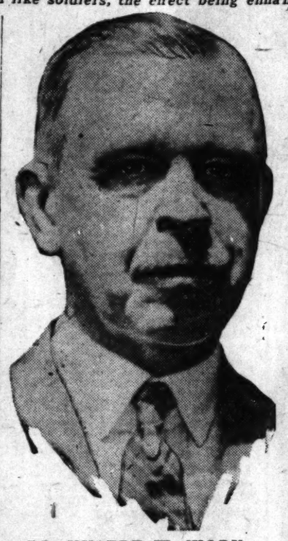
Undismayer by the inclement weather, thousands flocked to the pier through the afternoon and evening.

Music by three bands will be a daily feature of the pageant. The Chicago Marine band will play each day from 10 to 12 a. m., from 2 to 5:30 p. m., and from 7:30 to 11 p. m. at the west end band stand. The fire department band will play at the west end of the plaza from 10 to 12 a. m. and 2 to 5:30 p. m., and the police band will play at the west end plaza daily from 7:30 to 11 p. m.

Organ Recitals Daily.

Organ recitals will be given in Congress hall every day by Hugh Porter when the hall is not otherwise occupied. Deagan's chimes, largest in the world, will be played several times daily at the west end band stand.

Tom Brown's saxophone band of forty players will play from 7:30 to 11 p. m. Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week, and motion pictures will be shown in Congress hall from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. except when the hall is otherwise occupied.



DR. HUBERT W. WORK. Postmaster general, who urged co-operation of three essential production groups—mining, farming, and distributing—in pageant of progress address.

PAGEANT NOTES

The elaborate display of fireworks which was on the program for the opening of the pageant yesterday morning but which was postponed on account of rain, will be given this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Saxophone enthusiasts will be interested in the original instrument of that type on display at the pier. Adolph Sax made this model 75 years ago. The instrument was brought to the United States from Paris by Olaf Pederson, musical director of the Royal Norwegian band, a quarter of a century ago. It was given to Tom Brown of jazz band fame by Dr. H. A. Waggener of Omaha.

To educate and advise motorists, the Chicago Motor club has established eight service booths in the north wing of the pier. The space reserved by the club is decorated in maroon and white, the organization's colors. The visual education section of the display will include a plat reproducing busy and intercrossing Chicago streets. Mannikins will demonstrate how to prevent accidents. The eight booths will give legal, touring, mechanical first aid, accident prevention, home district, legislative, home news and inter-insurance advice.

Through the permission of the federal government the original Haynes automobile, said to be America's first car, has been brought from the Smithsonian institute at Washington and placed on exhibit at the pier. This historical relic is a permanent exhibit at the national museum. Permission to bring it to the pageant was obtained only after strenuous efforts on the part of Congressman Fred S. Burnell of Indiana.

Repelling all invaders with a scrub brush, "Ma." Streeter yesterday stood by in the good ship Vamoose, preparing to set up a "hot dog" stand for the benefit of pageant goers. "Ma" declares that she expects to get all the gate receipts from the exposition, on the ground that the box office is located on the "Deestrict of Lake Michigan," her heritage from "Cap'n" George Wellington Streeter.

The evolution of fire fighting equipment was portrayed in yesterday's parade by the old hand "pumper" of 1852, contrasted with the 1922 combination motor pumper and hook and ladder truck. The contrast between old and new means of transportation for police prisoners was strikingly shown by the horse drawn patrol of the '50s and the modern motor "wagon."

Several squads of Chief Fitzmorris' newest "rookies" are getting their first taste of walking beat at the exposition.

U. S. WITHHOLDS DECISION AS TO KITCHENER FILM

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The treasury department, officials said today, still has under advisement an appeal made to the state department early in the year by the British embassy against admission to this country of the film "How Kitchener Was Betrayed." The appeal also was presented by the embassy to Will H. Hays, head of the film interests, and it was assumed Mr. Hays had "used his good offices" in compliance.

Held to Be "Ridiculous."

New York, July 29.—The motion picture "How Kitchener Was Betrayed," was barred from England on the ground that it was a ridiculous misrepresentation of the manner in which Earl Kitchener met his death on the war ship Hampshire in the North sea in June, 1916.

The picture portrays the sinking of the Hampshire with "K. of K." on board as a result of a betrayal of Kitchener by a young officer on his staff. In the film, this officer confides to a feminine spy that Kitchener is to make the secret trip to Russia on the war ship, and she delivers that information to the German war office.

Banned in Britain, the film was taken to France and there made a hit, according to the distributor.

Reds Sentence 4 Nobel Oil Employes to Death

MOSCOW, July 29.—Four employés of the Nobel Oil company, defendants in a trial for economic treason, have been sentenced to death by the revolutionary tribunal, Johan Harmsen, a Dutch subject in charge of the Nobel company's Russian interests, was accused of counter revolutionary activities and also of sending information abroad detrimental to the soviet government.

NORTHERN ARMY MOVES ON FOES OF SUN YAT-SEN

CANTON, China, July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Heavy reinforcements for the army of Sun Yat-Sen, deposed president of South China, coming down out of the north, launched an attack in force on Chen Ching-Meng's lines at Shiuchow, about 130 miles north of here, today. Another wing of Sun's army is attempting to take Chen's troops in the rear twenty miles farther south.

A total of 25,000 troops are said to be marching under Sun's banner in the double attack launched at Chen's lines near Shiuchow, and Chen has 20,000 with which to meet the onslaught there.

Beside the frontal attack at Shiuchow, Sun's generals have rushed one division southward in the hope that they can cut Chen's line of communication with Canton about 100 miles north of the latter city.

NO 3 MILE RULE ON PIER, U. S. MEN FIND; TAKE BOOZE

City Wharf Is Shelter for Hard Drinks.

Injunction proceedings to close the Municipal pier roof garden, following a raid Friday night by prohibition agents and United States marshals, in which three waiters were arrested, and "soft" drinks, said to have contained 7.3 per cent of alcohol, were seized, may be instituted, according to a statement made yesterday by Special Attorney C. W. Middlekauf.

"If conditions warrant it," Attorney Middlekauf said yesterday, "I will go before a federal judge and seek an injunction against the roof garden."

Three Waiters Held.

Three waiters, Willie Pleas, 3653 Grand boulevard; Vernon Duncan, 4047 Calumet avenue, and Charles Randall, 4849 Calumet avenue, were arrested in the raid on "John Doe" warrants issued by United States Commissioner James R. Glass.

Federal authorities are searching for James McGrath, concessionaire at the pier and part owner of the Chicago Concession and Catering company, to serve a "John Doe" warrant on him.

The prohibition agents are ready to testify that liquor was served to them in the restaurant and that waiters promised "some of the real stuff" as a special attraction during the Pageant of Progress which opened yesterday at the pier.

Plenty of Alcohol.

Two of the exhibits served them, according to the raiders, as Jamaica ginger and beer contained an alcohol content of 7.3 per cent and 5.25 per cent when submitted to chemical analysis.

The prohibition enforcement office had been preparing for the raid for the last two weeks. Anticipating "special attractions" during the pageant, they visited the garden on July 13, again on July 22, and again Friday night. Each time, they charge, they received intoxicants without the least trouble.

FRENCH ALLEGE 'YANKEE PLOT IN NAVAL LIMITS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 28.—The alleged American conception of liberty on the seas is described in a leading article in La Liberte tonight.

"For the United States liberty on the seas means to establish a limitation on capital ships of 35,000 tons to allow American cruisers to cross the Panama canal. It also means, as the American press is urging, that France pay its war debt to America with Martinique and Guadeloupe, the bridge heads of the canal.

"What do we see today instead of liberty on the seas? Two powers, one Europe and the other America, whose fleets are so strong they can lay down the law to the entire world. It is not liberty any more. It is division of naval supremacy."

The article quotes Admiral Ballard as speaking in London recently:

"France pretends to be the mistress of the Mediterranean. England can never permit that because it would mean the empire is cut in half."

The article in La Liberte is typical of many such, strongly indicating that naval limitation will never be ratified by France in its present form.

Colored Americans Own 113 Papers, 14 Magazines

Washington, D. C., July 29.—There are 113 newspapers and fourteen magazines in the United States owned and directed by colored persons, department of labor announced today. Nearly 1300 employes, of which sixty-one are white workers, manage the publications, which include ninety-six secular, twenty-three religious and eight fraternal, published weekly, monthly and daily.

Noted Swimmer Dies

DESPITE four blood transfusions from his father, William Schmedtgen, noted Wilmette artist and illustrator, William Schmedtgen Jr., 18 year old champion swimmer, died yesterday at the Evanston hospital.

The boy would have been a sophomore at the University of Illinois this fall, having gone there from New Trier High school. For more than a year he held the record in the 220 and the 440 yard swim for his class and was called by Coach Tom Robinson of Northwestern university the greatest of the middle distance men.

It was his love for the water that brought about the weakened condition which resulted in his death, according to the father.

"I taught him to swim at the age of 4," the artist said. "For several years he had great fear of the water. Suddenly he developed a liking for it and was continually in it. His constant diving and swimming caused the anemic state."

Young Schmedtgen was also a crack shot with the rifle, learning to handle the weapon when still a boy, the father said. For some time he swam wearing the colors of the Illinois Athletic club. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

YANKEE CONSUL ESCAPES BANDITS BADLY WOUNDED

SAGUA LA GRANDE, Cuba, July 29.—Eugene Jova, acting American consular agent, captured by bandits and held for $20,000 ransom, escaped yesterday, but was badly wounded as he made his break for liberty. There were five dagger wounds in the young man's body when found today in a ranch house in which he had sought shelter, but he was able to give the authorities information which was expected to lead to the capture of the bandits.

Ex-Cannibal Chieftain Escapes Death; Jailed

David Johmr Allen Zamboss Schwalscheimer, ex-cannibal chieftain and now a missionary, came to Chicago two months ago to find a job. He didn't. Friday night he walked to Joliet. Saturday morning he went to sleep on the railway track. A train came along and—

It stopped in time. D. J. H. A. Z. Schwalscheimer is now in jail, waiting trial for vagrancy.

ATTORNEY SUES OWNER OF HOTEL; EJECTED, HE SAYS

Put Out for Receiving Couple, His Charge.

Evicted from the Jonquil hotel by employés of the hostelry, M. Edward Simmons, well-known attorney, yesterday filed suit for $25,000 damages against William J. Strohm, owner of the building. He alleges that as a result of the experience he "has become greatly agitated, nervous, low spirited, and ill, and has been unable to follow his profession."

According to the declaration in the suit, filed yesterday by Attorney Otto Baer, Simmons on July 3 was entertaining James R. Phillips, another attorney, and Mrs. Phillips in his rooms in the hotel.

Says He Caused Scene.

Suddenly Strohm is said to have appeared in the doorway.

"What are you doing with that woman in here?" are the words attributed to Strohm. "Don't you know that we don't allow women in these rooms?"

"I don't care whose wife she is, or where or who she lives with," Strohm is said to have continued in answer to protestations by Simmons that Mrs. Phillips was accompanied by her husband. "If you don't get her out I'll have you all arrested. I've heard stories like yours before."

Humiliated, Simmons Avers.

Forced to precede Strohm into the crowded lobby and forcibly evicted from the hotel, Simmons declares that he "suffered greatly from humiliation, extreme chagrin, abasement, and shame," not to speak of the inconvenience of seeking lodging with friends at a late hour of the night.

FANNY WARD FACES CRISIS NEXT TUESDAY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 29.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—Fanny Ward, who broke her arm when she fell down the stairs at the Grand hotel in Pourville, France, on Monday and returned to London on Tuesday before consulting a surgeon, has suffered a relapse. Sir Alfred Fripp, the king's personal doctor, asserts the crisis will not have passed until next Tuesday.

The doctor estimates that three pints of blood is congested and stagnated in Fanny's arm, and her shoulder is swollen to an enormous size. He fears leakage of the kidneys might set in, which might be a fatal complication.

The actress, whose secret of perennial youth has excited the envy and jealousy of women on both sides of the Atlantic, has lost the fresh bloom from her cheeks, and her golden hair lacks the usual luster as she lies propped up by pillows in a huge Du Barry bed, clad in flimsy lace and a light robe.

Germany Lacks Vegetables, Urged to Eat Nettles

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 29.—The dollar here is showing no sign of checking its merry upward way, while west-Germany reports the failure of the wheat harvest, and the authorities are advising the people to eat nettles in lieu of vegetables, of which the cost is prohibitive.

SPURNED, SLAYS WOMAN AND BABE AND TRIES TO DIE

Second Child Is Shot by Crazed Suitor.

Mrs. Elizabeth Witchell, 35 years old, 1095 North Clark street, and her 4 year old daughter, Dotty, were shot and killed yesterday, another daughter, Margaret, 6 years old, was wounded, and Jack Skloff, 149 West Oak street, who is alleged to have done the shooting, may die of self-inflicted wounds.

The double murder and attempted suicide occured in Skloff's apartment after he had telephoned Mrs. Witchell that he wanted to see her. He is said to have flown into a jealous rage over her failure to respond to his advances.

Wounded Child Flees.

Margaret, after being shot through the right arm, fled to the Henrotin hospital. Dr. C. W. Barrett notified Chicago avenue police, and Lieut. Charles Gratton with a squad hurried to the scene of the shooting. They found the body of Dotty in the hallway. Mrs. Witchell's body lay partly under a bed, and nearby lay Skloff with two bullets through his head. He was taken to the Henrotin hospital and later removed to the Bridewell hospital.

Andrew J. Witchell, husband of the slain woman, is chief engineer of the De Jonghe hotel, 12 East Monroe street. According to Miss Mathilde Maher, a close friend of Mrs. Witchell, Skloff became infatuated with Mrs. Witchell and sought to come between her and her husband. He was repulsed time after time, shed eclared, but continued his advances.

"Mrs. Witchell and her husband were happily married," she said. "When Skloff came into her life I knew that some dreadful thing would happen. He wouldn't leave her alone."

Margaret told the police that Skloff opened the door when they arrived at his apartment.

Tries to Save Her Babies.

"He said to mother, 'So you're here, are you? I feel like killing off all of your family. I'm going to blow your head off.' Then mother told Dotty and me to get behind her and he started to shoot. Mother fell on the floor and so did Dotty. I was hit in the arm and ran for help."

Police were told that Skloff had visited Mrs. Witchell on several occasions and pleaded with her to go away with him. It was also said that Mrs. Witchell had gone to Skloff's apartment several times, made fearful by his insistence and alleged threats.

When Skloff was placed on the operating table at the hospital, Margaret, whose wound had just been dressed, cried, "That's the man. He shot mamma and sister. He didn't care when she begged him not to hurt any of us."

Moans of His Mad Love.

Skloff was semi-conscious at intervals. He moaned incoherently of love and fate and revenge, but police and hospital authorities could detect no lucid trend in his ramblings that would throw additional light on the case.

Police were told that Skloff's right name was Casper Postoni, and that he was a bartender at West Oak and North Franklin streets.

At the Bridewell hospital last night it was declared that Skloff was unconscious and probably would survive only a few hours. The man constantly muttered in his delirium of his love for the woman he had slain.

TRAGEDY VICTIMS

DOTTY WITCHELL (LEFT), MRS. ELIZABETH WITCHELL, MARGARET WITCHELL.

These are the victims of the insane love of Jack Skloff. Yesterday he summoned the woman, with whom he was infatuated, to his room at 149 West Oak street. There he shot her to death, killed her daughter Dotty, and wounded Margaret. Then he turned the gun on himself and probably will die.

LONG DELAYED WALSKA DIVORCE DECREE IS FILED

(Copyright: 1922: By the New York Herald.)

PARIS, July 29.—The long looked for announcement that a decree of divorce for Mme. Ganna Walska from Alexander Smith Cochran had become effective was made today when the official entries were filed in the Paris courts. Although applying parties appeared before a judge and the decree virtually was filed a month ago, the delay in filing judgment under the French law has been enforced to prevent the defendants later claiming they had not the proper opportunity for presenting their cases.

The court's decision dates back to May 29. Since then Mme. Walska has been entertaining lavishly at the mansion in the rue de Lubeck, presented to her by Mr. Cochran, and frequently has been seen on the streets with Harold F. McCormick. Their friends here are unable to confirm the report that they are to marry.

Mathilde Off to Europe.

New York, July 29.—[United Press.]—Mathilde McCormick sailed today on the journey that rumor declares will end in a "lovers' meeting" with Max Oser, recently a riding academy proprietor of Zurich.

At the last moment, when the White Star liner Majestic shrilly signaled its impending departure, little Miss McCormick relented in her self-imposed seclusion and received newspapermen.

"I'm going to follow out my plans," she said enigmatically, "but I'm not going to tell you what they are. I appreciate your position, but I'm just not going to tell you anything about it."

Cyrus McCormick also sailed on the Majestic.

OBENCHAIN JURY STALLED; 7 TO 5 FOR HER, REPORT

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—[Special.]—The seven women and five men comprising the jury in the trial of Madelynn Obenchain, charged with the murder of her sweetheart, J. Belton Kennedy, are hopelessly deadlocked—nine to three for acquittal.

Judge John W. Shenk called them in this evening and asked if there was any prospect for a verdict.

"I'm afraid not, your honor," M. E. Paddock, the foreman, said. "I don't believe there's a probability of our agreeing at all."

Madelynn, who had been summoned hurriedly and who had confidently expected to hear an acquittal verdict, seemed rather annoyed at the anticlimax and spent some time talking to her attorneys and fanning herself.

The jury had been out twenty-five hours at this time. And Judge Shenk indicated they might be out twenty-five hours more if they did not come to some agreement.

Wife Draws Line on Beating with Trombone

A playful "beating up" now and then was all right, Mrs. Michael Konkalewski, 3024 Throop street, told Judge Asa G. Adams, in the court of domestic relations yesterday. But having a slide trombone, that cost two weeks' wages, broken over her back, was going too far. The judge agreed with her. Ninety days in the house of correction for Mike.

DOCTOR SHOT BY MOTORCYCLE COP DURING QUARREL

Policeman Protested Way Medico Drove.

Following an altercation at Ridge and Morse avenues over an alleged charge of speeding, Dr. Carl R. Kuderling, 53 years old, 810 Tower court, was shot in the right side last night by Motorcycle Policeman Rhys W. Fuidge of the Ridge Park district.

According to the story as it was received by the Rogers Park police, a 3 year old girl, Mera Tuller, 6972 Ridge avenue, had been struck by a north bound machine driven by Arthur R. Rapp, 1531 Lincoln avenue, Evanston.

Policeman Nearly Hit.

Policeman Fuidge picked the little girl up and started across the street to Rapp's machine, which had stopped. Dr. Kuderling, south bound, nearly struck the policeman and his burden.

He called on Kuderling to stop; then mounted the running board. An argument developed in which Dr. Kuderling is charged by Policeman Fuidge with having attempted to push him from the running board.

Doctor Hit in Side.

Fuidge drew his revolver and fired four shots. One of the bullets entered the physician's right side. He was taken to St. Francis' hospital and later to the Rogers Park station, where he was booked.

Dr. Kuderling denied that he had been speeding or that he had attempted to strike Fuidge; he claimed the argument was the result of abusive language used by the policeman.

The Tuller girl received but minor bruises; Rapp wasn't held.

Theater Chief Found with Skull Fractured

James T. McCarthy, 3152 North Lincoln street, superintendent of the Lincoln theater, was found unconscious on the sidewalk at State and Lake streets last night. He was hurried to the Iroquois hospital by a police ambulance, where it was discovered he had a fractured skull.

He was unable to explain what had happened to him.

Mexico Learns of Plot of Chief Rebels to Unite

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, July 29.—The government secret service has information that Felix Diaz and Senor Murgia have signed a contract to poll their interests to overthrow the prosent government. Rebel forces under Gen. Palma were defeated yesterday by federal troops under Maj. Espejel at Arroyo de Plata, Vera Cruz. The rebels left numerous dead.

Peddler Robbed of $450 by Poseurs as Police

Purchasing vegetables at 71st and State streets yesterday, S. Kratke, a peddler living at 5006 Calumet avenue, was accosted by three men in an automobile, who told him they had a warrant for his arrest.

Forcing him into their car, the men drove him to 80th street and Calumet avenue. After robbing him of $450, they threw him out of the automobile.

GOV. ALLEN HERE; SAYS KANSAS IS HANDLING STRIKE

Fresh from his tilt with his friend, William Allen White, in which White's sign supporting the striking railroad shopmen was the point of contention, Gov. Henry Allen of Kansas was in Chicago yesterday, expressing confidence in his industrial court plan as a means for dealing satisfactorily with the rail walkout in his state.

"With our industrial court, now well established, we anticipate little trouble with striking railroad employes," he declared. "We believe we have it within our power to settle the disputes as they affect Kansas.

"In our state we have suffered little from the railroad strike. When I left Kansas a few days ago every railroad running through the state was maintaining its schedule."

Friday night Gov. Allen, speaking at Monmouth, referred to White as his dearest friend, but said that White's attitude in putting the sympathy card in the window of his newspaper office was "dangerous," on account of his position.

South Carolina Boy Dead in German Airship Crash

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, July 29.—A series of aeroplane accidents in Germany, culminating yesterday in a crash of a passenger plane on the Berlin-Hamburg route, which resulted in the death of a young American, Ralph S. Murrill of Charlotte, S. C., two other passengers and the pilot, caused the government to decide today to abolish the entire aeroplane post and passenger service beginning next week. The sole route left open will be the Koenigsburg-Moscow route, which does not take passengers.

How We Modernize Pianos

Used pianos are sent to our four special shops where men skilled in this type of work renew them. Here the pianos are carefully inspected. Each part receives attention. Case designs are changed to the new styles. Cumbersome heavy instruments assume a dainty charming appearance. The pianos are restrung. Hammers are refelted; the actions completely overhauled. Worn parts are replaced or repaired. The pianos are then tuned. A new finish is applied. All this is done to give the purchaser an instrument in which to take pride. In your home no one except a skilled judge could tell a piano so treated from new.

Come Early

We cannot urge this too strongly. An early visit means the widest selection. You can shop more leisurely. The better bargains are yours to select from. The very piano you want may be marked "sold" if you come late. Many people have just waited for this sale.

All styles of pianos are included in this offering. You have a choice of beautiful grands, uprights, and players. Remember that a high grade used piano is better than many new ones.

If you cannot come, send in the coupon above. Mark on the list the piano you want. But act now.

Easy to Buy Now!

You can have 30 months to pay for the piano you like. Pay only a small sum down and the piano will be delivered to your home. You may begin at once to enjoy your purchase. You play as you pay. The monthly payments are so small you will hardly miss them. Take advantage of this offer.

U. S. PUTS COAL CONTROL UP TO VARIOUS STATES

Government to Act in Interstate Problems.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—Each of the states will be expected to check profiteering and regulate coal distribution within its own confines without the assistance of the federal government, Secretary of Commerce Hoover announced today in a statement of the plans of the national coal distribution committee.

"Each state," Mr. Hoover said, "has been asked to make such rules and regulations as it may see fit to control speculation and distribution within the boundaries of the state. It has been suggested that the coöperation of their state wholesale and retail coal dealers' associations should be secured. The federal government has no authority and can exert none in this matter beyond moral pressure."

Governors Hear of Plan.

Mr. Hoover's coal distribution plan has been communicated to the governors. Under the provisions of this plan the federal government will limit its activities in coal distribution entirely to interstate questions. Henry B. Spencer, according to Mr. Hoover, has been appointed fuel distributor, not fuel administrator, because the federal distribution is concerned with coal distribution between the different states, not with coal administration in the sense of the war organization.

The control of coal distribution to individual consumers within the state boundaries is entirely in the hands of state authorities except for railway coal.

The methods of handling coal for railways responsible to the interstate commerce commission will be determined directly from Washington in maintaining interstate commerce.

States Divided Into Groups.

Distribution problems vary in different groups of states; that is in New England, middle Atlantic, southern, middle west, northern lake states, intermountain, and Pacific states. The last two groups are able to look after themselves and are not now embraced in active administration.

Each state outside the latter groups has been requested to canvass its situation as to stocks and requirements in order of the priority in different classes—public utilities, public institutions, households, and industrial coal.

Each state that must import coal from other states has been asked to create a central state agency or committee for the purchase or guarantee of purchases of coal that may be imported into the states from other states or from abroad, all coal to be consigned to an agency designated by the state.

Prevents Loss and Litigation.

By this arrangement a great deal more mobility is given the state authorities in shifting coal to meet its local emergencies. Furthermore this arrangement will remedy the financial impossibility of asking coal producers to ship to strange consumers whose reliability must be established. The repudiation of coal during the last strike caused great losses and litigation.

The federal fuel distributor will place these state central purchasing agencies or committees in contact with the coal producers in states of coal surplus and will undertake to see that coal is sold to the central purchasing agencies at a fair price. The state purchasing agencies will indicate the destinations within the states to which coal is to be shipped.

LABOR RULES IN ILLINOIS.

Illinois laws give union miners such an airtight monopoly of labor that, even if martial law were declared, the governor could not legally operate pit mines, so the Illinois Coal Operators' association declared yesterday in a letter to the Rockford chamber of commerce. The letter, which was signed by Dr. F. C. Honnold, secretary of the association, was in response to a message from the Rockford chamber urging that the governor declare martial law and proceed to operate the mines, unless the miners and owners settle their differences without further delay.

"Illinois operators," Dr. Honnold said in his letter, "have never stood on technicalities and do not now. It is simply a case of being entirely unable to even secure conferences, much less get our men back to work."

ACCUSED OF ATTACKING GIRL.

ATTACKS PRESS AS "SUBSIDIZED" BY RESERVE BANK

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Senator Heflin [Ala.], Democrat, resuming today in the senate his attack on the federal reserve board and its governor, W. P. G. Harding, turned his fire on publicity of the board and the scant attention which he said was given his speeches criticizing the board by what he described as the "subsidized press."

The Alabama senator mentioned specifically H. Parker Willis, whom he identified as an editor of the New York Journal of Commerce and who, he declared, had been on the pay roll of the federal reserve board, first as secretary and later as director of research.

"When I mentioned the deflation policy of the reserve board today the correspondents of the great metropolitan dailies left the gallery, flushed like a covey of birds," he said. "I have asked why this has happened in the past, and I learned that it was so they could say that they did not hear me talk about deflation."

Strike of Shopmen Costs New Haven Road $365,000

New Haven, Conn., July 29.—The exact cost of the strike to the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad in furnishing protection to its employés and in combatting the activities of strikers has been $365,000 since the shopmen walked out July 1, according to C. M. Sheaf Jr., counsel for the New Haven road. He made the statement in the course of a hearing at the United States district court here.

Illinois Central Moves Part of Shop to Alabama

Jackson, Tenn., July 29.—Thirty per cent of the shop equipment of the Illinois Central railroad here was being removed to Halleyville, Ala., under instructions of the superintendent of motive power of the road in Chicago. It was estimated that the transfer will result in a cut of approximately $15,000 monthly in the road's payroll.

17TH COAL STRIKE WEEK FOR SMALL OUTPUT INCREASE

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Returns on coal output in the seventeenth week of the strike, July 24-29, give the first test of the response to the invitation to reopen mines. There has been a slight recovery as compared with the sixteenth week, according to the weekly report of the geological survey. Production is running at the rate of 3,900,000 tons against 3,700,000 tons last week.

The increase is due partly to more men at work in Pennsylvania, partly to improved car supply in southern West Virginia, partly to heavy shipments from Alabama and the far west. Production of anthracite remains practically zero.

Loadings on Monday, July 24, were 13,083 cars. This is 417 cars above the preceding Monday, but 3,664 cars below the last Monday before the shopmen's strike. On Tuesday and Wednesday loadings declined, but on Thursday a slight recovery was noted.

LANDLADIES WIN U. OF M. STRIKE; LOSE ARBITERS

Ann Arbor, Mich., July 29.—Notice of a strike was served on the University of Michigan today by landladies who room students. The landladies stated that in view of the present walkout of labor over the country, they believed that this was the proper time to stand up for their rights.

The rights involved were those arising from a belief on the part of the rooming house keepers that they should run their own homes. The rooming houses heretofore have been operated under the supervision of the university authorities.

Lewis Confident of Joint Coal Conference in Few Days

Philadelphia, Pa., July 29.—After a long conference here today participated in by the international officers of the United Mine Workers and the district presidents of the union having jurisdiction over western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the statement was repeated that the leaders of the striking soft coal miners had every reason to believe that an interstate wage conference would soon be arranged.

John L. Lewis, international president, said that a gratifying number of coal operators have shown a willingness to enter a joint wage conference and he had every reason to believe that a substantial basic wage agreement was not far off.

Mr. Lewis said the strike situation in the central competitive fields was thoroughly reviewed and that the number of operators willing to go into a four state conference and the tonnage they represent were considered.

Farrington Issues Statement.

Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners, after a meeting gave out the following statement:

"We are going back to Illinois to do everything we can to persuade the Illinois operators to attend an interstate wage scale joint conference when such a conference is called by President Lewis. We are anxious to work in strict harmony with the officers of the international union in this very important matter."

Mr. Lewis and Philip Murray, international vice president, expected to remain here over Sunday. All the other officers left for their respective headquarters.

Railroad Asks 20 Per Cent of Coal.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 29.—Pittsburgh coal operators announced tonight that they had been notified by the Pennsylvania railroad that, beginning July 31, the road will request virtually 20 per cent of the output of bituminous mines operating throughout its central region. Many more miners have returned to work, operators reported tonight.

Madison, Wis., July 29.—The Wisconsin state fuel committee today issued its first priority order, directing that coal be shipped to the Wisconsin Power, Light and Heat company at Baraboo and Berlin.

That a complete tieup of the service between Sault Ste. Marie and Duluth will come at the end of sixty days unless a new supply of coal is obtained is the prediction of officials of the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic railroad at Marquette. Nine passenger trains have been annulled owing to the coal situation. The railroad shopmen's strike has not affected the service, it is declared.

Indiana Committee Named.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 29.—Designation of the public service commission as a state coal emergency committee was announced today by Gov. McCray. The committee will have charge of the distribution of coal sent to Indiana by the federal government and of coal mined in the state. Warning against excessive prices for coal was sounded by the governor.

Ohio Operators Hold Back.

Columbus, O., July 29.—Reaffirming it would not enter a four state coal conference, the Southern Ohio Coal exchange today asked Gov. Davis to call a conference of operators and miners to discuss supplying coal to needy communities and to place the industries on a "sounder basis."

Two small mines are to resume at once to supply needs of Ohio institutions, it was announced today. These will be with the sanction of Secretary Savage of the mine workers and of the mine operators.

More Pennsylvania Workers.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 29.—Working forces in the mines increased today, according to the employing companies.

Accuse Miner of Threat to Imitate Herrin Crime

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—"Herrin [the mine massacre] ought to have been enough to show you that you can't load coal in this district," striking coal miners near O'Fallon, Ill., are alleged to have told men employed by the owner of a pile of slack coal, which had been sold to the city of St. Louis for operating the local water works. The miners are said to have forced the men to stop loading the coal.

Coal Shortage Becoming Serious at Racine, Wis.

Racine, Wis., July 29.—[Special.]—A coal famine threatens Racine, officials of the Wisconsin Gas and Electric company and other fuel distributors warned today. Coal supplies are dwindling away. Shortage of material for coke manufacture is particularly acute, it was pointed out. Demands of other cities have decreased shipments to such an extent that Racine will be in real danger next winter unless immediate resumption of mining permits

GEORGE ROBBINS AND DIVORCEE IN COAST WEDDING

Former Armour Chief Is Married Again.

Prophecies of their many Chicago friends materialized yesterday when it became known that George B. Robbins, formerly a vice president of Armour & Co., and Mrs. Grace Batchelder Jones were married in San Francisco on July 22. Mr. Robbins is 62 years old, his bride much younger.

GEORGE B. ROBBINS.

Dispatches from San Francisco yesterday stated the couple departed immediately following the wedding for an extended visit to southern California. It is expected they will eventually be at home at 1001 California street, San Francisco.

Both Are Divorced.

Gossip has linked the names of Mr. Robbins and Mrs. Jones since a time shortly prior to the divorce of each. When Mrs. Lillian E. Robbins, Mr. Robbins' former wife, obtained a divorce on Jan. 12, 1922, she charged desertion. It was hinted, however, that a growing friendship between Robbins and Mrs. Jones, at that time the wife of Harold R. Jones, a resident of Hyde Park, had played a part in their marital differences.

At the time of the divorce Mr. Robbins was living at the University club, San Francisco. Mrs. Jones was also living in San Francisco at the Fairmont hotel, directly across the street from the club. Neither would admit their friendship had anything to do with Mrs. Robbins' action. Mrs. Jones also secured a divorce in a short time.

Quits Armour Work Here.

A month after the separation of Mr. Robbins and his first wife became public in September, 1920, Mr. Robbins resigned as a vice president of Armour & Co., which position he had held for thirty-five years, and became head of the Sutter Irrigation project in California, which is controlled by the packing company.

The former Mrs. Robbins was, before her marriage to Mr. Robbins in 1907, Mrs. Lillian E. Wylde of Hinsdale. She has spent the greater part of her time following the divorce at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Conroy, at 4 East 12th street, New York City.

Some months ago public attention was drawn to a hotly contested court battle between Cutler H. Robbins, Mr. Robbins' son, and his former wife over the custody of their baby son, George B. Robbins II.

'PETTING PARTIES' WIN DECREE FOR G. H. JOHNSTONE

Backstairs gossip which linked the names of Mrs. Florence Johnstone and "Buster" Eckman in "petting" parties caused Judge George F. Rush to grant George H. Johnstone, 12133 Harvard avenue, Pullman, a divorce yesterday.

The couple were married on July 1, 1905, and separted in November, 1921, when Johnstone says he forced Mrs. Johnstone to confess indiscretions. The custody of two children, Robert and Alice Johnstone, 16 years and 14 years old, respectively, was awarded to Johnstone.

Susan Long, a housemaid employed by Johnstone, said:

"I saw Mrs. Johnstone and 'Buster' sitting on a couch with their arms around each other. Another time they were in a big chair and Mrs. Johnstone was sitting in 'Buster's' lap. When 'Buster' came to the house on weekends, when Mr. Johnstone was absent, Mrs. Johnstone would run to the door and throw her arms around his neck and kiss him."

WOMEN OF LAKE FOREST "DRESS" MODEL TABLES

Housekeepers learned yesterday from Lake Forest hostesses how to achieve artistic effects for the table with china, glass, and flowers. Tables decorated with prize blossoms from Lake Forest estates and with bits of ancient lace and priceless china from north shore houses were on display at the Gorton school for the midsummer flower show held by the Lake Forest Garden club.

Ancient red Bohemian glass and the dark red blossoms of salpiglossis made the setting for Mrs. Samuel T. Chase's table. Mrs. Charles C. King chose a creamy lace cloth, yellow Sealence china, and summer flowers of yellow, pink, and lavender for her table.

Mrs. King received first award for the best collection of cut flowers, and the two prizes offered by Mrs. George D. McLaughlin and Mrs. George A. McKinlock for perennials and annuals were won by Mrs. E. L. Ryerson and Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed.

FITZMORRIS BANS MOVIE PICTURES OF KLAN RITES

Ald. Robert R. Jackson's ordinance, passed a month ago, banning public initiations and exhibitions of the Ku Klux Klan in Chicago, was called into play for the first time yesterday when Chief Fitzmorris, acting on the theory that if such exhibitions are unlawful pictures of the Klan rites are also banned by implication under the ordinance, directed that certain Klan scenes shown in the "Select Weekly" of the Selznick Feature Film company be censored. The censor board was split four to three on the question, the chief ruling with the minority.

CLERKS WIFE LOST SINCE JULY 1.

Mrs. Charlotte Johnson, 161 North Carpenter street, went on her daily marketing trip July 11. She hasn't been seen since by her husband, Charles Johnson. The wife had recently undergone three serious operations, he said, and he feared she was suffering from loss of memory.

"Whom God Hath..."

CHRISTOPH BRUCK. MRS. CHRISTOPH BRUCK.

Christoph Bruck and his wife, Anna, K., each 80 years old, 4851 Laflin avenue, who wished to die together, were buried yesterday following funeral services from St. Augustine church at 10 o'clock.

They had been married 55 years. Mrs. Bruck died Tuesday. Mr. Bruck died Thursday evening, and the wife's funeral was postponed until yesterday to arrange for combined services.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruck lived in Chicago for more than forty years. They are survived by five children, fifteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

CHICAGO LAWYER HAS LETTERS IN WHITNEY CASE

What to Do with Thirty-three Billets Doux?

at the university to a hotel, where the dancer awaited him in a suite which quartered also her mother, grandfather, and her lawyer.

The two persons most vitally concerned are said to have discussed the matter, while their elders remained behind the closed door of an adjoining room, which was not thick enough, however, to silence the sound of Evan's sobs.

When, thereupon, their privacy was invaded, the face of "Sonny" Whitney is declared likewise to have borne the traces of recent tears; and, according to one of Miss Fontaine's close advisers, he promised to make complete amends.

Wedding Set.

The wedding, which would have linked the fortunes of the beautiful Oriental dancer to one of the most prominent families in the United States, was set for the following Sunday in New York. There was a final embrace of the two impending principals, and the conference closed.

Sunday found everything ready for the nuptials, except the alleged prospective bridegroom. Darkness closed a day of anxious waiting. Mr. Whipp next day boarded a train for New Haven and hailed young Whitney from the Yale gymnasium, after which their conversation is quoted as follows:

"You didn't come to New York yesterday," said Mr. Whipp. "Miss Fontaine was greatly disappointed."

"Was she?" replied Mr. Whitney. "I'm awfully sorry, but the fact is—well, I don't think I can go through with it at all."

Mr. Whipp expressed surprise.

Dad Barred Wedding.

"No," Mr. Whitney continued; "I've talked to father, and he won't let me. Besides, how can I know the case is as serious as you describe?"

Mr. Whipp responded that all necessary assurances could be given.

"Well," Mr. Whitney is said to have declared, "that doesn't change matters. I may have been indiscreet, but I can accept no responsibility—no legal obligation. The incident is closed."

"Miss Fontaine has certain letters," remarked Mr. Whipp, "on which to base an action for breach of promise. I am afraid we will have to bring you into court."

"That," said Mr. Whitney, in conclusion, "is up to you and father!"

The suggestion on the part of Mr. Whipp that the letters might have an important bearing on the ultimate disposition of Miss Fontaine's claim was the immediate forerunner, according to the dancer's friends, of the bizarre incidents which might have deprived her of their possession.

Trunks Searched.

Prior to her trip to Chicago and her original consultation with Mr. Whipp, Miss Fontaine had become involved in a financial misunderstanding with the Pennsylvania hotel, the management of which had placed her baggage in storage. When, after a number of months, she regained possession of her trunks, it is alleged that they had been searched.

While the Whitney letters were not there, the marriage license of Miss Fontaine and Sterling L. Adair, her first husband (who recently was found shot to death in a girl stenographer's room) was removed, and it was in that manner that the Fontaines charge the Whitney interests became aware of Adair's existence.

Whipp's Bag Raided.

In the Pennsylvania hotel, Mr. Whipp, it is understood, suffered a similar experience. His grip, containing evidence which he had taken to New York to place before Abe Levy, a noted criminal lawyer, whom he intended to enlist as associate counsel, was opened while it reposed in the checkroom. Previously, the purported Whitney letters had numbered thirty-five, but the grip had contained two original billets doux and thirty-three photographic copies. And when Mr. Whipp regained possession of his luggage, it is charged, all of these papers were missing.

It soon became time for Miss Fontaine to seek seclusion, and, on the advice of Mr. Whipp, she, her mother and grandfather, rented a cottage in the New Jersey hills. There Judge Evan suffered a fall which resulted in a fractured hip. Two furnace repairers, who had been busy in the cellar for several days, ran to the scene of the accident, raised the judge into, a farm wagon and took him to a hospital.

Tunnel Is Dug.

It was not for several weeks that the Fontaines found out that the furnace repair men's poundings on the cellar pipes had drowned the noise of picks and shovels, with which certain employes of a private detective agency had been constructing a tunnel beneath the foundation of the house.

The tunnel opened into a tool shed eighty feet from the residence and was big enough to accommodate the body of a man, who from his place of concealment could listen to dictaphones strung through the house.

Later, in a New York hotel, two similar instruments were found by Mr. Whipp in the room of Miss Fontaine and her mother.

Settlement Offered.

None of these enterprises served, however, to reveal the hiding place of the 33 letters (originals), which had been transferred, meanwhile, from Mr. Whipp's safe to their present place of safekeeping. And eventually, according to Miss Fontaine's friends, the Whitneys' counsel offered a settlement of $500 monthly for the span of Miss Fontaine's life and $20,000 cash —approximately half as much as the dancer asserts she recently declined.

When Miss Fontaine rejected the original reported tender, Mr. Whipp withdrew from the case, and Charles Firestone of New York, became the young woman's counsel. Whereupon arose an impasse, which has been the subject of the case's most recent developments.

Mr. Firestone offered to consider a financial adjustment of Miss Fontaine's alleged wrongs, and the Whitney lawyers are said to have received him in a favorable attitude, provided the thirty-three original letters could be produced.

But Mr. Whipp had the letters.

Mr. Firestone proposed that Mr. Whipp surrender the letters to him.

Mr. Whipp refused. There was, in the first place, the expense to which Mr. Whipp had been put in perfecting the rejected money settlement. In the second place, there remained the fee to which Mr. Whipp laid claim by virtue of his professional services.

Casting about for some one to assist him in his difficulty, Mr. Firestone remembered that he was acquainted with former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, with whose political faction Mr. Whipp was once identified.

Deneen Called In.

Mr. Deneen said yesterday that he barely knew Mr. Whipp, and that his function consisted of introducing Miss Fontaine's former and present counsel to each other.

During the ensuing conference Mr. Whipp adhered to his contention that his services in the case constituted a lien against the letters and refused to give them up. Eventually, however, he consented to the making of copies of the documents.

"As I recall," said Mr. Whipp yesterday, after refusing in any other way to discuss the case, "three copies were made and sent to Mr. Firestone. He said he wished to preserve one set of copies for himself, to send another to an associate counsel whom he intends to engage, and to place the third copy where nothing is likely to happen to it. All of the copies were delivered to Mr. Deneen, who sent them to New York."

Mr. Deneen said he thought that only two sets of photographic prints had been prepared, and both had been forwarded to Mr. Firestone.

He Wants $10,000.

The final chapter in the struggle over possession of the letters was revealed yesterday in a telegram from Miss Fontaine, exhibited by one of her friends, in which Miss Fontaine urged that Mr. Whipp be induced to accept $7,000 from an unnamed source for his efforts in her behalf.

The price is said to be $3,000 less that which Mr. Whipp has placed upon his services, and which he is declared to have declined from a private detective agency on the grounds that the letters are Miss Fontaine's property, and that he can only release them at her command.

"Seniority Rights" and the Railroad Strike

To the Public:

The public should clearly understand what is involved in the question of "seniority rights" which grows out of the present strike of the railway shop crafts unions.

Seniority is based on length of continuous service, and determines who has the right to work.

In every railway shop there is a list of men whose names appear in the order of their length of service—those oldest in point of service being at the top of the list, those newest in the service at the bottom. On most railways there are not enough places now for all the men employed and all who struck. If, therefore, the strikers should all be allowed to go back to work with seniority rights over any men now working, many of the men now at work would have to be laid off. Furthermore, in periods when shops are not being run to their capacity, the position on the seniority list determines what men shall be kept and what men laid off. The position on the seniority list carries with it other rights and privileges, but the foregoing are the most important rights now involved.

Not only justice, but the public interest, demands that in any settlement of the strike the seniority rights of all men who are now working shall be recognized. If those who have struck against the decisions of the Labor Board and tried to interrupt transportation are favored in any settlement that may be made, the incentive of men to stay at work in case of future strikes will be destroyed and the difficulty of maintaining transportation service increased. The new men in many cases left other employment with the understanding that if competent they would be retained in their present positions.

The men who have stayed at work or accepted employment during the strike have been given assurances of protection not only by the railroads but by the government itself. The Railroad Labor Board in resolutions adopted on July 8 said that:

> "It must be conceded that the men who remain in the service and those who enter it anew are within their rights in accepting such employment; that they are not strike breakers seeking to impose the arbitrary will of an employer on employees; that they have the moral as well as the legal right to engage in such service of the American public to avoid interruption of indispensable railway transportation and that they are entitled to the protection of every department and branch of the government, state and national."

President Harding, in his proclamation on July 12, referred to the fact that:

> "The maintained operation of the railways in interstate commerce and the transportation of the United States mails have necessitated the employment of men who choose to accept employment on the terms of the decision (of the Labor Board) and who have the same indisputable right to work that others have to decline to work."

Chairman Hooper of the Labor Board in a statement on July 3 said, "the men who remain in their positions and the new men who may come in will be protected by public sentiment and the full governmental powers."

Thus it will be seen the fact that all the men who are now working have claims upon the railways and the public superior to those of the strikers has been repeatedly recognized by government bodies and officials; the question now is whether their rights shall be protected or sacrificed.

SALESMEN AND CUSTOMERS

A business can have two means of sales promotion. There can be cracker jack salesmen and there can be satisfied customers. The ideal towards which we all strive is a perfect blending of the two.

We try for salesmen who will intelligently help the customers, not those who wish to sell at any cost.

Satisfied customers take pleasure in their purchases and tell their friends of good treatment received. There can be no better advertising.

FASTER 2 CENT STAMP SEEN AS CHICAGO'S ALLY

"Speed Mails in This Big Center," Is Plea.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Providing better and faster postal service is one way the federal government could aid domestic business and commerce and hurry along the return of prosperity and normalcy.

The theory of aid in this direction has already been approved by the federal administration. It is offering millions to assist toward permanent highways for the benefit of agriculture, it is maintaining the shipping board fleet to aid in foreign trade and it has decided to regulate the packing industry to confer advantages upon the public generally. The postmaster general of the United States indorsed by his presence here yesterday the Pageant of Progress, the principal purpose of which is to promote local business activity.

Speed Necessary.

The speeding up of the postal service in, out and through Chicago as a business aid to "the entire nation" was forcibly pictured to the Washington government by Charles H. Wacker of the Chicago Plan commission in a recent letter to George B. Corey, acting first assistant postmaster general.

"Adequate postal facilities at Chicago is by no means a purely local matter," reads the letter. "It is of vital concern to the entire country. The fact that twenty-seven railroad trunk lines terminate in Chicago compels a vast amount of mail matter to pass through our postoffice, and the delay caused by inadequate facilities at this pivotal point operates to the loss and disadvantage of the entire nation.

"In 1916, 236 cities in nineteen surrounding states joined with thousands of the leading business houses in Chicago in urging congress to provide adequate postal facilities in Chicago. These petitions can be found in the files in the committee on public buildings and grounds of the House of Representatives.

Employers Need Help.

"The deplorable conditions under which the employés are compelled to work in the present postoffice are well known, and are an added reason why the federal government should provide sanitary, well lighted and well ventilated working quarters for its postal employés.

"Decentralization, through the establishment of substations, has been suggested and we fully agree upon the desirability of and the necessity for such stations. Decentralization, however, will never do away with the need for a main postoffice. The fact that 67 per cent of all the mail handled in Chicago passes through the Northwestern and the Union railway stations means absolutely that the two block site between these two depots will lessen the cost to the government of handling the major portion of the mail handled at Chicago, while speeding up the mail service for the entire country.

"In the past 20 years Chicago has increased its population 59 per cent. On that basis it will have between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 twenty years from today. During the past 20 years Chicago's postal tonnage increased 557 per cent, and the postal receipts 524 per cent.

Warns U. S. Not to Err.

"When we take into consideration Chicago's location at the head of the Mississippi valley, its supremacy in transportation facilities, and its location within a night's ride of 53,000,000 people—half the population of the United States—and when we add to these great natural advantages the $250,000,000 worth of Chicago Plan improvements now going forward, it seems clear that if the United States government does not acquire the two block site recommended, it will repeat the same mistake that it has made in connection with the last four postoffices constructed in this city—building them so small that they have been outgrown before they were ready for business."

PEACE IN ALLEY DRAMA FEUD

BACKYARD ART PASSES MUSTER OF COP CENSOR

Only Mud and Rain Dampen Alley Drama.

By going down two steps into a back yard, and down a mud terrace to the parquet seats and down a row of steps past two innocent garbage receptables, the uplift of the drama was achieved last night when the Playmongers, in spite of complaining neighbors, unhistrionic policemen and much talk of an injunction, staged three plays.

Instead of a suave journalist with fountain pen, acid adverbs and orders from the city editor, the dramatic critic of the performance was a more or less disturbed police sergeant with a well displayed star, a well concealed gat and orders from Capt. Morgan Collins of East Chicago avenue station.

Sergt. John on Job.

The sergeant was John Coughlin. First he made friends with Mrs. L. E. Wheeler, a roomer at 16 West Delaware place, nevt door to the offending outdoor drama.

Mrs. Wheeler, defiant, annoyed and curious, spent the evening on her front steps telling the world how she hated the performance, or up in her room, peeping down into the yard and watching the play. Not that she is against the drama, for she admitted having taken part in several minstrel shows, but drama as a counter-attraction to sleep is disturbing.

Threat of Injunction.

Mrs. Wheeler first complained to Edward L. Johnson of the Oriental consistory, who banned the plays on his property and then weakened when he saw a performance. The Playmongers, on the verge of going before Judge George Rush yesterday to ask for an injunction restraining the police from interfering, decided to leave the matter to Capt. Collins, who left it to Sergeant Coughlin.

"I came in," said the sergeant, "to see that the women wore enough of costumes."

At 10:30 o'clock, the audience of forty, including five children, was well behaved. The curtain had just been rung up on the second play. And there were three to be presented. The sergeant-dramatic critic had found nothing of which to complain.

But it was a great, if not lucrative, victory for the uplift of the drama.

MEETS HIS STOLEN CAR; MAY TRACE AUTO THEFT RING

Kenosha, Wis., July 29.—[Special.]—When his young son turned detective, enabling him to recover a Cadillac sedan stolen from him three weeks ago, A. T. Candy, secretary-treasurer of the Candy Manufacturing company, 401 North Paulina street, Chicago, it is believed, discovered a clew which may lead to arrest of an automobile theft ring in Chicago. Candy's car was halted by a train at a crossing west of Kenosha. In front of him was another Cadillac.

"Daddy, that's our old car," cried his 10 year old son. Candy questioned the men in the other car, who willingly turned it over to him and came to the office of Sheriff Rauen. The driver gave his name as Jay Nicholas Huffman, 1517 Ardmore avenue, Chicago. With him was his brother. They had a bill of sale showing they had purchased the car three days ago from a man who gave his name as A. L. Bancroft, 505 Sheridan road.

MEDICS SUGGEST NEW GLANDS TO RESTORE LENIN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

RIGA, July 29.—From unquestionable authority in Moscow THE TRIBUNE has learned that a group of specialists attending Nicolai Lenin are now discussing the possibility of providing the bolshevik premier with new glands in an effort to save his reason. Should the projected operation be approved it will not take place for six months, as this period is necessary to complete a cure for the disease from which he is now suffering.

Thus far the gland operation has been discussed only in the highest circles in Moscow, where there is a wide difference in opinion among the communists as to whether or not the operation should take place. Some contend that M. Lenin should not be permitted to recover and regain control of the government because his new economic policies proved a failure.

Since M. Lenin's illness first became known he has been reported as suffering from every kind of disease from dementia præcox to gout and stomach trouble, resulting from overeating.

COMMUNISM FOR AMERICA.

Arthur Evans reports that William Z. Foster and other advocates of "the revolution" are at work to turn strike sentiment into radicalism. Nationalization of roads and mines is one of the proposals which is discussed. Also an organ of opinion has been established to tout for affiliation with Moscow, the abolition of capital, and the establishment of a workers' republic.

We think the citizenship need not be kept awake o' nights on account of these activities. Of course there is a fanatic minority who are impervious to the facts of the Russian situation or any other facts that don't fit its pet notions. But the mass of American wage earners, to say nothing of the rest of the people, are not such gluttons for punishment that they will walk into a morass such as communism has made for the Russians.

As a matter of fact, a Red revolution in the United States would do more damage and cause more misery than it did in Russia, because we have more to lose and have farther to fall. Russian organization was at best a rather primitive affair, while American life, including that of the average wage earner, is far more dependent on the continuous operation of the machinery of production, transportation, and distribution than the Russian. It takes only a little sensible thought to realize what would happen in this country, with its high standards of living for city people and rural people, if a group like Lenin and his associates paralyzed our factories and our railroads, destroyed the value of our money, wiped out our free institutions, and brought the terrible confusion and demoralization in all civilized enterprises that have marked their control of Russian affairs. In proportion as we have thousands of prosperous cities and scores of millions of people dependent upon the constant working of our complicated system of production and supply, our helplessness and our suffering would surpass that of Russia. To thrust the American people back to the stage of communism and primitive barter would be not only to undo the progress of centuries of struggle for better living, civilization, but to bring about a chaos more appalling than that of already backward Russia.

Of course, the communist fanatic holds that the Russian disaster was the effect of capitalistic attack, but a sane examination of the catastrophe shows that it was chiefly the result of bolshevist methods which ran counter to the forces which keep civilized society going. This is well understood by the sane leaders of labor, as is evidenced by the recent repudiation of communism by a vote of over 3,000,000 to 261,000 at the British Labor party convention in Edinburgh. British labor is not lunatic; neither is American.

Nevertheless, we cannot afford to ignore as we do the influence of the widespread, persistent, and well directed propaganda of revolutionary radicalism. Mr. Evans reports that it is affecting labor organizations of the American type, and that conservative labor leaders are concerned lest it result in a disintegration of the union movement proper in favor of syndicalism of the European type with ultimate communistic objects. A period of hard times, unemployment, and suffering, is doubtless needed to make radicalism a serious menace in this country. But such times do come and should be forestalled by intelligent measures. The prevention of radicalism is the justification of our own system of ordered progress, not merely by counter-propaganda but by an effective policy for the abolition of poverty and the encouragement of industry through the widest practical distribution of prosperity. Short-sighted indeed is the pseudo-conservatism that opposes legitimate and law-abiding organization of wage earners, attempts unnecessary reductions in wages, and fails to realize that men will not be loyal to any system which does not offer them the realities of well-being and the hope of progress.

But beside this realization of substantial betterment—good wages, good homes, wholesome pleasures, protection for old age and misfortune, opportunity for advancement when earned—we ought also to create a counter-influence to radical propaganda. In our schools, our press, and our public forum there ought to be throughout the country a vigorous course of education in the history and principles of individualism, democratic institutions, parliamentarism, and the beneficent rôle which the right of private property and the motive of individual reward have played in human progress. The air is full of socialistic jargon. College professors, school teachers, popular clergymen, minor poets, lecturers disseminate collectivist theories, and, what is more insidious, socialist assumptions with little challenge.

Capital, capitalism, capitalistic are terms of reproach with many sentimental humanitarians and liberals. What the régime of capitalism has done and does for human happiness and progress, what its destruction has meant to other peoples and would mean to us, gets very little consideration or discussion. The great majority of us take our institutions for granted and often are not aware when they are infringed and attacked. Anything plausible that wears the appearance of altruism, of democratic betterment, of concern for the weak and unfortunate, gets a ready acceptance without cool analysis or consideration of its consistency with the institutions which our centuries of experience have evolved. We need to combat this with a more effective education in the history of our institutions and in the principles on which are based our social order.

AMERICAN LIBERTY.

The American people unconsciously but definitely are tending towards a highly centralized, bureaucratized system of government interference with life in the United States. This tendency is expressed in the character of laws proposed and in the increase of government agents employed to scrutinize and investigate citizens in their business relations and private habits.

It seems to be an accepted theory of nearly all proponents of remedy by legislation that the states have broken down and that action must be had by federal statute, with federal machinery to make it effective.

The objectives in some cases are excellent. One is to reduce illiteracy by a federal department of education. Another is to combat lynching and lawless punishments by federal law. General education and general support of legal punishments are highly valuable but the direction taken to obtain them is indicative of the trend which is destruction.

Other purposes are not excellent. They are to build up a system of espionage upon business and habit and a system of centralized autocratic repression and regulation.

Americans may not know it but they are regarded abroad as a very docile people, particularly by the British, who are stubborn when their rights are involved. An American is impressed by the fact that he is a citizen of a democracy. He doubts that any people who have a titled class, a nobility, can in essence be a democracy, no matter if they have political power over their governments, and in a fashion he is right.

He thinks of himself as the product and the beneficiary of the freest political and social system the world ever knew. That gives him a sense of security and when his rights are invaded he may not know it. An Englishman knows his individual rights and he will not stand an invasion of them. Within his rights he is adamant against everything and everybody. The Englishman has the tradition of the hard winning of what he has, the tradition of centuries. The American thinks the idea of human liberty and freedom was in the very soil of America and sprang up at the very first touch of Anglo-Saxon steps.

There was a hard fight in the Massachusetts colony, a bitter, cruel and bloody one, to assert and maintain the rights which the English at home even then had under the crown. That section of America which so much influenced the nation did not begin with the liberty of conscience, freedom of habit and political equality but with the denial of equality, the control of habit and the coercion of conscience.

An entirely different type of men came over the mountains and down the rivers to make the early settlements. They were hardy individualists. They had to be. They could not rely on any support from the seaboard colonies or states from which they came and if they had not been able to make good by themselves against the wilderness they could not have remained. Their contact with centralized government was of the slightest and frequently their respect for it was as slight.

Americans have assumed that these hardy individualists fixed the traditions of American liberty and that it became the freest thing in the world. Part of this idea already is a dream. There is not a white country, aside from Russia, in which the citizen is so much subjected to centralized, bureaucratic interference as he is in the United States.

One result is that the federal government cannot half do its work. There is constant pressure for more federal agents. That is the fashion in which bureaucracy grows. The system fattens itself. Its agents multiply. Their business is to make more work for themselves which makes need for more of them. When this system begins to spread it is hard to uproot it.

If Americans are wise they will consciously set themselves against the present trend. They will oppose the disposition of government to become paternalistic. They will keep regulation of life in their own hands and in regulating it act by communities or by states. A state is large enough a political unit for the control of morals, for the direction of education, for the preservation of domestic order, etc. If states are backward or faulty it is better that they achieve their own ends rather than that a bureau in Washington intervene under federal law, whether it is coercive or merely stimulating.

If they are wise they will not countenance the setting up of a paternalistic bureaucracy in Washington even if they are tempted by the purpose of the reform or by the fact that the shortest cut to it is by an act of congress.

Bureaucracy cannot escape its characteristics and attributes. It is inquisitive, heavy handed, slow, ineffective in good and pernicious in error. It is stupid, interfering, autocratic and as its relations with the citizenship become involved and intimate it tends towards corruption.

The United States must turn and head away from the centralization of authority over the lives of its citizens if it wishes to protect American liberty from being badly if not inextricably involved in a machinery of mutilation.

AMERICAN LOANS IN CHINA.

It is estimated that considerably more than fifty million dollars (Chinese currency) is owed by the Chinese government to various American banks, financial organizations, and manufacturers. A great deal of this debt, says the Weekly Review of the Far East, is in actual default and the rest virtually so since the government cannot pay its bills. The debt covers loans and materials sold by American manufacturers to Chinese government railways, telegraph, and telephone services, etc. It therefore represents not indemnifications imposed upon China but substantial values contributed to China's prosperity and progress.

Considering that fact and that America has been persistently and substantially the friend of China in all her dangerous crises, we should suppose that China's government policy would favor preference for the American debts wherever possible. The Chinese always appeal to America as a proved friends, and repeatedly, from the time of the Boxer uprising to the Versailles and the Washington conferences, our government has gone as far as circumstances would permit, without consideration of our own selfish interests, to save China and strengthen her before the world.

It is interesting therefore in view of American sentiment for China to read what a writer in the Review has to say in the first of a series of articles entitled "Playing Uncle Sam for a Sucker!" This writer declares that while the government has defaulted on debts owed to American banks and manufacturers, it has been careful to keep up payments to British and other European creditors. He cites the case of the Peking-Hankow government railway, which owes American companies more than $4,500,000 (United States) for locomotives and cars in service for four and five years, earning revenue which is used to meet interest and amortization payment on the Anglo-French loan. At least there ought to be a prorating of payments.

The writer promises to give in subsequent articles many instances of discrimination against American claims, and we trust his effort will get some official attention. The Review is a responsible journal and its editors are well acquainted with Chinese conditions and the interrelations of foreign interests in the far east. We have reason to fear that there as elsewhere our diplomacy is lacking in that vigorous pressure for its national interests which other countries show. Too many of our diplomats are either easy prey for flattery or seem to think that America's rôle in the world is wholly altruistic.

At any rate, we think the state department might do well to ascertain whether our willingness to help the Chinese people is not being abused to the profit not of China but of nations which have but one object in the far east, and that is the unsleeping advancement of their own special interests.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Even delectable lands may have their supreme periods, and when America enters the corn season its distinction as a garden tops all other places of the world. When an American takes up his first ear of sweet corn, which was in a pot of hot water twenty minutes after it was stripped from the stalk, he must wonder whether after all other peoples really live. The Canadians, yes, because they have fields of the generous corn and know how to use it, but can life be complete elsewhere without it?

In this corn fed region nature seems to be conscious of a great fulfillment when she offers the corn. Generally the heat of growing weather has been tempered. Fields have become soft with fox grass and mistily mellow towards the west at sundown. They have been colored with snapdragons and with early goldenrod and wild sunflowers peer above the thickets.

The white moths which flutter in the sunlight seem to be part of a visible, lazily waving gossamer of contented life, and the horn of plenty, filled to the brim, drops out the roasting ears. Nothing else so connotates richness of productivity. The amber spirits of the noble grain no longer are to intoxicate our citizenry, but the yellow heart of the corn makes the pig strong enough to lift the mortgage, and man, seated before a steaming platter of sweet ears, has all that is needed to make him Esau in Arcadia.

The August ticket is rimmed with gold and the collector's punch make rents in the richest tapestry of life. Change is flashing through the woods and over the fields. The song diminishes. The brown thrasher who has given the thickets their most prodigal melodies is silent. The yellow billed cuckoo calls from the oaks by day and the owl by night, but the woodthrush in the wild grapes is ending his song. He will moult and soon be on the wing, but not swifter than the passage of the days to which he gave his song.

ORGANIZED THIEVES.

A woman who was robbed of a valuable jewel studded wrist watch at State and Monroe streets says that, after she had been jostled and had discovered that there were two long scratches on the wrist where the watch had been, she went to one of the traffic policemen, whose only comment was: "Lady, that happens every day."

In city crime the record of the pickpockets is the most amazing. Their guild is well organized and their guilt well protected. One of the Cook county judges explained part of the system in a speech in which he said that if the headquarters of the organized thieves did not hear from a man by telephone in the regular intervals in which he was expected to report, the assumption was he had been picked up by the police and lawyers were ready to hurry to court with petition for a writ of habeas corpus. The Journal of the American Bar Association also said that this was a part of the systematic operation of thievery.

Police and courts are familiar with the system. The penitentiary seldom keeps the thieves. They work in well policed regions. Their dexterity and trickery frequently is too much even for careful persons and always too much for careless people. Their immunity costs them something, but they get what they pay for. Lawyers who aid them generally are retained in advance and in expectation of their crimes.

Editorial of the Day

AMERICAN DEMOCRACY.

[Translated from Glas Svobode (The Voice of Liberty: Slovenian).]

Those who created the constitution of the United States of America were sincere believers in, and arduous practitioners of, the principles embodied in that constitution. But times have changed and men have changed. Out of an exclusively agricultural commonwealth grew up a mighty America; and in this America a class rule has been built up which exploits the masses for the benefit of comparatively few persons. The grievances which caused those pioneers to break away from England's rule are now little heeded. The principles upheld by them, which were all over considered to be righteous and virtuous, are today idle talk, a mere mirage in the desert of life. Whoever dares to say that we enjoy democracy today is either blind or the gears in his head are out of order.

The highest executive should be the best man of the people, and above all he should be an impartial man. Possibly presidential candidates as a whole might be inclined to be impartial, before being nominated by a certain party; but as soon as the elections are over the personal conviction of the new man must give room to the orders and wishes of the party leaders in general, and he is thus forced to become partial, to give preference to the interests of the ruling class. He will become more and more inured to the opinion that this country could not survive without the existence and dictation of that ruling class.

In Austria, our home country, these same conditions prevailed at one time. Those who praised the mighty lords and capitalists and licked their heels were faithful citizens, while any one who dared to murmur was denounced as a traitor. In the same way whoever praises and supports capitalism here in America is called a true American patriot. This is the real definition of the American patriotism which prevails, not only in public offices, courts, and other institutions, but also among organized labor.

Freedom of thought, speech, and print is measured by this standard: whoever and whatever does not agree with it is a traitor and treachery. American democracy has been transformed into the autocracy of the dollar. And the voters seem to be satisfied with these conditions! When will they wake up and demand that kind of democracy which was inspired by Thomas Paine?

A SURE WINNER.

"Are all the men in Crimson Gulch good poker players?

"All but me," replied Cactus Joe.

"Isn't your ignorance disastrous?"

"No. I'm the feller that gets criticized by the entire assemblage for bein' a winner in spite of the fact that I play my cards all wrong."—Washington Star.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

FOR YOUR CAMPING TRIP.

THIS is the way the automobilist from Milwaukee is advised by Dr. George C. Ruckland to equip himself for a camping tour:

One five yard package of sterile gauze in one-half yard packets.
One-quarter pound of sterile cotton.
One-half dozen assorted sterile gauze bandages from one inch to three inches wide.
One spool of zinc oxide adhesive tape two inches wide.
One-quarter pound of vaseline.
One ounce bottle of tincture of iodine in glass stoppered bottle.
One-half pound boric acid crystals.
Four ounces castor oil.
One bottle of rhubarb and soda tablets.
Two ounces of aqua ammonia.
One bottle of hazone tablets.
One splinter forceps.
One pair of scissors.

The way to meet certain emergencies is given thus:

INSECT BITES.

Apply diluted solution of ammonia to the bite, followed by a thin paste of soda. [Bites not relieved by applying alkali are made more comfortable by applying vinegar.]

SUNBURNS.

Apply cold water compresses; if blisters have formed, open with a sterilized needle and apply gauze saturated with boric acid solution.

POISON IVY.

Apply either salt solution or a saturated boric acid solution. Open blisters with sterile needle and apply gauze saturated with boric acid solution.

BRUISES AND CUTS.

Cleanse with gasoline and then swab with iodine. Protect with sterile gauze held in place with a few adhesive strips.

BLISTERED HEEL.

Cleanse the skin. Apply iodine to the blister and around. Puncture with a sterile needle. Leave the skin in position. Cover with strips of zinc oxide adhesive.

UPSET STOMACH.

Discontinue eating for a day. After that eat lightly for a day.

DIARRHEA.

Stop eating. Take a dose of oil. Do not take sedatives to stop diarrhea at the beginning nor in the early stages of the attack.

BURNS.

Cover with sterile vaseline. Apply sterile dressings, held in place by adhesive tape.

PUNCTURED WOUNDS.

Let the wound bleed well. It may be best to enlarge a small wound that it may bleed. Clean well. Disinfect with iodine. Apply a loose open dressing.

HEADACHES.

If due to glare and eye strain, use colored glasses. Poor grade colored glasses may cause eye strain. If due to constipation, eat less and take a purge.

RESUSCITATION OF THE DROWNED.

Lift by the waist, letting the head hang with face toward the ground, that the water may run out of the mouth and air passages.

Place on the ground, back up, and the head resting on the forearm, face turned to the side. Cover the legs, arms and body as warmly as possible.

The operator kneels astride the victim, grasping the lower part of the chest with thumbs pointing toward the head, and parallel with the backbone.

The weight of the operator's body is thrown forward, squeezing the air out of the chest, maintaining pressure a few seconds. Operator releases pressure and throws his shoulders and weight back. This cycle is complete about sixteen times to the minute.

Continue for twenty minutes. Apply heat to legs, arms and body.

TO DISINFECT DRINKING WATER.

Dissolve one halozone tablet in a quart of water. Let the solution stand three minutes before drinking.

MILK.

Heat before using.

BOOKS FOR A WORRIER.

Worried Woman writes: "I am a young woman who recognizes herself as belonging to the anti-social group of human beings and also the seriousness of it.

"Can inherited tendencies be overcome in one of adult years? Can unstability and lack of childhood training in restraint be modified and what books can I read on these subjects?

"I am deadly in earnest in this matter."

REPLY.

I wonder if you do not mean a social.

The chances are that you are not an enemy of society—anti-social—but that you have no social instincts—do not fit in—are a social.

DREAMS ECHO DAY THINKING.

H. M. writes: "I talk all night long about things which I have been discussing during the day. When I awake I do not remember anything that I have said.

"1. Has this any effect on my health?

"2. If so, what?

"3. Do I get the proper and sufficient rest?

"4. Is there any cure for this affliction?

"5. If so, what is best?"

REPLY.

Our day thoughts and our night thoughts are always cut from the same cloth. They often follow the same general plan.

If your dreams are too tense, and too full of worry, anxiety, and fear for peaceful rest, it means that your daytime mental habits are bad and should be changed.

If you do not worry in your day thoughts, you will not worry in your dreams.

CASCADE OF TEARS.

L. B. writes: "What is the cause of a steady flow of the lachrymal glands? Is it nervousness? What can be done for it?"

REPLY.

Tears flow across the eyeballs every minute of the day.

Having washed the dirt away, they run down the tear duct into the nose. In the case in mind, probably the tear duct is too small, and, in consequence, some of the tears overflow the banks and run down the cheek.

The only effective treatment is to get rid of the dust.

PRIVATE CONTRACT FOR PAVING.

Chicago, July 25.—[Friend of the People.]—I live in the 1600 block of North Keeler avenue on the east side of the street. I should like to know when our alley is going to be paved. It has been said that arrangements for paving have been made. W.

The property owners have entered into a private contract with a construction company to pave the alley between North, Wabansia, Keeler, and Kedvale avenues. No doubt the alley will be paved during the summer, but, as stated before, this is a private contract.

A BAD INVESTMENT.

Chicago, July 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I contracted to buy twenty shares in an organization, and made an initial payment of $200 to be followed by monthly payments. I paid a total of $290 when I could see that the company did not do what they agreed to do. It was written up a lot in your paper. I haven't received a penny for all the time I was in it. Have stopped paying. Can they refuse to give me back my money? M. J. H.

It is not likely that they will give you your money back or will attempt to force further payments. They probably will rely on forfeiting what you have paid. If you have paid a substantial fraction of your subscription it may be advisable for you to complete. Otherwise we can suggest no remedy.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS DESERTED.

Bloomington, Ill., July 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a woman aged 65 and have three married children. About twenty-five years ago my husband left me when he was drinking heavily. He had been drinking for several years and I had to work to support myself and family. He has since stopped drinking and has worked steadily. He has never sent me any money or paid any of my bills, although we were not divorced. I live with one of my daughters. Can I compel my husband to pay my board now, after all this time has elapsed? We all live in Illinois. MRS. L.

He is legally obliged to support you, but if he now offers you a home, which you are unwilling to share with him, you could not compel him to contribute to your living elsewhere. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

USE YOUR LICENSE.

Hammond, Ind., July 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Will you please tell me in your paper about how long a time a marriage license is good after the date of issuance or purchase? A. B. C.

The Illinois statute does not specify. We advise against the use of a license that is old enough so that the parties' status might well have changed during the interval.

MUSIC IN THE AIR.

Chicago, July 26.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A place out here going under the name of "so and so's" studios has both vocal and instrumental music going all day long, from 7 a. m. until 10 p. m. At times there are a half a dozen horns and violins and pianos playing all at once, and each trying out his or her own favorite atrocity. What can be done to abate this nerve racking performance? L. E. W.

USEFUL LIVING.

Chicago, July 21.—Is not the announcement that Mr. A. S. Baldwin, eminent engineer and railway official, left an estate of only $32,000 of more than passing interest?

It gives us an insight into the lives of the men who conduct the country's great industries, showing that they are not engaged in building personal fortunes, but are spending their energies and dedicating their talents to a faithful performance of the trust committed to them.

The salaries of such men, when the heavy calls that are made on them and the style of life they must maintain are considered, is barely more than enough to meet the current expenses of every day life.

That they have opportunities frequently to make fortunes through the advance information they receive in the closing of large contracts and refuse to cloud their integrity by taking advantage of the opportunities gives us a finer opinion of human nature generally and is an inspiration to all who toil and struggle.

DISBARMENT OF LAWYER CRIMINALS.

Chicago, July 24.—I read in yesterday's TRIBUNE your editorial entitled "Lawyers and Crime."

In your editorial you say in part: "Disbarment proceedings seem very reluctantly and languidly pushed." In making this statement THE TRIBUNE is in error.

As a member of the grievance committee of the Chicago Bar association, I think I know whereof I speak. Disbarment proceedings are tried by the Supreme court, and that court, while not requiring the guilt of the accused to be established beyond reasonable doubt, nevertheless has repeatedly declined to disbar an attorney upon a mere preponderance of evidence.

In the recent case of People vs. Lasley, 302 Ill., 595, the court, in speaking of disbarment proceedings, says: "The rules of law governing cases of this character are well settled and well understood by the profession. The power of the court to disbar an attorney is to be used in moderation and only on clear proof. Not only must the acts of misconduct charged be proved but fraudulent or dishonest motives must also be satisfactorily proved."

The present grievance committee of the Chicago Bar Association has held two sessions weekly for approximately ten months. It has heard a large number of cases and in many instances has recommended that an information for disbarment be filed.

Contrary to the opinion expressed by the writer of the editorial in question, this committee does not conduct ex parte hearings, as is the case with the grand jury, but hears both sides, and while this committee has no regularly established facilities for procuring evidence other than that presented by the relator and the respondent, it has in numerous instances sought and obtained evidence not produced by either of the parties.

It hardly seems probable that THE TRIBUNE would accuse the members of the grievance committee of dereliction in their duty without having some tangible evidence upon which to predicate such accusation, and it occurs to the writer that it would serve a far better purpose, if such evidence exists, that it be presented to the grievance committee for its action rather than to criticise the committee for failure to act upon evidence of which it has no knowledge.

In one particular I do agree heartily with THE TRIBUNE. I do believe that there are not a few members of the bar who should be disbarred. There are one or two whose names in this particular have on more than one occasion received "honorable mention," many of whom the writer for one entertains a grave suspicion of subornation of perjury and jury bribing, although I am wholly without tangible evidence upon which to predicate a charge in that regard.

In conclusion let me assure THE TRIBUNE that if it has or can procure any evidence warranting action on the part of the grievance committee, and will present that evidence to that committee, you will not be able to say editorially or otherwise that "disbarment proceedings seem very reluctantly or languidly pushed."

DAYS OF CRUEL SPORT.

Chicago, July 24.—Your Sunday edition printed a cartoon by Briggs which has so aroused my indignation I must protest against it.

I wonder how many people really think this is a fine cartoon for children to see, or for any one, for that matter. Does it not teach them that it is sport to ridicule an unfortunate defective? Is there anything funny about such a terrible affliction?

How are children ever going to learn what a really sad thing it is to be defective when grown people, and apparently intelligent people at that, can see "real sport" in making fun at the most awful affliction I can think of that could happen to any one?

It is a very, very sad thing and normal children should be taught to have only kindness and sympathy for any kind of unfortunate human being.

I fail to see how any sane person can see anything funny in Mr. Briggs' cartoon.

WHERE ALDERMEN ARE HAPPY.

Chicago, July 25.—Your editorial of even date with reference to our aldermen certainly hits the spot. One wonders at the irony of fate after reading this, especially after looking over the tax bill for the current year. Your Inquiring Reporter asks if the policemen would not be more comfortable in lightweight uniforms during the summer. Why not give the $20,000 which our wonderful city fathers are spending on 8 per cent brew and distribute it among the cops for the purchase of these suits? Justice certainly is blindfolded. A. J. M.

A ROAST.

Chicago, July 25.—You dish up the details of Mrs. Thorne's suit, and now you go into detail relative to the black and tan resorts on the south side.

Why don't you print it on pink paper, and as a heading say: "Chicago Edition of the Police Gazette, Successor to the old and decent TRIBUNE as published by Joseph Medill"?

Why can't you publish in Chicago the decent, all around kind of newspaper that is enjoyed in New York with papers like the New York Times and the Tribune?

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

MIGNON'S SONG FROM "WILHELM MEISTER."

Know'st thou the land where the lemon tree blows—
Where deep in the bower the gold orange grows?
Where zephyrs from heaven die softly away,
And the laurel and myrtle trees never decay?
Know'st thou it? Thither, O! thither with thee,
My dearest, my fondest! with thee I would flee.

Know'st thou the hall with its pillared arcades,
Its chambers so vast and its long colonnades?
Where the statues of marble with features so mild
Ask, "Why have they used thee so harshly, my child?"
Know'st thou it? Thither, O! thither with thee,
My guide, my protector! with thee I would flee.

Know'st thou the Alp which the vapor enshrouds,
Where the bold muleteer seeks his way through the clouds?
In the cleft of the mountain the dragon abides,
And the rush of the stream tears the rock from its sides;
Know'st thou it? Thither, O! thither with thee,
Leads our way, father—then come, let us flee.

INQUIRY DEMAND ON TARIFF VOTE STIRS SENATORS

"Financial Interest" Hint in Caraway Resolution.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—A demand for an investigation of charges that senators with large financial interests in the wool growing industry have been guilty of a serious breach of propriety in their efforts to boost duties on wool threw the senate in a turmoil today.

Senator Caraway [Ark.] precipitated what may prove one of the biggest political scandals in years when he presented a resolution providing for an inquiry by the senate committee on judiciary into the financial connections of all senators with industries benefited either by the pending tariff bill or the emergency tariff law.

Covers All Industries.

The resolution was broad enough to cover all industries affected by the tariff, but a debate of several hours, which followed its presentation, related entirely to the activities of a group of western senators in connection with the wool schedule.

Three senators under fire, Senators Gooding [Idaho], Bursum [N. M.], and Stanfield [Ore.], arose and admitted their interest in the wool growing industry, but defended their positions. Senators Smoot [Utah], Oddie [Nev.], and Jones [N. M.] denied they now own any sheep.

Text of Resolution.

The text of the Caraway resolution follows:

"Whereas it has been charged both on the floor of the senate and in the press that senators whose names have been mentioned are financially interested in the rates of duty proposed in certain schedules of the pending tariff bill, and

"Whereas, it is also charged that senators are or were financially interested in the passage or extension of the so-called emergency tariff act, and

"Whereas, these charges are hurtful to the honor of those senators and to that of the senate itself, therefore,

"Resolved that the committee on the judiciary be and is hereby authorized and instructed to investigate said charges and to report its findings to the senate within ten days.

Points to Be Covered.

"Said committee is hereby instructed to ascertain first, whether any senator is or has been financially or professionally interested in the production, manufacture or sale of any article or articles mentioned in either of said tariff bills, and if so to what extent; second, whether any senator represents or its connected professionally or otherwise directly or indirectly with any organization engaged in the manufacture, production or sale of any of said articles or has been so interested during the pending of this bill or the emergency tariff bill."

The resolution technically was not introduced because of an objection by Senator Wadsworth [N. Y.] to unanimous consent to present it out of order. Senator Caraway gave notice that he will introduce it at the earliest opportunity, and the fact that Senator Gooding, one of those affected, declared he will demand an investigation made it quite likely that it will be given favorable consideration.

Quotes from Editorial.

Senator Caraway opened his speech by quoting from an editorial from a New York newspaper in which it was charged that a group of millionaire wool growers in the senate are driving through an excessive duty on wool for their own personal advantage. He then referred to another newspaper editorial referring to the recent return to Washington of Senator Stanfield when the wool schedule came up for consideration.

"A newspaper published here in the city of Washington yesterday contained an editorial in which a senator is named, saying that he has been absent until the duty on wool was to be fixed, that he came then and was exceedingly interested in putting through that schedule, and, quoting from his biography as it appears in the congressional directory—I shall omit his name—it says he is engaged in the live stock industry, being America's largest producer of wool and mutton," said Senator Caraway.

"Other papers are carrying the charge. It has been asserted that certain senators were interested even in purchasing the products that are to be affected by either this or the emergency tariff, forming a pool and selling on the higher market.

Up to Senator, He Says.

"I, of course, make no comment as to whether it is true or false. I shall leave the senator, of course as I will be compelled to do, to determine for himself how far he may consistently on his own honor and the public good vote for a measure that directly enriches him.

"But I sat in the gallery there a few years ago before I was a member of either body and when I expected never to be a member of either, and saw a judge impeached standing right down here at the corner of the rostrum. It was charged that as a judge he had influenced the sale of a coal dump. I doubt if any senator thought he directly profited by his conduct.

"It was thought, however, by the senate—and many of the senators voting in that case then are here now—that he was so intimately related to the transaction that his usefulness as a public servant, as a judge of a court, had been destroyed and that he should be impeached, and he was impeached.

Driven Out in Disgrace.

"He was driven out of his office in disgrace and his family was disgraced because it was suspected that he had abused his office to try to influence the price of a coal dump in which he might have some interest.

"I deny that the honor of the bench is any more sacred than the honor of the senate of the United States, because this judge was the chief justice of a court which this congress created, he was a creature of this legislative body; he had been confirmed by a vote of the senate, and he was driven out of public office because it was thought that he had not been circumspect in the use of his official position, and that possibly he tried to profit by some judicial act of his.

"The laws everywhere forbid a juror to be accepted to sit in a cause in which he might be interested or in which a near relative of his might be interested. Now, can we say that we integrity of the courts than we are integrity o fthe couts thanr we ae for the legislative honor?

"A judge may be dishonest, and his decision may affect only a few people, the litigants before the court. It cannot be said that this body can be influenced by a personal consideration and affect the welfare of a few people only, because we legislate for all the people and the honor and the dignity and the respect and the confidence of this country must be reposed in the integrity and honor of the senate as one of the bodies of the legislative branch of the government, or else the government ends."

Questions Senator Caraway.

Senator Gooding inquired if the resolution for an investigation would provide for an inquiry as to why Senator Caraway voted for a high duty on rice.

"I will say to the senator from Idaho that I am not interested, directly or indirectly, and that no kinspeople of mine are interested in a grain of rice," Senator Caraway said.

Senator Smoot said that the article in the New York newspaper to which Senator Caraway had referred had stated he was one of the senators interested in a tariff on wool.

"I want to say as I have said before, that I have not owned a sheep or a lamb since I sold all that I had immediately after Grover Cleveland was elected," Senator Smoot said. "I do not know of a relative of mine who owns a single head."

Senator Bursum commented on the reference to himself in connection with wool producing senators.

Denies He Is a Millionaire.

"There is one statement with reference to myself which I should be very glad if it were true, which is that I am one of the millionaires of this body," Seantor Bursum said. "I should be perfectly willing to give my note for half the amount stated in that article and turn it over to any one who would agree to have it discounted at the bank, and I will divide with the fellow who obtained that discount."

Senator Bursum said he declared on the floor that he is interested in the wool industry and that there was no secret about it. Senator Gooding said that he was willing to resign if it were found that he has violated his oath of office.

"I plead guilty to owning a few sheep," Senator Gooding said. "In the west it is a few sheep. In this country it would not be called a few sheep. People of Idaho knew I owned sheep when I was elected, and gave me the highest majority of any man on the ticket. I am going to fight for the adoption of this resolution and want this investigation to be made."

Senator Stanfield defended his position. "There are a number here who are interested in this wool schedule," he said. "Some may be owners of ranches. It is laudable for a man to be the owner of a ranch property. It is laudable for a man to be a flock master. If he is the owner of a flock, should he then stand aside and permit an injustice to be done to the great industry in which he is interested?

"I am interested in wool, and I believe my interest in it only fits me to vote intelligently here, more intelligently, perhaps, than many others who have not any such interest, but simply stand here and oppose the principle of a protective tariff."

HUGHES OBJECTS TO UNDERWOOD'S WAR CLAIMS BILL

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Secretary Hughes in a long memorandum addressed to the senate judiciary committee again expressed disapproval today of the bill introduced by Senator Underwood of Alabama, the Democratic leader, for establishment of an all-American commission to adjust German war claims.

Legislation at this time, Secretary Hughes is said to have declared, not only would embarrass the discussions in progress at Berlin, but would accomplish no real saving in time or in the better protection of American interests. The plan already worked out in the negotiations, the secretary held, could soon be consummated in such a way as to be highly satisfactory to congress and to the American people.

Senator Underwood in a statement issued after the secretary of state's memorandum had been made public, declared that Mr. Hughes' plan of negotiating a treaty with Germany for a mixed commission was a "surrender" of American rights, Germany, under both the Versailles and Berlin treaties, Senator Underwood said, had agreed to an American commission and that the state department was "now offering" Germany a mixed commission "with Germany sitting on it to determine the validity of American claims."

TRAINS STALLED, HEAVY DAMAGE IN MIDWEST FLOOD

Omaha, Neb., July 29.—Thousands of dollars property loss, washed out railroad tracks and bridges and flooded streams, streets, and basements resulted today from a rain of cloudburst proportions which was general over Nebraska and parts of Iowa last night.

All train service on the Omaha railroad between Norfolk and Sioux City has been halted by washouts. Other Nebraska towns are without train service, tracks being washed out on both sides of some cities. A train carrying about 100 passengers was stranded near Carroll, Neb.

At Walthill, Neb., the water was four feet deep and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad tracks were washed away. Logan Creek, at Wayne, Neb., was nearly a mile wide today and the city was flooded.

Much Sioux City Damage.

Sioux City, Ia., July 29.—Damage from the near cloudburst during which four inches of rain fell, was estimated today at approximately $100,000 by police. Scores of business houses and homes in the main part of the city were flooded and several outlying bridges washed out.

Aged Illinois Man Killed When Train Hits Auto

Michigan City, Ind., July 29.—John Blake, 71, of Fairdale, Ill., was killed last night when a Père Marquette train struck his automobile at a crossing east of the city. His wife, who was in the car with him, escaped serious injury. They were returning from an auto trip through Michigan and Indiana.

WEDDING BELLS FOR MARILYN AND JACK TODAY

Romance Reaches 'Close-up' at Mary and Doug's.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—[United Press.]—The Romance of Marilyn Miller and Jack Pickford reaches the close-up, fade-out "happily-ever-after" stage tomorrow at Beverly Hills.

One of the stormiest of modern romances uniting stage and filmland will come to a climax when the couple are married at the home of "Mary and Doug" at 2 o'clock Sunday.

Their love story runs like a real thriller.

1. Attacks against the handsome hero.

2. Bribes of diamonds as big as baseballs offered the heroine by the scheming villain; and, finally,

Love Alone Matters

Like the favorite characters of their favorite plays, Marilyn and Jack say they intend to show the world "nothing matters but love."

Completed details have been announced by "Ma" Pickford, who has made all arrangements for the event.

Only the closest relatives and friends will attend. The home is to be richly decorated with flowers and draperies and after the ceremony will be the scene of the wedding supper.

Mary Pickford is to be bridesmaid, and Victor Dorman, a friend of Jack's, will be best man. The Rev. Dr. Neil Dodd, rector of the Church of St. Mary of the Angels, will preside.

Marilyn's Wedding Dress.

Marilyn's dress will be of white georgette, trimmed with silver princess lace, and she will carry a gorgeous bouquet of white orchids, gardenas, and lilies of the valley.

The few invited guests include: Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Cross, the bride's uncle and aunt, "Doug" Fairbanks, and a few close friends.

The couple have planned as their honeymoon a two weeks' automobile trip through southern California, stopping at Santa Barbara and Del Monte.

U. S. TO EJECT OIL SQUATTERS ON NAVAL RESERVE

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Acting Secretary Roosevelt today ordered Maj. Gen. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps, to send one officer and three or four enlisted marines into the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve, Wyo., at a place about forty miles from Casper, to eject oil squatters who have begun drilling for oil.

The secretary said he issued his order on the basis of information forwarded to the navy department by the interior department some months ago of the presence of the squatters on the naval reserve and after warning had been given the squatters to vacate.

The head of the group of squatters, Secretary Roosevelt said, had as late as today notified the navy department that he would "like to think it over" before abandoning his drilling.

Questions U. S. Rights.

Denver, Colo., July 29.—S. H. Keoughan, vice president of the Mutual Oil company, announced late today that the Mutual company's title to this quarter section is exactly the same as other titles held by Harry Sinclair and quitclaimed to the government when Sinclair obtained the Teapot Dome lease. "If marines appear and order us to leave, we will leave but under protest," Mr. Keoughan stated.

IOWAN IS FREED.

An automobile pursuit by Frank Wachman, 4311 Vernon avenue, of Samuel V. Sefren of Des Moines, Ia., Friday night profited him nothing. The Iowan was dismissed on a disorderly conduct charge, which grew out of a charge of perjury concerning a worthless check, by Judge Gemmill yesterday.

Identifies Two as Men Who Stole Beer Truck

Joseph Bangora, 1431 West Congress street, and Ernest Fontana, 1118 West Harrison street, were booked last night at the detective bureau on a charge of robbery on the complaint of Frank Kolek, 3911 West 26th street.

He identified the suspects as robbers who held him up June 20 and seized his truck loaded with thirty-three barrels of near beer. The truck and the beer were valued at $3,000.

Old River Boat Friend of Mark Twain Is Dead

Logansport, Ind., July 29.—[Special.]—Paul Patrick Murphy, 83, for years a Mississippi river steamboat captain and intimate friend of Mark Twain, is dead at his home here. He came here a year ago to live with his daughter. The body will be taken to Lansing, Ia., for interment.

WOMAN DESPONDENT; DIES BY GAS.

Mrs. Mary Benjamin, 60 years old, 723 North Lockwood avenue, yesterday committed suicide by turning on the gas in her basement laundry after closing the doors of the room. Despondency over ill health was assigned as the cause.

ALLIES PREPARE FOR GREEK RAID ON GOLDEN HORN

Rush Reinforcements to Constantinople.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 29.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—Diplomatic and military circles here fear that a portion of the Greek army, stationed at Thrace, may attempt a raid on Constantinople despite the efforts of the Athens government to hold them in check, as the allied representative in Piraeus has warned King Constantine against such an enterprise.

Gen. Hadjanesti, commander of the Greek army, has arrived in Thrace by a fast destroyer from Smyrna. After an inspection of the troops, Gen Hadjanesti reported that he has ordered a substitution of disaffected divisions stationed for two years in Thrace by fresh troops from Asia Minor.

Diplomatic Circles Uneasy.

It was the attitude of these troops that caused the allies uneasiness despite an official announcement issued by the Greeks today that Athens did not contemplate any move to take Constantinople without allied sanction. The Greeks explained the activity in Thrace as being reorganization to allow quick action should the allies permit the Hellenic forces to move on Constantinople.

Distinct uneasiness was felt in political and financial circles here following THE TRIBUNE'S exclusive announcement of the Greek ambition to seize Constantinople, coupled with Prime Minister Lloyd George's pessimistic war warnings yesterday.

Today Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, minister of war, ordered the British garrison at Constantinople reinforced by the second battalion of the Royal Sussex regiment, now stationed at Malta. These 1,000 men are to be rushed to the golden horn immediately to strengthen the allied forces, which are chiefly French and include a handful of Italian and British.

Warships Bar Sea Attack.

Gen. Sir Charles Harrington, commanding the allied forces in Constantinople, is inspecting the defensive positions of Constaptinople, and has ordered the French and Senegalese forces holding the strategic Chatalja sector reinforced.

Any attempted Greek advance would strike Chatalja, following the sole railway, as the Greeks are unable to approach by sea through the presence of the powerful British flotilla in the sea of Marmora.

FRENCH SEND 6,000

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 29.—About 6,000 French troops, mostly Senegalese Morrocan veterans, were rushed up to the Chatalja lines above Constantinople today to block by force of arms any Greek advance, the French government announced today.

The French, British, and Italian governments are so fearful that King Constantine intends to undertake his reckless coup de theater against Constantinople, owing to the latest reports of their high commissioners there, that all three have sent sharp warnings to Athens in the last forty-eight hours.

The allied military and diplomatic representatives in Constantinople report great Greek troop concentrations in Thrace.

The Greek note delivered Thursday night to the allied governments upsets all prospective peace settlements of the Turco-Greek war. The Greek government practically resumes full liberty of action, owing to the failure up to date of the Curzon mediation plan, under which Greece agreed to complete the military evacuation in Asia.

KIDNAPED?

MARIE WALTER.

Chicago police have failed to find trace of 17 year old Marie Walter, of Lockport, Ill., missing from home since Monday, following attentions from a "mysterious stranger."

"I believe she was lured away," said her mother, Mrs. F. J. Walter, who declared everything would be forgiven if Marie would come home.

Charles Hammes, 3900 Jefferson street, enlisted the aid of THE TRIBUNE to find his 16-year-old sister-in-law, Evelyn Umlor, of Detfoit, who hasn't been seen since last week. He believes her to have been lured away by a man representing himself to be a moving picture producer. Her mother is critically ill.

O, FOR A HAYS OF THE BILL O' FARE, EAT MOGULS SIGH

New York, July 29.—"Emperor of the Eats" may be the title of a new officer to be elected by the National Restaurant convention in Washington on Oct. 9 to 13, according to the plans of the Society of Restaurateurs today.

"There is need in the restaurant business for a man like Will Hays in the movies or Judge Landis in baseball," says the restaurant men. "The industry is being made the target for so many restrictive laws and regulations that a 'shock absorber' is wanted."

CHICAGO SOLONS TO VIEW SIGHTS OF VIENNA TODAY

Reach Austrian Capital Ahead of Schedule.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, July 29.—Fatigued, hot, and dusty from the journey from Prague, and discommoded by the difficulty of eating in Vienna before 8 p. m., the Chicago aldermen and municipal experts arrived here late this afternoon a day ahead of their schedule.

Tomorrow being Sunday, they will be unable to study municipal improvements, so will spend their time sightseeing until Monday morning, when they will be received formally by Burgomaster Ryman and be taken on a preliminary inspection of the city.

Wives to Be Entertained.

Except for a heated dispute between Austrian customs officials and several aldermen when the former seized a bundle of dollar bills among the baggage, the trip was without incident. The Austrians apologized later.

Mrs. Carol Foster, wife of the American consul here, will entertain the women of the party at tea tomorrow.

Yanks Quench Thirst.

Mr. Foster will present the Chicagoans to the burgomaster, who put a parlor street car at their disposal while they are investigating the traction lines, zoning system, and subway, which has not been operating since the war. As Vienna originated modern granite pavements fifty years ago, the permanence of this construction can best be observed here.

Vienna cafés tonight took on a more American aspect owing to the presence of hundreds of tourists in addition to the Chicagoans. Former Senator J. Hamilton Lewis and wife are among the Yankees in Vienna.

AMERICAN FOR 59 YEARS, GOMPERS IS FELICITATED

Washington, D. C., July 29.—Samuel Gompers, who has been called "the grand old man of American labor," by virtue of his long tenure of office as president of the American Federation of Labor, observed today the fifty-ninth anniversary of what he considers one of the biggest events of his life—his landing in the United States as an English imigrant boy.

The labor chieftain spent the day in New York, but his office at the federation of labor headquarters here was visited by a stream of messenger boys bringing telegrams and letters of congratulation and good wishes. Messages came from Alfred Smith, former governor of New York; Charles C. Lockwood, member of the New York legislature and chairman of the Lockwood committee; Adolph Lewisohn, and George W. Perkins, president of the International Cigar Makers' union, of which Mr. Gompers is vice president.

STUDENTS INVADE HUNGARY HOUSE, BEAT DEPUTIES

Gang Demands Release of Disturber.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

VIENNA, July 29.—Again, following the students' raid on the Budapest parliament yesterday, demanding the prime minister to release Capt. Hayas, arrested for organizing new bands to wage war against the Austrian administration, the Burgenland captain was today freed, the government merely announcing the trial was pending.

Capt. Hayas is the organizer of the "awakening Hungarians," a society trying to bring the restoration of Hungarian property lost by the peace treaty.

Beat Up Deputies.

About 100 students, appearing during parliament's session, interrupted the proceedings and beat up several deputies who favored the arrest of Capt. Hayas. They kept crying, "Down with the Jews." They demanded to see Count Bethlen immediately.

When Count Bethlen appeared he was asked to explain the arrest of the Hungarian patriot.

Reply of Bethlen.

He replied, "At the present time numerous Hungarians, although guided by patriotic motives, are actually menacing the best interests of the country. I contend that any one organizing irregular bands to fight the Austrians in Bugenland are misguided patriots who endanger rather than are saviors of the country. Justice must be satisfied."

Reiterating the demand that Capt. Hayas be released, the students left, yelling "Down with the Jews."

CHECK PASSER FREED.

After making restitution of $10 each to four friends, Frank Courtney, charged with passing worthless checks, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Emmanuel Eller at the East Chicago avenue court.

SOCIALIST URGES ITALY'S KING BE MADE DICTATOR

ROME, July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Prof. Ettore Ciccotti, a former Socialist deputy, writing in Giornale d'Italia, fearing civil war, contends that such a condition would be avoidable by a year of mild dictatorship, giving the king the same powers as those held by the President of the United States in choosing his own cabinet outside of parliament and without being subject to its indorsement.

King Victor Emanuel received former Premier Orlando in audience today to discuss again the possibility of his forming a ministry. Sig. Filippo Turati, leader of the Moderate Socialists, also was invited by his majesty to the Quirinal.

Sixty Socialist deputies met in the chamber today and passed a resolution to go into power if the opportunity presented itself. They considered it the best way to protect the proletariat against the Fascisti, 50,000 of whom threatened to concentrate in the Carrara district.

Rain Delays Algonquin Camp Fete Until Today

The lawn fete at Heatherton farm, Naperville, for the benefit of the Algonquin camp, postponed yesterday because of the rain, will be held today, beginning at 4 p. m. Thirty artists will be present to entertain by dancing, singing and dramatic productions. Mrs. G. M. Shirk is in charge of the program.

What's in a name —when you buy lumber?

The name of a grade of lumber may mean much or little. If each individual has his own grading rules, the grades will vary just as individuals vary. But when a group of individuals all agree on one set of grading rules—then you have a STANDARD. The purpose of a standard is to establish a basis for value.

The members of the Chicago Retail Lumber Dealers Association sell Standard Grades of Lumber. Thus, they can guarantee grade, as well as full measure and uniform quality.

For these reasons it is important to buy your lumber from the dealers who use the CRLDA trade-mark. It identifies and guarantees the lumber you buy.

Bezark's AUGUST SALE OF FURS STARTING TOMORROW

WE planned to open our enlarged Fur Department by August 1st—and about three months ago bought up a tremendously large assortment of quality Furs at a great price concession, in order to open the new department with a sensational sale. Due to labor delays the alterations will not be completed on time. We are therefore overstocked with this merchandise and must sacrifice these wonderful garments at even lower prices than was originally planned. Come early—it's the opportunity of the season. Sale starts tomorrow at 8:30 A. M.

CHITA, BACKED BY MOSCOW, SHOWS TEETH TO TOKIO

Negotiations for Parley May Collapse.

BY RODERICK MATHESON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOKIO, July 29.—Unexpected hitches are appearing in the Chita-Japanese negotiations to renew their conference with a view to concluding a commercial treaty. Chita, presumably encouraged by Moscow, is showing its teeth and is abruptly refusing to consider some of the Japanese proposals regarding the scope of the conference.

The Osaka Mainichi states it is known here that Chita is submitting everything to Moscow, from where its instructions come. The withdrawal of the Japanese forces from Siberia is now regarded in soviet circles as evidence of internal trouble in Japan which is strengthening the Chita attitude.

Jap Paper Warns Chita.

The Mainichi says:

"While Japan is anxious to withdraw peacefully, regardless of Chita's relations with Moscow, and to conclude a treaty of amity with Chita, should the latter adopt a procrastinating attitude, depending upon Moscow for support and thereby failing to sign a basic agreement by the middle of August, Japan will be obliged to resort to a free hand for the protection of Japanese subjects in Siberia and in the disposition of seized arms.

"The result of such a free hand will be disadvantageous to Chita. It is understood that the Japanese government will draft policies prepared to meet either contingency while hoping for a sincere reply from Chita."

Merkuloff Faces Defeat.

Commander Arita of the army transport department, who is here regarding the withdrawal of forces from Siberia, says that Vladivostok is vastly interested in the Japanese plans, hoping that evacuation will be gradual, while the Reds are insisting on immediate withdrawal.

President Merkuloff of the Vladivostok government has only 1,000 rifles to depend on, and therefore he would be swamped immediately. Many leading Russians are preparing to move to Kamchatka before the Japanese evacuation.

No Submarines Lost, Is Belief of Naval Officials

San Francisco, Cal., July 29.—[United Press.]—Naval headquarters was advised today by Commander W. S. Miller of Los Angeles submarine base that there was "nothing to a report that four submarines are missing off Lower California."

A radio message from a submarine "mother shop," the Beaver, which was escorting twelve United States submarines from the Pacific coast to Hampton roads, ordering the L-8 to take a tow was picked up and led to rumors that the subs were in trouble. The order was declared to be mere routine.

The Hart Schaffner & Marx pavilion at the Pageant of Progress

SEC. C, SOUTH GALLERY, MUNICIPAL PIER

OUR IDEA is that if we're going to do a thing, do it as well as we know how It may be making a suit of clothes for a man or a boy, or a coat for some stylish woman; or it may be a show place on the Municipal Pier—we put our best into it

In the case of this pavilion our artists have left nothing undone to make it an outstanding display; it follows the convention of the early Spanish Renaissance, and to embellish this effect we have gathered some interesting pieces of Spanish and early sixteenth century Italian art

If you have a love for beautiful design and artistry you'll enjoy this display; you'll enjoy seeing the new fall models for men and boys, too; and the coats for women—all shown on living models

FASHION SHOW EVERY HOUR BEGINNING AT 10 A. M.

QUAKES ALARM SPAIN IN VIEW OF YANK'S PROPHECY

He Said So. Europe and No. Africa Would Vanish

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 29.—The biggest news from America in the Paris newspapers for three days was the prophecy of Dr. Milton Nobles, an American savant, that an earthquake would shortly swallow up southern Europe and northern Africa.

It is reported tonight that slight shocks in Granada province, Spain, have caused a panic among thousands who are fleeing from their homes the same as near Budapest, where a large district is panic stricken. Likewise there is terror throughout Roumania. All the scares are due to a belief that Dr. Nobles' earthquake is approaching.

Dr. Nobles' Hat.

The greatest savants of Europe are ponderously and politely explaining that Dr. Nobles is talking through his hat, and that everybody should sit tight.

"I have studied under M. Foque Lacroix, the greatest of the French volcano experts," said M. Gentil, a professor of physical geography at the Sorbonne. "I can swear that there is no scientific method for foretelling volcanic activity in an inactive district.

Earth Trembling Constantly.

"These regional disturbances reported today from many places in Europe do not have any relationship to volcanic disturbances. They happen frequently on the edge of mountainous regions. Earth shocks are not important as the earth is trembling constantly."

Prof. Koevesligethy of Budapest says that Dr. Nobles is talking about political shocks.

32D DIVISION TO RECRUIT HERE FOR ITS ANNUAL REUNION

R. L. Bass, 4641 Sheridan road, has been named "recruiting officer" for Chicago veterans of the 32d division, A. E. F. That unit will hold its anuual reunion at Madison, Wis., Aug. 26-29. A big sports carnival is one of the attractions. While the 32nd. division was made up largely of Michigan and Wisconsin men, there are a large number of Chicagoans who will attend the meeting. Bass, who was a first lieutenant in the 128th Inf., states.

ROBERT L. BASS.

50 Years of Wedded Life Celebrated by Couple

Emil R. and Elizabeth Hoffman, 3317 South Irving avenne, were married fifty years ago yesterday in Germany. The event was again solemnized last night at St. Philip's church, 36th street and Seeley avenne, the Rev. Father Fleer officiating. A reception at the Brighton club parlors, 2647 West 35th street, followed the ceremonies at the church. Some 200 guests were present.

The groom at this golden wedding is 76, while the bride is 74. They have five children, fifteen grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. All were at the festivities. Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, long residents of Chicago, have been active for years in the Knights of the Maccabees, an organization which Emil Hoffman assisted in founding.

IRISH LINE UP TO KILL IRISH IN OLD LIMERICK

Rebels Fall Back to Last Line of Defense.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, July 29.—Now commanding the situation throughout the rest of Ireland, the Irish government is concentrating its military forces in the southwest, where the irregulars will make a last stand in Counties Cork and Kerry.

During the week, the Nationals cleared the irregulars from all important points in Counties Donegal, Sligo, Mayo, Galway, and Clare. Armed bands continue to roam in the extreme western parts of these counties, but the country they are operating in is rough and in some places barren and sparsely inhabited. Leaving small flying columns to round up these bandits the bulk of troops is available for more serious work in the south.

Line Up for Battle.

For a week both sides have been strengthening their forces along the railroad at Limerick Junction and Charleville Junction, the possession of which is vital, these Republican garrisons holding Tipperary, Cahir, and Clonmel. Various sources report that Eamon de Valera is visiting these points, Carrick-on-Suir, and other towns, probably for the purpose of heartening the men, knowing that the loss of these strong points would greatly simplify the advance upon Cork.

This advance was resumed late Friday, when Bruree was taken, and an announcement of the occupation of towns further south will not be unexpected.

Mine Kills One.

The Nationals took Golden on the road between Cashel and Tipperary. The irregulars evacuated Killenaule and Ballinure, falling back to Cashel.

Two officers and one private were killed and four were wounded in a combination mine explosion and ambush near Maryborough. The Nationals were misinformed as to the location of the mine, and the explosion killed one and wounded four, and destroyed a motor lorry. Another lorry carrying investigators was ambushed and two officers were killed by the first volley. Twenty-eight irregulars then surrendered.

Turn of Fate.

Zean O'Daire of Lisburne was arrested in Glasgow in 1920 for attempting to rescue Frank Carty from a patrol wagon. He was acquitted after months through failure to identify him. He was arrested in December, 1921, for the possession of ammunition. He was released by the treaty.

The fighting in Dublin brought him from Glasgow to enlist in the national army. He was killed in an ambush near Collooney, Frank Carty leading the ambush party.

Ask Aid of People.

The aid of the people has been asked in removing the hundreds of obstacles blocking the roads in a letter from the government, addressed through parish priests in the south and west.

All Republican courts were wiped out by decree of the Dail Eireann minister of home affairs, and per agreement with England the judicary will function until the Irish constitution is adopted.

Sees De Valera with Rifle.

DUBLIN, July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Travelers in Dublin today who said they saw Eamon de Valera at Clonmel early this week said he was carrying a rifle and that he looked worn and haggard.

REPUBLICAN ARMY REPORT

New York, July 29.—The Irish republican forces are still holding the south of Ireland solidly, the capture of Waterford and Limerick by the Free State troops not having affected the strength of the defensive lines, it is declared in a message from republican headquarters in Cork, sent on July 28 to the editor of the Irish World here. The message, signed by Sean Ua Tuama (John Toomey), chairman of the press committee of the republican headquarters, was sent by direction of Liam Lynch, republican chief of staff. It says:

"Republican Headquarters, Cork, July 28, 1922.—Editor the Irish World:

"The military situation has not materially altered since the last message (July 20). The bombastic reports sent by the Free State authorities should be largely discounted in the United States. Fresh supplies of British artillery and armored cars have enabled the Free State forces to cause the evacuation of some towns on the main routes, but the republican garrisons occupying these towns automatically form mobile columns and carry on guerrilla warfare in front and rear of the Free State army, cutting and harrassing communications. In this type of warfare the Free State army is altogether outmatched by the republicans.

The Solid South.

"The solid south, viz, Cork, Kerry, Waterford, West Limerick, and South Tipperary, is still intact and unaffected by the loss, through artillery bombardment of Waterford and Limerick, the cities at either extreme of the southern frontier. Both Waterford and Limerick were skillfully evacuated under a devastating rain of shells from Churchill's guns.

"In the west of Ireland republican control continues to predominate, the Sligo are now dominated by these only important feature since the last message being the Free State artillery advance into Mayo and North Galway, taking towns on the main line. The republican garrisons which held these towns have now formed flying columns. Donegal, half of Clare and columns.

In Midlands and East.

"In the midlands and east conditions are fundamentally similar to those in the west. The towns are under control of Free State forces, but guerrilla operations continue in the country districts. Collins' claim to absolute control of all Leinster is absurd. In Dublin City the republicans have resumed active attacks as in the former war against the British."

Carrie Nation's Old Chum Comes Out for Strikers

Topeka, Kas., July 29.—Myra McHenry, years ago runningmate of the late Carrie Nation, came to Topeka today, as she asserted, "to beard the lion in his den." She paraded about the statehouse and on Kansas avenue wearing a full length white apron bearing the insignia in large letters: "I am for the strikers 100 per cent." A police officials took her to the police station, but later she was released, still wearing the strike insignia. Mrs. McHenry admitted she was disappointed in not being able to "break into jail," as she put it.

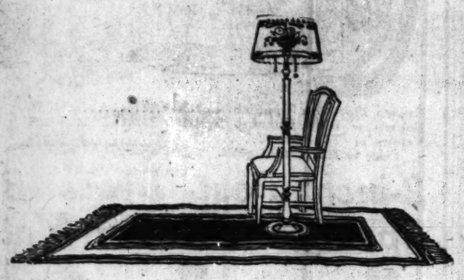
FOUNDED IN 1856

Furniture,
Curtains, Rugs,
Interior Decorations

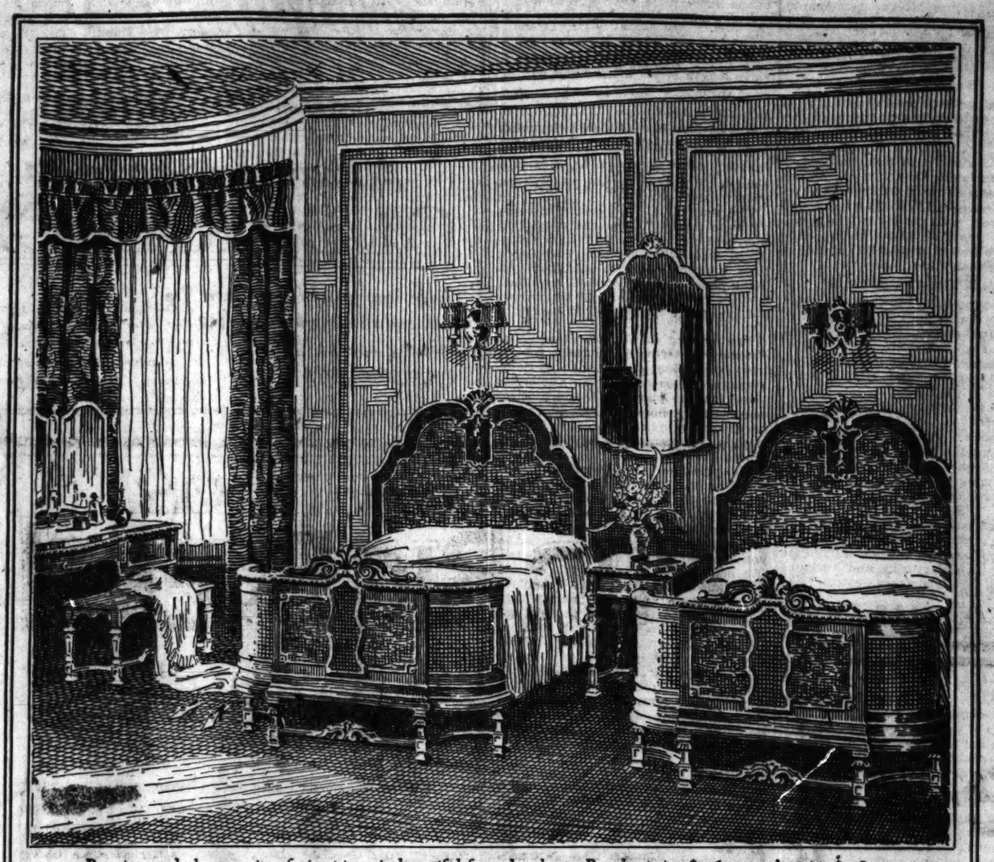


Rugs

Hundreds of fine Persian and Chinese rugs from our regular stock have been reduced 10% to 35%. All sizes—large, medium and small—are included.

Substantial reductions have also been made on certain Chenille and Wilton carpets.

Our Oriental and Chinese rugs are selected by experts who have spent the better part of their lives in the Orient. Their extraordinary ability to judge the merits of weave and design enables us to place before our customers a collection in which every single rug measures up to Tobey standards of excellence.



Renaissance bedroom suite of nine pieces in beautiful figured walnut. Regular price, $1960.00; sale price, $1384.00.

Curtains

Reductions of 25% to 33⅓% are offered in drapery fabrics, cretonnes and made-up curtains.

As usual, the services of skilled decorators are available without charge, making this a most excellent opportunity to furnish tastefully and at a material saving.

Our Curtain Department is specially well equipped to make up curtains and hangings to order. The workroom is under the direct supervision of one of the most experienced drapery men in the country and is noted for the fine quality and individuality of its productions.

Semi-ANNUAL SALE

Beginning Monday Morning

This Sale includes nearly every bit of furniture in the store. Hundreds of beautiful pieces have been reduced 25% to 50% and almost everything else is marked at substantially reduced sale prices.

To the bargains in our regular stock we have added special discount purchases. These are made up of remarkably beautiful furniture—the regular Tobey standard—bought at reductions of 25% to 50% and offered to our customers at the same discount.

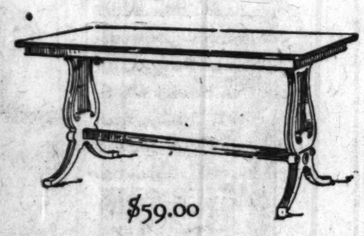
The Semi-Annual Sale has become a recognized opportunity for economy in Chicago. Probably the most important factor in gaining this public confidence has been the genuineness of the Tobey Sale.

The reductions shown on Tobey price tags have always represented the actual savings to the purchaser, and the quality of the furniture has been the same as at other times.

When one considers that we have held such sales since 1888 it is not surprising that a veritable army of Chicagoans regard the Tobey Sale as America's greatest furniture event.

We believe that this Sale is going to eclipse all of the 67 sales of the past and that anyone who buys now will effect greater economies than ever before.

Sale goods can be purchased now and held here for Fall delivery, if desired



$59.00

Italian walnut dining table; top, 45x60; extending to six feet. Regular price, $85.00; sale price, $59.00. There are chairs and other pieces to match this design and finish at proportionate prices.

Our exhibit of inexpensive dining-room furniture is of great interest, showing, as it does, how easily one can furnish with good furniture that is distinctive in design and low in cost. Here, too, there are great savings to be made by taking advantage of the sale opportunities.

$68.00

This big, roomy armchair will be an excellent choice for the room that needs a good comfortable piece.

It is a good-looking model and built to stand a lot of use.

Covered in tapestry it is $60.00; in velvet, $68.00.

A sofa to go with it is $103.00 in tapestry and $115.00 in velvet.

A fine assortment of odd chairs and rockers is reduced 25%. Wing chairs, cane chairs and overstuffed chairs, large and small, are included.

LEGION AUXILIARY BACKS SPRAGUE IN SOLDIER FIGHT

Survey Shows Neglect of Mentally Sick.

"The women of the American Legion auxiliary, 160,000 strong, are back of you in your demand that Brig. Gen. Sawyer cease interfering with the hospital building program," writes Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart of Cincinnati, president of the auxiliary, in a letter received by Col. A. A. Sprague, chairman of the Legion's hospitalization committee, yesterday.

"Gen. Sawyer says that there are 10,000 vacant beds in government hospitals," the letter continues. "If this is true, why are 3,500 men still kept in contract hospitals which every expert agrees should not be used? Why are army mental cases sent to state institutions? Every day that Gen. Sawyer delays, surveys, and coördinates means that many of our soldiers pass the border line from nervousness and temporary hallucinations into permanent insanity. They lose their reason while hospital sites are considered and reconsidered."

Tours Western States.

Mrs. Hobart declares that the defense by government officials of Gen. Sawyer's conduct of the hospitalization board means nothing. She states she has just returned from a tour of nine western states, where she had an opportunity to observe conditions in both government and contract institutions.

In one contract hospital, the auxiliary head states, men were condemned to remain in one ward for six months without recreation and with other mental cases as their only companions. The surroundings were grim and cheerless, she said, and there was nothing in the atmosphere to help the border-line case to sanity and good health.

Advises Sawyer to View Them.

"If Gen. Sawyer and his witnesses could visit a contract hospital and learn conditions as I did, at first hand, their hearts would prompt them to take a more humane view of the care of shell shocked veterans. Many of the patients in government hospitals have only one nightmare—that is that they might be sent to a contract institution," Mrs. Hobart states.

She expresses indignation that Gen. Sawyer should assert that few persons were now interested in the disabled veteran. She insists that the entire body of women over whom she presides are keeping in almost daily touch with the veterans in hospitals. "The women have not forgotten and will not forget," Mrs. Hobart concludes.

Naval Bombardment to Feature Ad Post Picnic

A naval bombardment by the Illinois Naval Reserves, under the command of Capt. Edward A. Evers, will be one of the features of a beach frolic to be held at Fort Sheridan Saturday, Aug. 19, by the Advertising Men's post, American Legion. A long program for the day has been arranged.

TAKES POISON BY MISTAKE.

A mistake of taking a teaspoonful of powdered arsenic compound for sedlitz powder yesterday put John Taylor, a janitor at 215 Elm street, in the Passavant hospital. He may recover.

CHEERS; TEARS!

MRS. LA VERNE WEBER.

"All wives are bad, yet two blest hours they give;
When first they wed, and when they cease to live."

Such was the philosophy of Maximillian Weber, proprietor of motor sales rooms at 3911 Sheridan road and 3316 South Park avenue, combating the efforts of Mrs. La Vergne Weber, 848 Bradley place, to obtain separate maintenance.

Weber, whose income is said to approximate $83,000 annually, nonchalantly ordered Mrs. Weber to leave their home at 5538 Magnolia avenue, after threatening to kill her, according to the bill filed by Attorney William L. Sullivan, but broke down and wept bitterly yesterday when Judge Joseph B. David ordered him to pay Mrs. Weber monthly alimony of $150 in addition to solicitors fees of $250, pending the disposition of her petition.

Veterans Told How to Get "Certificates of Injury"

Washington, D. C., July 29.—[Special.]—A certificate of injury must be obtained by all veterans of the world war who sustained an injury or contracted a disease in the service which is likely to result in disability or death. The certificates are being issued by the veterans' bureau under section 306 of the war risk insurance act as amended to Aug. 9, 1921. Application for this certificate must be made prior to Aug. 9. All that is necessary to obtain the certificate is to write to the director of the U. S. veterans' bureau, Washington, D. C. giving name, rank, organization, date of enlistment and discharge, and stating the circumstances under which the disease or injury in question was incurred.

War Hero's Insurance to One Intended For, Ruling

Cincinnati, O., July 29.—The interest of the federal government and of the public which paid the larger part of the war risk insurance premiums on the lives of soldiers is to see that the intent of the man who died is carried out, according to a decision today by Judge John W. Peck. Claims of a half brother and a half sister in the insurance of Albert R. Marshall, killed overseas, are denied, and the insurance is left to an aunt, who raised Marshall.

3 HELD IN ROBBERIES.

James McKenzie, 2200 South Michigan avenue; Dennis McMahon, 2925 Lexington avenue, and James Hill, 3546 North Halsted street, are held at the detective bureau as suspects in more than a dozen robberies.

ZONING EXCLUDES HEAVY FACTORIES FROM DOWNTOWN

Becomes "Commercial District."

Downtown Chicago is to be zoned as a "commercial district," thus giving large latitude for its expansion along all except manufacturing lines, Commissioner of Buildings Bostrom, chairman of the city zoning commission, announced yesterday.

In "commercial districts" all property uses permitted in residential, apartment, and business zones are permitted, only uses relegated to manufacturing districts being barred. The latter consist mainly of heavy manufacturing and factories generally consigned to the nuisance class.

Has Zoned Itself.

"The downtown district has practically zoned itself, and it has done the job better than any other part of the city with the exception of certain residential districts," Mr. Bostrom said.

"For instance, the shops and professional men's offices along Michigan avenue; the stores of Wabash avenue and State street, with the big offices above, and the financial offices of La Salle street are well located and do not interfere with each other in any way.

Small Factories Allowed.

"When we go west to Franklin street we find some light manufacturing establishments. These under the rules we have laid down are permitted in commercial districts, as they do not interfere with the other types of property uses in the district.

"The boundaries of the loop commercial district have not been decided, but it is probable that we will lay out a heavy manufacturing district on the southwest side of the downtown commercial zone to take care of the railroad, warehouse, and dock interests there."

By designating it as a commercial zone the downtown district will be protected forever from the encroachments of heavy manufacturing and nuisance factories, Mr. Bostrom asserted.

MACON HAS NEAR RACE RIOT WHEN DEPUTY IS SLAIN

Macon, Ga., July 29.—Spasmodic firing at colored men and a search by hundreds of persons headed by sheriff's deputies for "Cocky" Glover, colored, followed the killing of Walter C. Byrd, a deputy sheriff, and the wounding of three colored men here tonight in a shooting affray in a Negro poolroom.

The killing followed the entry into the poolroom of Deputy Byrd, accompanied by Deputies Romus Raley and Will Jakes, the latter colored, in search of a criminal. Glover, who police said they knew well, was accused of having shot Byrd in the back.

A number of arrests were made in the poolroom, but Glover escaped by leaping through a window.

NEW NAVAL RADIO TO CONNECT WITH PHONES IN HOMES

BY CHARLES SLOAN.

With the announcement yesterday by the superintendent of the ninth naval district that the new broadcasting station at the Great Lakes Naval Training school has been completed and will within the next week be placed in operation, Chicago telephone subscribers have a new outlet for long distance communication.

The new station has a range of more than 300 miles. It will operate on a wave length of 597 meters and will be used primarily for postoffice and weather reports.

Regulations are to be forthcoming from Washington shortly, however, that will allow broadcasting of certain classes of private messages—perhaps even musical concerts.

The station will be operated through "remote control" from the municipal pier, and connections have been established with the telephone company's lines whereby one can talk from his home phone and one's voice, amplified a million or so times, will be carried out into space through ether waves.

The opening day of the Pageant of Progress yesterday gave radio fans a new conception of the use of loud speaking apparatus. In numerous places on the pier the Western Electric company has installed enormous horns and amplifying devices which carry announcements clearly to every spectator.

The principle of the speaker is the same as the smaller type recently placed on the market for home use by the corporation — and virtually the same as those used during the recent demonstration at Hawthorne when the voices of numerous telephone and electric company officials were carried over land wires from San Francisco to New York and then successfully broadcasted to the more than 28,000 employes gathered at the plant.

Incidentally radio fans appreciated the few but very good exhibits of wireless apparatus which were clustered in the electrical section at the show. More than a dozen firms are represented and within their exhibits are shown the products of more than a hundred manufacturers.

Station K-Y-W's chapel services today will be conducted by the Rev. J. Allen Leas, pastor of Holy Trinity English Lutheran church, Addison street and Maple Square avenue. The program follows:

Solos—Mrs. Ed Gustafson, soprano; William Geweke, baritone.
Sermon: "Twenty Minutes in a Laboratory."
Anthems: Holy Trinity choir; Mrs. Gustafson, soprano; Miss Esther Leas, contralto; George Perl, tenor; William Geweke, baritone, and George W. Colberg, organist and director.

$6,000 IN BONDS TOTAL OF LOOT IN KATZ THEFT

Six thousand dollars in bonds was declared yesterday to have been the loot of a lone bandit who on July 26 entered the home of Ignatz Katz, 6732 Cregier avenue, wealthy packer, slugged a maid with a heavy vase, and escaped in the ensuing uproar.

The schedule of the loss was made to the Hyde Park police.

Simultaneously H. A. Harris, 7614 Cornell avenue, reported that his home had been entered Friday afternoon and money, jewelry, and clothing valued at $1,500 taken.

announce the opening of their new RADIO
Department

On Our Main Floor
Jackson Boulevard

The opening of this new radio store is the result of months of preparation. Only after we were absolutely sure that we could continue to serve in this new field as in our other departments, did we feel we could make this announcement. Careful investigations of merchandise were necessary.

We could not offer radio apparatus until we knew it had been proven. Again shortages made it imperative that we obtain sufficient stock to supply radio enthusiasts.

All this took time. But now you will find here the products of reliable, high grade manufacturers. Our supplies are ample. Complete range of outfits at popular prices.

In this new and difficult field the radio store, located on the first floor, next to the Jackson Boulevard entrance, offers you the best the market produces. Radio experts are in charge. They are ready to serve you. They bring to your assistance actual experience in wireless telephony.

A special demonstration room affords leisure in selection. Here, too you may consult our staff on the installation of aerials.

Our Service Bureau is at the disposal of amateurs. Information gladly furnished on radio subjects. We also maintain a skilled repair force, equipped to repair all makes. Outfits installed and aerials erected at moderate cost. All work fully guaranteed.

STATE CLAIMS IT CAN LINK "BIG 3" TO POLICE DEATH

Labor Trial Expected to End This Week.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Additional evidence directly connecting John Miller, driver of the automobile which carried the slayers of Acting Police Lieut. Terrence Lyons, on the night of May 9, with the men who at that time were directors in Building Trades council tactics, will be presented against the five defendants at the resumption of the trial tomorrow morning before Judge Thomas Taylor Jr.

Special Assistant State's Attorney Elwood Godman said yesterday that he had a witness who would tell of having seen Miller in the office of "Big Tim" Murphy, one of the defendants, at 184 West Washington street, at 4:30 o'clock on the afternoon previous to the murder. Testimony already given in the trial has shown that Murphy was one of the men behind the scenes in Building Trades affairs, that he had his sluggers present at two elections. At one time, it is said, the old group in control of the council was considering moving headquarters to Murphy's office.

Say No Defense Needed.

While the attorneys for the state continue to maintain that a good case has been made out showing that Murphy, Fred Mader, and Daniel J. McCarthy, with "Con" Shea in the offing, were the men responsible for the inauguration of the bombing and slugging campaign last spring against workers and builders operating under the Landis wage scale agreement, and that the jury has the fair right to draw the inference that the murder of Lyons was a direct, although accidental, outcome of these actions, the defense attorneys declare that no case has been made out and that no elaborate defense is necessary in the trial. In this event the case will go to the jury by the end of this week.

Defense attorneys declare that they will prove beyond question that Miller was an "outsider," intimating that while he was on crooked work that it had no connection with the bombing. It will be shown, it is promised, that he never knew Murphy or any of the other defendants until after his arrest. The fact that he was allowed to remain in jail under police influence and that no lawyer was provided for him is held as good general evidence that he was not connected with the influential ring. The jury will have to decide which one of Miller's stories to believe.

Detroit Suspects Freed.

Police hopes that the two men who accompanied Miller on his errand of mystery the night of the bombing and killings were in custody in Detroit were dissipated yesterday. It developed that "Charley" Daudzauskis, named by Miller as the actual slayer of Lyons, might have been in Detroit in company with two men taken in a raid there, but that the suspect had escaped and was supposed to be in the vicinity of Kankakee, where a search is now being made. The Detroit suspects were released.

Policemen and other witnesses who will be called by the state were in conference yesterday with Mr. Godman, Special State's Attorney Frederick L. Fake, and Assistant State's Attorney Robert McMillan. The state will show that dynamite was found in Miller's house after his arrest. It now develops that although Miller admits he was out in his car that night and knows where he abandoned it on Wood street after the shooting, that he appeared at several police stations the following morning and reported that his car had been stolen.

Mader's Companion.

Further support of the testimony of Henry ("Smash") Hanson in matters subject to corroboration will be made by the state. Hanson's story of the visit of the business agent crews to various buildings on Jan 20 last has been shown to be true. The evidence of M. J. Carboy, Joseph I. Elliott and Henry O'Callaghan also gives additional weight to Hanson's story.

The attacks on Hanson are regarded by the state as reacting against the defense, inasmuch as Hanson and Mader were close companions for months, and Mader picked Hanson out for his agent and bodyguard.

"MEL" TROTTER SAYS HE PROVED HIS WIFE A LIAR

Laments Financial Loss as Result of Trouble.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 29.—[Special.]—The Rev. Melvin E. Trotter today told the court he had proved his wife a liar.

The assertion came in cross examination in Mrs. Trotter's suit for separate maintenance against the superintendent of the City Rescue mission, who asked for a divorce.

Hopes He Proved Lie.

Referring to Mrs. Trotter's letter to the mission board, making certain charges against her husband, including his fatherhood of a baby born to his secretary, Miss Florence Moody, attorney Geib asked, "You made the board believe your wife was a liar."

"I hope I did," came the reply.

"Lost Everything," He Says.

Trotter added that he had made no attempt to learn the identity of the man in the case, beyond a few questions to Miss Moody.

"I have lost everything," Trotter exclaimed. "I lost the position as superintendent of the Pacific Garden mission in Chicago, my lecture engagements at the Moody Bible institute and the office of director of the Bible institute of the Winona Lake conference."

"It has meant a monetary loss to you?"

"Yes, all I have coming in now is my salary as superintendent of the mission."

The evangelist denied emphatically he ever quoted scripture to frighten his wife.

"Believe me, it would take more than pointing my finger to frighten Mrs. Trotter," he said.

CONGREGATION ACCUSES ENGLISH CHURCH RECTOR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 29.—[By Tribune Wireless.]—The removal of Mary's altar, picture of Madonna and child, crucifixes, candles, incense, and other ornaments from the Church of St. Magnus the Martyr was ordered by Chancellor Errington of the London diocese today, stating that it was ordered by the consistory court of London at St. Paul's cathedral.

The Rev. Fynes Clinton, the rector of St. Magnus the Martyr is accused of "Romanist practices" in a petition signed by 646 of the congregation.

Walter Vincent, the church warden, testified that among ornaments introduced into the church were fourteen crosses, a tabernacle, numerous crucifixes, a gilded wooden throne four feet high, eight lighted candlesticks around the altar, and sixteen candlesticks for the exposition of the blessed sacrament. The holy table the rector called the lady altar, and he sprinkled incense before the picture of Madonna and used holy water.

Edwin Gallagher Verger testified that confessions occurred in what was formerly the rector's pew.

Marvelous New Beauty of Face and Figure

In Two Weeks Time—Guaranteed

How One Woman Regained The Radiant Health and Youthful Charm She Thought Gone Forever

A Precious Secret Every Woman Should Know.

Clear Skin, Firm Flesh, Bright Eyes and a Body Tingling with Vitality are what win in love, business or social life. Just watch the Difference in How You Look and Feel After a Short Course of MASTIN'S VITAMON Tablets with your meals.

"Only a woman who has tried as I have the many different kinds of so-called 'instant beauty treatments' of clay, creams, skin-peeling, etc., without deriving scarcely any benefit can fully appreciate what joy I felt when first I realized that I had actually regained the fascinating charm of my girlish face and figure.

"When I became thin, nervous, with flat chest, mottled, blotchy skin and a haggard-looking face I was fully convinced that my youth and beauty had gone forever. So when a friend told me of the amazing and almost miraculous results that women were daily obtaining simply from the use of MASTIN'S VITAMON I decided to give them a trial.

"From day to day my mirror and the scales told the story of returning health, vitality, shapeliness and youthful beauty. What pastes and clays had failed to do for my skin and complexion, MASTIN'S VITAMON had accomplished through aiding Nature to restore the vigor of internal health.

"My own experience with MASTIN'S has been so amazing and truly remarkable that I wish every woman in the land to possess this precious secret which is bound to mean so much to her happiness.

If you want a graceful, shapely figure, beautiful complexion and the "pep" and glow of perfect health such as so many other women have gained, go to any drug store today and get a package of MASTIN'S VITAMON. Simply take two tablets with each meal for a short time and watch results.

If after using MASTIN'S VITAMON you are not entirely satisfied and are not convinced that it has been worth to you far more than you paid for it your druggist will gladly refund your money and the trial will cost you nothing. You can get MASTIN'S at all good druggists

FINANCIAL CRISIS AN ARMAGEDDON CALL TO EUROPE

United Front or Disaster, Herrick Warns.

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—"Europe is against the wall economically," said Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador to France, who returned on a vacation today on the French liner Paris. "The European people are in the same situation, so to speak, as were the allies when Haig's stirring message went forth to the world.

"Following Haig's call there was the complete mobilization of all forces to combat the invader, and the result was victory. There will have to be some such mobilization in the present crisis if Europe is to be saved from financial disaster."

French Spirit Undaunted.

Ambassador Herrick paid a glowing tribute to the industry and indomitable spirit of the French people. In the face of the devastation wrought in the great war the spirit of the French people rises "unafraid and beautiful" amidst the ruins, he said.

"When Americans come to France," Mr. Herrick said, "and I have never known such an influx of our people there, they see France hard at work, trying to blot out the wreckage of the war and put herself on a sound basis financially. There is vitrually no unemployment.

"This Is Our Busy Day."

"Despite France's financial crisis, one cannot be pessimistic about her future in view of the spirit of the people. They are undiscouraged and uncomplaining and they work, work, work. The crops, I am glad to say, are better than was expected, but not so big as the banner crop of 1920."

W. MADISON ST. BRIDGE WILL BE CLOSED 2 WEEKS

Another knot will be tied in downtown traffic late this week or early next, when workmen begin the long delayed task of completing the West Madison street bridge.

Keller & Elliott, the bridge contractors, informed City Engineer Murdoch yesterday that the 500 6x12 subfloor timbers, which are being creosoted in Terre Haute, Ind., are expected in Chicago by the middle of the week. Within three days after their arrival the bridge will be lowered with temporary motors already in place.

West Madison street business men are fretting over the long delay, which, city engineers say, will be necessary to complete the work. The bridge will be closed to all traffic, including pedestrian, for two weeks. In one month the car track will be ready for use, and in sixty days the bridge will be open to vehicular traffic and both car tracks will be ready for use, according to the present schedule.

Retired Farmer, 72, Takes Girl, 20, as Bride

Parker T. Shannon, 72 years old, retired farmer and goat breeder of Belvidere, Ill., and Miss Edna Borgner, 20 years old, of Beloit, Wis., were married by Justice of the Peace Fred M. Howk at Joliet, Ill., yesterday.

The parents of the bride witnessed the ceremony. The couple will live at Belvidere.

[Raymor Studios Photo.]

Mrs. H. M. Sondel of 3401 Southport avenue has been chosen as director of a new artists' fraternity which is to benefit students from musical, dramatic, and dancing schools. Its purpose is to cooperate with churches, schools, and clubs desiring to give entertainments or benefit programs and supply the artists from among students who are obliged to earn their tuition.

The new organization is sponsored by Bishop Charles P. Anderson, Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Dr. John Timothy Stone, Dr. Dennis J. Dunne, and Prof. R. W. Stevens.

GARLAND'S FIRST BEQUEST TO AID "MINERS' FAMINE"

New York, July 29.—The first appropriation out of the $800,000 given to the new American fund for public service by Charles Garland, young Massachusetts idealist, who is giving away his inherited fortune, will go to "the relief of starving miners in the western Pennsylvania coal fields."

The appropriation, amounting to $2,000, was authorized by the board of directors yesterday at their first meeting. Garland was present.

For a time the principal of the fund established by Garland "for the benefit of mankind," will remain intact, only the income being used for appropriations. To determine how best to spend the money four committees will survey the fields of [1] periodicals and publications; [2] educational campaigns for new ideas; [3] exprimental educational institutions, and [4] research, particularly in industry and economics.

AUTOISTS ASKED TO AID CHILDREN TO THEATER TRIP

Can you help out a bunch of poor kids by taking as many as you can carry in your automobile to and from the Chicago theater next Thursday afternoon?

Miss Harriet Vittum, director of Northwestern university settlement house, is arranging a party for 100 poor children at that theater. The youngsters leave the settlement house about 1 p. m. The settlement house is at 3000 Augusta street.

The program which the youngsters will attend is Wallace Reid in Richard Harding Davis' play, "The Dictator." This, together with a number of smaller films and musical numbers, will constitute the program of the week. Balaban & Katz will entertain the party of kids gratis, but autoists are wanted who will help transport them.

FRANCE OPENS TANGIER HARBOR TO U. S. BIDDERS

Challenge to British Gibraltar Power.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 29.—A French note assuring the American government that work of building harbor improvements at Tangier is open to American bidders has just been sent to Washington.

The note is in reply to a protest from the American diplomatic representative at Tangier, in addition to British and Italian protests, that tenders for the vast harbor improvements there were being called for by the French ministry of public works before the international status of the port had been agreed on by the powers. The importance of the improvement project is that since the era of submarines and aircraft and other new paraphernalia of war, the port of Tangier shares the control of the Straits of Gibraltar with the British rock itself. An American interest in the big contract may have far reaching results.

Need of Yankee Eye.

The status of Tangier will be settled, if possible, by Premier Poincare and Prime Minister Lloyd George at their meeting in London shortly. The status decided upon will have bearing on what company gets the contract. This makes it necessary that the American government keep in close touch with the meeting of the French and British premiers.

The struggle between France and Great Britain over the harbor of Tangier is just one phase of their struggle for the mastery of the Mediterranean, which in turn is the cause of the Washington naval treaty being held up by France. The main lines of communication of France and Great Britain bisect the Mediterranean. The extent to which France will control the Mediterranean by dominating Tangier, to that same extent, it will hold the potential authority to cut the British empire in half.

The British Side

The extent to which Great Britain will control the Mditerranean through control of the gates, is that its large fleet can cut off France as an unlimited reservoir for soldiers, materials, and food from Africa.

If the Washington naval treaty is not ratified by France, America can blame jealousy for control of the Mediterranean.

France claims a sort of majority control of the harbor company in Tangier through acquisition of the former German interest, and on this basis it announced June 9 that bids for improvements must be handed in before November 9. American, British, and Italian diplomatic representatives immediately protested and France has now withdrawn the announcement.

Ex-Chicago Woman Burned to Death on Dixon Farm

Dixon, Ill., July 29.—Mrs. Thomas Scott was burned to death at her farm home west of Dixon this morning. She was alone in the house at the time and it is not known definitely how she caught fire, but it is suposed her hair, which was hanging down, was ignited when she leaned over to light a kerosene stove, and as she jumped back she pulled the stove over on her. The Scotts moved to Dixon from Chicago a few months ago.

RAVINIA WARMS TO CLAIRE DUX IN 'LOHENGRIN' ROLE

Opera Sung in English Better for Shortening.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Cutting Wagner into compact, well balanced rations of musical sustenance is an important, if oft neglected, duty of those who take charge of the operatic dietary. Since there is no way of making Wagner a best seller by any of the predigested processes (although most of us have heard the wedding march of "Lohengrin" and the "Prize Song" of "The Meistersingers" ragged to a rubato'd fare-ye-well, as the irreverent say), the best scheme for the chef is to serve portions which, while containing the correct vitamines and calories, do not, when consumed, result in that overstuffed feeling which is inevitable when a Wagner opera is served in the unmitigated amplitude of the original package.

CLAIRE DUX.
[Daguerre Photo.]

These observations are by way of a grateful prelude to some notes on last night's revival of "Lohengrin" at Ravinia, where it was sung in English by a cast that had Claire Dux and Vicente Ballester as newcomers and held over Morgan Kingston, Alice Gentle, Graham Marr, and Louis D'Angelo from last season's successful experiment with what George Bernard Shaw likes to describe as "the most popular of Wagner's Italian operas."

Better for the Cutting.

The cuts to which Louis Hasselmans has subjected "Lohengrin," while they may make the purists imagine a vain thing, serve nicely to adjust the opera to Ravinia's traditions and schedules. Act I. and the two parts of Act II. are rich in tunes, contain the essential love-drama of the legend, and provide the singing actors with all necessary opportunities. In other words, "Lohengrin" is the better for cutting, for compression was not one of Wagner's virtues.

Chief interest last night centered in the Elsa of Miss Dux. Those who heard her Marguerite in "Faust" were not unprepared for last night's successful exhibition of ability to subjugate her live, eager, "wise" personality to this passive, deferential heroine. She gave out easily the idea of Elsa's high breeding and spirituality. As to the music, she found many points of effective contact for her voice and method.

Others Come in for Plaudits.

Ballester as the herald was in his fourth rôle in five nights, and sent out the calls and challenges in tones whose richness and body set a pace for the assisting trumpeter. Kingston's Lohengrin is the impersonation with which he first won attention in this community, back in 1914 in the Auditorium with the Century opera.

It is, with the possible exception of his Manrico in "Trovatore," his most effective performance. Miss Gentle repeated an Ortrud which, for passion, color, and sense of the stage and the drama, ranks with the classical interpretations of this great part. Marr, who used to be the herald with the Century company, was last night's Telramund, another fine part when the occupant is both singer and actor, and D'Angelo did well enough with the passages for well meaning, chatty old Henry the Fowler. Sharing in, and entitled to, the evening's plaudits was Conductor Hasselmans, who took the sophisticated orchestra with grace and feeling through the lovely score.

GENERAL MOTORS CO. CUTS PRICE OF TWO CARS; COST WAR SEEN

Here's more good news for prospective automobile purchasers. The long expected automobile price war appears to be definitely on, closely following the tire price war.

The General Motors corporation, the largest factor in the automobile field, yesterday announced price reduction, effective Tuesday, by two of its important subsidiaries making medium priced cars. The Oakland Motor Car company is making price cuts ranging from $100 to $240, while the Olds Motor works is reducing prices $30 to $150.

It is understood General Motors intends to bid sharply for new business, particularly in the four cylinder car field. It is expected that price reductions also will be made in other lines. It has been understood in the financial market for several weeks that a price war between the General Motors and Studebaker companies was imminent.

Regarding the price cuts now announced, it is officially explained they are the result of the large volume of sales of new models, resulting in larger production and consequent economies.

AMUNDSEN GIVES UP FLIGHT TO THE POLE; QUITS SHIP

Nome, Alaska, July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Capt. Amundsen has abandoned his attempt to reach Point Barrow in the Maud, his exploration ship, and has transferred to the schooner Holmes, according to a wireless message received here.

Transferring to the Holmes with Capt. Amundsen were Lieut. G. Omdal, avaitor, and one other man whose name was not given. It is understood that the plan to fly across the north pole has been abandoned until next year.

PRIMARY TUESDAY STIRS MISSOURI AND OKLAHOMA

Reed and Long Confident of Victory.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—The two leading Democratic candidates, United States Senator James A. Reed and Breckenridge Long, third assistant secretary of state during the Wilson administration, brought to a close tonight what is considered by politicians to be the bitterest campaign for the senatorial nomination waged in Missouri in many decades.

Senator Reed made his closing speech here, while his opponent wound up his campaign at Macon, both expressing confidence of victory next Tuesday.

Reed Attacks Long.

Senator Reed's speech delivered in his typical oratorical manner, was minced with attacks, clothed in inferences against Mr. Long and his supporters and his entire campaign. He paid high tribute to the woman voters in referring to his stand on the maternity bill during its discussions in congress.

Stressing his loyalty to the Democratic cause, Mr. Reed again laid emphasis on the charge of "bolting" which has been brought against the Long forces because of a recent threat made by one of the Long followers.

The league of nations, the food administration of Herbert Hoover and all the pet issues of the campaign advanced by both candidates, furnished Senator Reed subjects that have been echoed in all sections of the state during the campaign.

Mr. Long, who spent the first part of the closing campaign in the city, chose the northern section of the state for the windup.

Charges Treason to Party.

In his speech at Macon, Mr. Long reiterated his previous charges against his opponent, whom he assailed for failure to protect the party in 1920 and for making speeches for a Republican candidate in Wisconsin. He again charged that many Republicans would vote for his opponent next Tuesday.

The six Republican candidates for the senatorial nomination—R. R. Brewster, John McKinley, Attorney General Jesse W. Barrett, Col. John R. Parker, U. S. A., State Senator David M. Proctor, and William Sacks—will close their campaigns tomorrow and Monday. Mr. Brewster and Mr. Barrett are generally believed by politicians to be the favorites.

TOWNSEND BACKS SEAWAY

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., July 29.—[Special.]—Marked sentiment in favor of the renomination of Senator Townsend is noticeable in this part of the upper peninsula of Michigan.

The senator encountered an enthusiastic reception at Sault Ste. Marie this afternoon and here tonight at both of which places he addressed mass meetings.

I was informed by a Republican leader that the prevailing sentiment is for Townsend, despite the efforts of former Gov. Chas. E. Osborne of Sault Ste. Marie to deliver this part of the state to Congressman Pat Kelley, one of the contenders for the nomination for senator.

Mr. Osborne has been campaigning with Kelley and soon is to take the stump for the candidate. The former governor's Sault Ste. Marie paper has been booming Kelley and attacking Townsend, but of late has begun to let up on the senator.

At the Sault Ste. Marie meeting Senator Townsend presented the case for the St. Lawrence seaway. The community at the Soo locks is deeply interested in this project and turned out to do special honor to the senator as the father of the idea.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Through an error the Washington story on promised strike settlement printed in an earlier edition was credited to the Associated Press when the credit should have been to the United Press.

Through error the name of Mary Jane Kraus was inserted in the caption under the picture of Ethel Mae Manden, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Manden, 6123 South Peoria street. Little Miss Manden was a participant in the Englewood Pageant of Progress parade held last Thursday night.

Max Hoppe, 4440 North Kostner avenue, whose home was daubed with paint and windows broken Thursday night, says his house had not been painted under the Landis award as reported in THE TRIBUNE of Friday. He says the vandalism was intended for a house across the street that had had been painted by nonunion painters.

K. K. K. OKLAHOMA ISSUE

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—With lines being drawn on economic issues and undersurface shifts on the Ku Klux Klan question, Oklahoma has entered into the final stages of one of the most tangled primary campaigns in the history of the state. The primary will be held Tuesday.

Interest in the outcome of the three cornered race for the Democratic nomination for governor obscures the contests for congress and state offices in the three parties entered, Democratic, Republican and Socialist.

The Ku Klux Klan issue has been brought forward recently with publication of slates purporting to have been issued by the organization. R. H. Wilson, state superintendent of public instruction, is marked in the alleged klan lists as the "right" candidate for Democratic gubernatorial nomination; Thomas H. Owen, former justice of the state Supreme court, is characterized as "fair," while the klan definitely blacklists Mayor J. C. Walton of Oklahoma City.

Wives Aid Candidates.

Madison, Wis., July 29.—Mrs. Robert M. La Follette and Mrs. John J. Blaine, wives of Wisconsin's senior member of the United States senate and governor, will campaign through southern Wisconsin for their husbands during the coming week. Traveling together, the two will speak as leaders of the Woman's Progressive Association of Wisconsin.

20,235 Names on Senator Lodge's Nomination Papers

Boston, Mass., July 29.—[United Press.]—Nomination papers containing the names of 20,235 certified voters were filed today with the secretary of state in behalf of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, candidate for the Republican nomination for the United States senate.

Black Eyes Pfd. Stay at $200; One Bidder Pays It

Two hundred dollars and costs is still the market price on blackened optics in Judge Emmanuel Eller's Chicago avenue court. Frank LaBosco, whose wife Frances declined to pay for the pleasure of being beaten, was sent to the house of correction to work out the fine.

BEAUTY DOCTORS ARE OUT TO MAKE GIRLS PAINT SHY

Members of the younger generation addicted to the overuse of cosmetics will be educated in the art of moderation if they visit beauty parlors in future, according to Mrs. May G. Bott, president of the American Society of Cosmeticians, which held its annual convention last evening at the Morrison hotel.

"We are going to conduct a campaign of education," she said. "The painted lady is a thing of the past.

"The purpose of the convention," she continued, "is to raise the standard of the profession. By bringing the profession under uniform laws, we hope to eliminate all objectionable features."

The two sessions of the convention were attended by leading manufacturers and retailers of cosmetics from all parts of the country.

FATHER STABS SON TRYING TO REUNITE FAMILY

Family discord last night caused a father to stab his son. The boy probably will die.

J. W. Thornton, 622 West 26th street, is the father. Edward Thornton, 26 years old, 3127 Union avenue, is the son.

According to the story told to the police, Edward's mother several months ago left the father and went to live with her son.

Last night the son went to the father's home in an attempt to effect a reconciliation. Instead of that a quarrel developed. The father seized a kitchen knife and stabbed the younger Thornton twice in the side.

Police took the son to Bridewell hospital. The father is locked up at the Deering street station.

STATE at JACKSON—on the Northeast Corner

Quick as a tiger's spring—is the getaway of the high-powered Paige Six-66. In traffic jungles, as on open road, it speeds with sure confidence, effortless ease. Silent its movement as the tread of a tiger—so finely balanced the mechanism of the 6-cylinder, 70 H. P. motor.

Press the foot throttle and translate your wish into miles. Crawl along at 2 miles in high, or dash ahead—the fastest car on the highway—at 70 or better. No finer flexibility is possible. Sharp and seldom the emergency that taxes this smooth motor to capacity. Hill climbing but emphasizes its great power reserve. One of the secrets of the long life of the Paige—never overworked, it never wears out.

Superb lubrication is its life insurance. A high pressure, hollow crank-shaft oiling system forces three gallons of oil a minute—at 20 to 40 lbs. pressure—through all main and connecting rod bearings. A cushion of oil in every bearing makes friction impossible.

Ball-bearing steering spindles give touch guidance to the Paige. And ever-present is buoyant, roomy riding comfort. A low-hung body, long wheelbase—131 inches—long, yielding springs, snubbers, Paige-Timken axles, front and rear, even distribution of weight, absence of sidesway—all are factors that stabilize the car and neutralize the shocks of the roughest road.

The Paige Six-66 four-passenger, sketched above, is distinctively smart, trim, dashing; it looks its speed. Performance and economy have made the Paige the second largest selling car between $2,000 and $11,000. Many owners of higher priced cars have found the Paige reduces their investment and increases their satisfaction. Let us prove to you the Paige is a tiger car indeed! Just telephone.

'THIS IS NO TIME TO SWAP HORSES,' G.O.P. CHIEF SAYS

Adams, McCormick, Wood Lay Campaign Plans.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

"No deadlock in congress that will tie up the constructive policies of President Harding's administration."

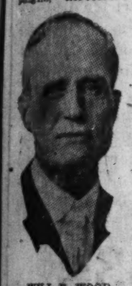
This was made the keynote of the 1922 congressional campaign sounded yesterday at a conference of Republican organization leaders held in Chicago, at which all the early preliminaries were arranged for the fall campaigns in behalf of candidates for the United States senate and the house of representatives.

JOHN T. ADAMS. [Moffett Photo.]

Participants in the conference were John T. Adams, chairman of the Republican national committee; Senator Medill McCormick, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, and Congressman Will R. Wood of Indiana, chairman of the national congressional campaign committee, handling particularly the fight for a Republican majority in the house that is to be elected in November.

Three Committees United.

For the first time, the three campaigns, heretofore conducted independently, are to be harmonized under one management that will work from Washington. Immediate western headquarters will be established this week in Chicago. From here will be directed the work of the speakers and publicity bureaus, which will have offices in the Congress hotel.



WILL R. WOOD. [Moffett Photo.]

The rooms were engaged last night and are Rooms 1110 and 1112, which were the Lowden headquarters along "Presidential Row" during the convention fight of 1920. Dr. Horace Ellis is to be in immediate charge of the Chicago offices.

Adams Issues Statement.

Chairman Adams issued the following statement after the conference:

"The Republican National Congressional and Senatorial committees are working in complete cooperation and full harmony for Republican success in the approaching elections.

"Senator McCormick, Congressman Wood and myself, as chairmen of the three committees, have arranged to carry on the work of the campaign jointly, eliminating all conflict of authority and duplication of effort.

"Chairmen McCormick, Wood, and myself are united not only in our campaign effort, but in the belief that a Republican congress will be elected in November to cooperate with President Harding in the completion of the tremendous tasks which have been imposed upon the present national administration.

"This is no time for deadlocking the government through the election of a congress out of harmony with the President, and the American people are going to give his administration opportunity to complete the work of national reconstruction it has so well begun."

Ex-Pugilist Shot After Resenting Slur on Girl

John Pate, 2027 Polk street, a pugilist trainer and former prize fighter, was shot in the abdomen but not seriously wounded yesterday afternoon when he resented the remarks of a Negro concerning Miss Cordelia Catlin, 2205 South Michigan avenue, his companion. A Yellow taxicab driver interceded in behalf of the Negro during the argument. When Pate struck at the driver the latter drew a revolver and fired. The shooting occurred at East Twenty-second street and South Michigan avenue. Police are seeking the taxi driver.

FEMALE IMPERSONATOR FINED.

Wilbur Cox, 4001 Grand boulevard, an amateur female impersonator who carried his disguise to the extent of silk underwear and Russian boots, was fined $200 and costs yesterday in the South Clark street court by Judge William N. Gemmill.

SISTERS BRIDES

Mrs. Verne Darnell (left) and Mrs. Earl W. Dryfoos. [Photo: Spieth Studio.]

The marriage is announced of Miss Leone Heaton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Heaton of Centralia, Ill., to W. Verne Darnall of Oak Park, and of Miss Oakalla Heaton to Earl W. Dryfoos of Springfield, Ill. The double ceremony took place on July 5 in the Christian church at Centralia.

NEVER SOBER FOR 8 YEARS, SAYS WIFE OF DOCTOR

Dr. William C. Roberts of Ottumwa, Ia., is no camel. In fact, he has been intoxicated for nearly eight years, according to the story told by Mrs. Theodosia H. Roberts to Judge George F. Rush, who granted her a divorce yesterday.

The couple were married in 1913, and separated, Mrs. Roberts said, on April 15, 1921, when her remonstrances with the doctor about his habits were unavailing.

"How often was Dr. Roberts intoxicated?" asked Attorney Robert H. Stoll, counsel for Mrs. Roberts.

"All the time," responded Mrs. Roberts. "I've never seen him sober. He drank continuously throughout our married life."

Mrs. Roberts' mother, Mrs. Theodosia Harrison, corroborated this.

LANDIS AWARD WAGE TO BE PAID ON BIG LIGHT JOB

All work in connection with the installation of $2,000,000 worth of electric lighting equipment under the bond issue voted at the June judicial election will be done under the terms of the Landis wage award, Commissioner of Gas and Electricity Carlson said yesterday following a visit from representatives of the citizens' committee to enforce the award.

The contract for the big job will probably be awarded to the A. A. Electric Construction company, low bidder for the job, this week, after Mr. Carlson confers with Ald. John A. Richert, chairman of the council finance committee, on the four bids received.

Boy Bandit Held for Action of Grand Jury; Pal Freed

Ray Luby, 17, 1858 North Washtenaw avenue, charged with holding up Charles Bocion, 27 South Sangamon street, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $2,000 by Judge Thomas J. Peden of the Boys' court. His accomplice, John Riccets of Omaha, who said he had never been in trouble before, was put in charge of Father C. J. Quille of the Working Boys' home, 1140 Jackson boulevard, to be released in a week if his behavior is satisfactory.

Forgery Ends Legal Paper Against Mrs. Wm. Swift

Finding the clause "otherwise known as Mrs. William Swift" forged into an execution against the wife of the Lake Forest millionaire, Sheriff Elmer Green of Waukegan yesterday refused to levy one of the mounts belonging to the well known horsewoman.

The execution was one for $1,000 damages for injuries sustained in a fall, by Fred Rose, a colored groom, in her employ when she was still Miss Helen Morton.

Ralph Plate, Sought for Fake Oil Deals, Arrested

The arrest in New York of Ralph Plate, said to have victimized Chicagoans of $10,000 through the sale of fake oil leases, was reported yesterday to Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes. Plate is wanted in Chicago on a warrant obtained by Charles Gerbing, manager of the Guarantee Leasing company, 222 South State street, who is alleged to have been swindled out of $1,300.

Any House-wife's Idea of Heaven-

All the Hot Water She Wants- Whenever She Wants It.

Oceans of hot water ready to flow at the turn of a faucet in kitchen, laundry and bath. A ready, reliable, endless supply every hour of the day and night.

Wouldn't that be a blessing in your home? A comfort and convenience you have always longed to enjoy. All the hot water you want—whenever you want it.

No trouble or effort any more. Just turn the faucet and it's there, running from the tap, steaming hot. An inexhaustible supply for all the needs of your home. Isn't that just about your idea of Heaven?

Very well, you can have it—and at less cost gallon for gallon than you are paying now for your insufficient, hit-or-miss supply. Realize your life-long dream with a

Automatic Gas Water Heater

Wonderful Satisfaction
In thousands of homes just like yours other women are enjoying this wonderful satisfaction that Humphrey Heaters provide. They do their work silently, faithfully, year in and year out—night and day, summer and winter. Healthy, happy families and clean, shining homes. There's no greater help in housework than lots of good hot water at all times.

A Welcome Relief
Just compare Humphrey hot water service with the kind you are enduring now. Consider the waste and worry and bother—the time and the effort and the cost that it takes to maintain your present insufficient supply. Not half the hot water you really require and so many times—when you need it most—not any at all.

"Just Turn the Faucet"
That's every last thing you have to do to get hot water from a Humphrey—hot water at any, at all times. It runs just as readily, just as abundantly at midnight as it does at noon. You don't have to think ahead. And no more trips to the basement at outlandish hours. "Just turn the faucet."

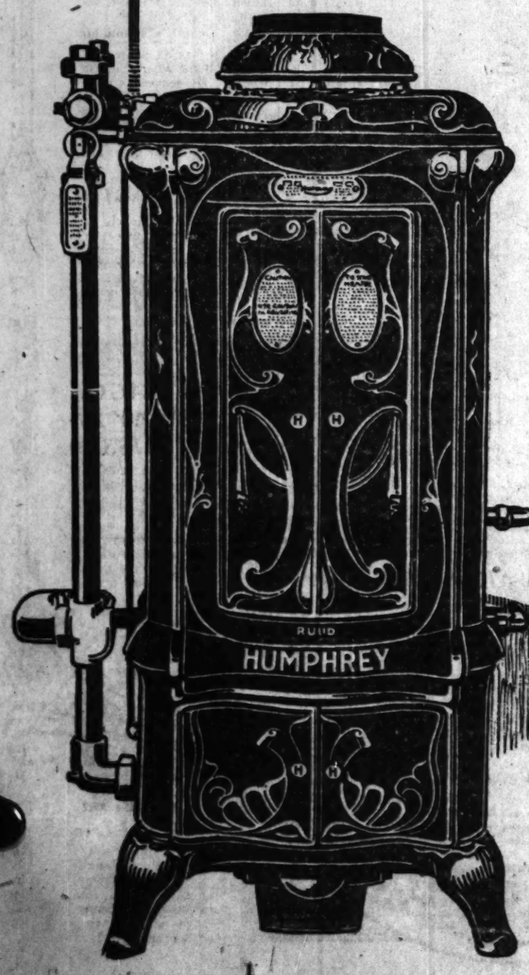
Guards Your Gas Bill
The Humphrey Heater burns gas only during the time you are actually drawing water to use. And only a part of that time—for the moment the coil reaches the right degree of heat the gas is shut off again automatically. And no matter how long the water runs your gas burns only when the temperature goes below that fixed point. Humphrey keeps a sharper watch over gas bills than you do.

Pay For What You Use—No More
The Humphrey Heater heats only the water you actually use. That's all you pay for. Loss through radiation—as with the ordinary hot water tank—is impossible this way. The water grows hot as it flows to the tap. It cannot lose its heat on the way. If you are paying big fuel bills now for a hot water supply that is never up to your needs, you can avoid that extravagance by putting in a Humphrey.

Send for This FREE BOOK
There's a little GREEN BOOK that tells you everything you want to know about the Humphrey Heater. Just plain, common-sense talk. Write your name and address on the coupon and you'll get a copy in tomorrow's mail. No obligation at all. The chances are you'll be glad you did it. Send the coupon today.

Hot Water the Humphrey Way is Cheaper

The Square Built Heater with the Handsome Green Jacket



Years of use in thousands of homes all over the land have proved beyond all doubt that the HUMPHREY HEATER produces an endless supply of hot water at an actual cost lower gallon for gallon than any other system in practical household use. The coal heater, the furnace coil, even the kettle on the stove are costly wasters compared with the HUMPHREY HEATER and its ever-watchful, instantaneous automatic control. Its saving is as real as its service is satisfactory. And no matter how large or small your home may be there is a HUMPHREY HEATER just the right style, size and price for YOU.

Only $15 Down

Brings to your home the permanent comfort, convenience and economy of a Humphrey Automatic Gas Water Heater. The first small payment gives you and your family the immediate and lasting benefit of a dependable and unlimited hot water supply—at a cost gallon for gallon cheaper than what you are paying now. For full particulars of payment plan apply to any of the Humphrey Agencies listed below:

Little Stories From Homes Where Humphrey Heaters Are:

J. C. Urquart, 3702 North Robey: "We have had a Humphrey Heater in our home for three years. By simply turning the faucet we get hot water noonday, midnight, summer or winter. Living in the country now for a season, it is one of the things we miss most."

J. W. Briggs, 4917 North Leavitt St.: "We are very much pleased with our Humphrey Heater. Could not do without it. Think as much of taking our friends to the basement to see the water heater as anything about the home."

Henry W. Carter, 6132 Winthrop Ave.: "We have had our Humphrey Heater about twelve years and find it the most indispensable of all modern conveniences in our household life."

W. A. Morrison, 2332 Clifton Ave.: "About five years ago I installed a Humphrey Heater in my home. It has been a source of satisfaction—always plenty of hot water, with very light expense; much lighter than either I had formerly used."

Ernest L. Fantus, 5633 Glenwood Ave.: "I have had a Humphrey Heater in my home for about 3½ years. To be frank I don't even know what the thing looks like. I have had hot water at all times, day and night, without any trouble. As I am not mechanically inclined I have not taken the trouble to find out where it comes from."

Dr. L. A. Larson, 3703 Irving Park Blvd.: "I have used a Humphrey Heater for eight years. Always on the job; plenty of hot water. To my idea, it is the only thing to have in a home."

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Let no one question the wisdom of the Yankee bosses in acquiring "Jumping Joe" Dugan. Making his first appearance here yesterday in his new togs, the former Red Sock just about ruined Willie Gleason's White Sox by applying the potent whallop that brought a 6 to 2 victory to the champs in the series opener.

JOE DUGAN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

What Jumping Joe perpetrated was a homer into the left field seats. He did it while two mates were resting on the sacks after one had already scored in the fourth round. That clout netted four markers for the inning, wiped out a two run lead the Sox had gathered by dint of a homer by Bib Falk in the second, and settled the ball game. What happened after that—and the happenings included Babe Ruth's eighteenth circuit smash—didn't cause a ripple.

Joe Bush Holds Sox.

The fact that the Sox couldn't accomplish much in the run line can be attributed to the fact that Joe Bush was around. Except in the second, when Falk soaked his homer into the right field seats on top of a double by Strunk, the Yankee speed baller was the dog's muzzle. In the last seven rounds he let only one home athlete get as far as third and finished with only seven hits against his record. Two of these blows were ninth inning affairs that didn't even stir up the 20,000 patrons.

Gleason's starter on the mound was Harry Courtney, the wrong armed worker. The ex-Senator gave a great exhibition of squeezing through treacherous spots in the first three innings, but the inevitable happened in the fourth. The Yank batters continued to find the going good in the fifth, so Courtney was chased and Shovel Hodge went the rest of the way. The only run made off him was Ruth's four sack clout, which sailed into the right field seats, in the seventh.

Rain and Ruth's Homer.

The luckless Yank third got under way with a pass to Pipp. Ward and Scott singled to fill the sacks. Bush grounded to Sheely and Pipp was forced at the plate. Witt bounced to Collins for a force of Bush at second and a double play was lost at first only by an eyelash, Ward scoring. Then came Dugan with that homer at his Scott and Witt preceding him over the pan.

The first hostile to bob up at the plate in the fifth was Ruth. In two previous attempts he had brought down a flock of boobs by his feeble work. This time he managed to get a single on a lucky bounder over Collins. Schang then sacrificed the big fellow to second and Pipp scored him with a single to center. Exit Courtney. After this there was nothing but rain and Ruth's homer.

CUBS GET NEW GIANT TWIRLER, SIX FEET TWO

President Veeck of the Cubs yesterday announced his new pitcher, Edward Morris, a young giant 6 ft. 2 in. tall and 21 years old, from Chattanooga of the Southern association, will report here tomorrow. Wilbur Pelle, a 19 year old lad, has been secured from the Meridian, Miss., club to report at the end of the season.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question Mrs. M. M. Holmes, 1409 East 62d street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Which do you prefer, aquatic or land sports?

Where Asked.

In Humboldt park.

The Answers.

Harry Lebahn, 3010 West North avenue, auto mechanic—I never took part in any sport except football, and that's a land game. Most of the sports are on land. Those on the water are limited to swimming or boating. Of course, if you have a lot of money you could have a yacht. I guess I prefer the land games.

Earl Cookman, 3912 North Kostner avenue, printer—I would say I prefer the land sports. The only game I ever play is baseball. I ain't much of a player, but I enjoy the game. It gives one a chance to work off some of the stiffness one acquires during the week.

George Levinson, 1526 North Washtenaw avenue, stock clerk—I prefer the land sports. I suppose most of us do. There are more games played on land than there are on water—baseball, handball, football, tennis, racing, golf, and a lot more—and more people take part in them. Baseball is my favorite sport.

George Haffner, 1735 North Harding avenue, high school student—I supposed everybody considered land sports the most popular. You can play baseball, football, and a whole lot of things on land that you can't play on the sea. In winter you skate, but there are probably more people skating in the indoor ice rinks than out in the open.

Harold Bolstad, 1647 North Fairfield avenue, clerk—I am a swimmer and naturally prefer aquatic sports. Two years ago I held the swimming championship in Norway. I took up swimming because it was interesting to me, but as I grew older I noticed that it was a wonderful physical developer—so much so that I am now convinced that in that respect it excels all other sports.

Only 18 years old and the conqueror of Norman Ross, for years American and Olympic champion of distance swimmers! Richard Howell, Hyde Park high school star, earned that distinction yesterday afternoon when he slipped across the Wells street finish line fully 300 yards ahead of the veteran for a new Illinois A. C. river swim record of 56:20. The new mark cuts Ross' 1:04:00 record of last year by nearly eight minutes.

Ross, who had won the race twice before, followed the winner three and a half minutes later for second place in a field of fifty starters, only ten of whom failed to finish. Both swimmers wore the I. A. C. colors, Howell for the first time. The event marked the opening day of the Pageant of Progress athletic program.

The race bore few thrills, except on the finish platform where Ross clambered up over the piling. "I've wanted to beat you all my life," confided Howell with a boyish grin as he put out his hand to the veteran, "and now I've done it."

Ross smiled, too, but briefly. After many years he had met a better man.

Fifty Thousand See Race.

A crowd of 50,000—the greatest ever to witness a river swim—witnessed the contest. Five thousand spectators, drawn by the opening of the Pageant of Progress, packed about the platform in the northwest angle of the Municipal pier approach to watch the initial plunge. Other thousands lined both sides of the pier and filled the quays on the north bank of the river.

Half a dozen smaller vessels hovered in the wake of Howell and Ross as they sped along, and canoes and yawls picked their way between the heavier craft. Passengers on an outgoing steamer crowded against the rail and cheered the leading pair as the boat forged by them out into the lake.

Several thousand had crowded on to the bridges under which the contestants passed on their way to Wells street, and the wharves and windows of buildings at the river's edge were lined with spectators.

The youngster led from the start, which was made from the lake shore in the northwest angle of the Municipal pier and the course lay out into the lake, around the pier, and up the mouth of the river.

It was not many moments after the fifty had plunged in that spectators who chugged alongside in half a dozen vessels realized that Ross would have to exert every effort to keep pace with the Hyde Parker. The others were left behind, as the racing pair reached the end of the pier, Howell twenty yards in the lead.

Widens Lead Constantly.

The weather was ideal for aquatics. There was no sun to bother the swimmers with glare and the water lay calm, a good medium for their progress. When the pair rounded the second pier south of the Municipal pier and started in toward the river mouth Howell was more than thirty yards ahead. He was halfway down this stretch before the flotilla of rowboats escorting the other swimmers rounded the far end of the pier.

In Howell's boat was Perry McGillivray, four times winner of the swim.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

HAYES WINS AS WESTERN TENNIS TOURNEY OPENS

BY GEORGE BUCKLEY.

Walter T. Hayes, Illinois state singles champion, and joint holder of the doubles title with Alex. Squair, took the court with Stanley Bates as an opponent, and officially opened play in the thirty-sixth annual western tennis championship tournament, at the South Side club yesterday. The local ace proved himself in fine fettle by crushing Bates, 6—0, 6—1, and in his second brush ruined the aspirations of L. E. Bailey, 6—0, 6—2.

Weather conditions were anything but auspicious, a steady drizzle making footing insecure and deadening the balls in short order.

Competition was held only in the men's singles, and due to the record number of entries—160 in all—the greater part of the afternoon was devoted to preliminary matches in order to slash the field down to a working basis.

Young Stagg Wins Twice.

A. A. Stagg Jr., captain of the Maroon net squad and son of Coach Stagg, brought joy to his dad's heart by "coming through" his two matches, defeating F. M. Kaufman, 6—0, 6—3, and besting Taylor Ward after a gruelling battle, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2. Eddie Wilson, a teammate of Stagg's, also was driving 'em over in great style and chased Art Frankhein to a 6—4, 8—6 score.

Peter P. T. Sah, a Chinese student at the University of Chicago, eliminated L. R. Hayes, one of the leading players of the home club, 6—4, 6—1. Sah's work, while not sensational, is consistent and well balanced. Art Hubbell hurdled W. M. Goodwillie, 6—2, 6—2, the match proving a good deal faster and tighter than the result indicates.

Out of Town Matches Tomorrow.

The host of out of town entrants will begin arriving tomorrow.

A summary of yesterday's matches and the schedule for today follows:

PRELIMINARY ROUND MATCHES.

Walter T. Hayes beat Stanley Bates, 6—0, 6—1; R. S. Stewart beat H. O'Neill, 8—6, 6—1; C. E. Wilson beat A. Sykes, 6—3, 6—0; M. P. Lyons beat E. L. Williams, 7—5, 9—7; A. A. Stagg Jr. beat F. M. Kaufman, 6—0, 6—3; J. Taylor Ward beat R. Kerr, 6—2, 6—3; W. E. Haynes beat Paul Warre, 6—2, 6—3; E. Wilson beat A. Frankhein, 6—4, 8—6; C. Becker beat P. J. Peel, 6—8, 8—6, 12—10.

FIRST ROUND.

Walter T. Hayes beat L. E. Bailey, 6—0, 6—2; C. J. Weber beat W. J. McDonnell, 6—0, 6—0; Peter P. T. Sah beat L. R. Hayes, 6—4, 6—1; Al Wallerstein beat A. G. Hoadley, 6—0, 6—0; Art Hubbell beat W. M. Goodwillie, 6—2, 6—2; A. A. Stagg Jr. beat Taylor Ward, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

INTERNATIONAL SPORT.

IN the international sport competition of 1922, America against the world, the count so far is 4 to 5 against us. If only those events of greater importance are included—those in which were truly representative competitors—the count is 3 to 2 in favor of America. Let us recapitulate and see whether the United States is holding its own:

Cambridge beat Pennsylvania's four-mile relay team on the other side. No excuses except advantage naturally with home team.

Two American women, Mrs. Gavin best, unplaced in British women's amateur golf tourney won by Miss Joyce Weatbered. Hardly representative, but British women at home seem to hold margin over Americans.

Five Americans, of whom John G. Anderson was best and survived to fourth round, competed for British amateur golf title won by Holderness. Strongest American amateurs not entered.

Walter Hagen, home-bred American pro, lifted British open golf title. Jim Barnes tied for second, Jock Hutchison third. Sweeping victory for Yankees against Britain's best.

Walter Hoover, Duluth, won Diamond Sculls, world's blue ribbon rowing classic, on Thames. Notable performance.

In American open golf tourney at Skokie, George Duncan finished sixth and Abe Mitchell and Willie Hunter [amateur] outside the money. Three great players. Britain, of course, would have had better chance with more entrants, but three Yanks were good enough to take three of four places over there.

Suzanne Lenglen overwhelmed Molla Mallory for women's tennis title in England. No excuses so far as The Wake is concerned.

Gerald Patterson, Australia, won men's tennis title at Wimbledon. Tilden did not defend. Ranking Yankee players not entered.

Harvard-Yale tennis team beat Oxford-Cambridge. Wake does not know caliber of English opposition.

From a comparative survey, The Wake thinks the United States so far has more than held its own in international sport, with the important Davis cup defense and the men's and women's amateur golf tourneys to come.

THE BACKWARD TRAIL.

In fancy I am wandering
Along the backward trail,
When days were passed more leisurely,
No mad rush after kale.
All time was ours to sit and bask
Beneath the summer sun;
One could work all day tomorrow,
Today was made for fun.

Beside the little rippling stream,
With fishing pole and bait,
I'd sit and muse and drowse and dream
From early morn till late.
Sometimes I captured quite a string
Of shining, speckled trout;
But fishin's fishin', anyway,
Goin' home with or without.

Earlier Baseball.

Dear Wake: Chicago White Stockings and Bluff Citys played at Elgin in 1876. The Elgin Watch Co. made for each home player a good sized silver badge to designate their respective positions on the field, which they proudly wore on their shirts.

Al Spalding, then pitching for Chicago, questioned the umpire's decision on a called ball, and, to illustrate, said, "The ball was on a line with that piece of tin." Chicago won, 31 to 9.

HERE'S KEEN FAN

THE TRIBUNE yesterday morning pointed out something unusual in the standings of the major league clubs, with all cities boasting teams in both the American and National leagues occupying the same rungs of the respective league percentage ladders. Now a TRIBUNE fan who is a keen observer comes to bat with a copy of the standings cut from THE TRIBUNE of Sept. 21 of last year, which shows the New York teams leading both leagues, St. Louis running third, Boston holding down fourth place, Chicago seventh, and Philadelphia eighth.

MISS SHULTS IS WOMEN'S COUNTY GOLF CHAMPION

Miss Ruth Shults, the 16 year old player from Jackson park, sprung the biggest surprise of the Cook county women's golf championship by defeating Mrs. Lee Mida of Marquette park, 1 up, nineteen holes, in the final match at Jackson park yesterday. Miss Shults has been playing two years, while Mrs. Mida has been prominent in south side golfing circles for a number of years and has twice competed in the women's national championship.

Incidentally it was Jackson park's second title success in two days, as on Friday Russell Martin won the Cook county open title.

Clean Sweep for Jackson.

Jackson park also made a clean sweep in all the minor events yesterday, Mrs. K. Heald winning the second flight, Mrs. B. J. Samuels the first flight consolation, and Mrs. L. Cook the second flight consolation.

The final for the title was a nerve testing match in which both players won holes in men's par. Neither was more than 1 up at any stage. Miss Shults was 1 up at the eighth, but took 6 on the ninth hole, so that they were all square at the turn.

Lead Wavers Back and Forth.

A fine three at the tenth gave Mrs. Mida a lead of 1 up, but she lost this advantage at the long water hole, where she took a 6 to a good 5 by her opponent. Mrs. Mida again went to the front at the twelfth with a par 4, but lost the short thirteenth, 4 to 3. Miss Shults played the long fourteenth well and won, 6 to 7, and took the lead, which she kept until the eighteenth hole, where Mrs. Mida squared with a par 4. At the extra hole Miss Shults made the better approach and won, 5 to 6. Cards:

Miss Shults—
Out	6	5	4	5	5	4	5	3	6	—43
Mrs. Mida—
Out	4	5	4	5	6	3	6	4	5	—42
Miss Shults—

Mrs. Mida—
In	3	6	4	4	7	5	6	3	4	—42—84

Miss Shults won the extra hole, 5—6.

Summary of other matches:

SECOND FLIGHT—Mrs. K. Heald, Jackson, defeated Mrs. H. B. Craig, Jackson, 6 and 5.

FIRST FLIGHT CONSOLATION—Mrs. B. J. Samuels defeated Mrs. Colson, Jackson, 6 and 5.

SECOND FLIGHT CONSOLATION—Mrs. L. Cook, Jackson, defeated Miss H. Pemberton, Lincoln, 1 up.

WAINWRIGHT IN NEW SWIM MARK

New York, July 29.—Miss Helen Wainwright of the Women's Swimming association, New York, shattered the world's 220 yard record for women by eleven and three fifths seconds today in winning the 220 yard metropolitan championship at Manhattan beach lagoon. Miss Wainwright's time was 2:41 1-5.

Weissmuller-Hartung in Swim Exhibition

John Weissmuller and A. W. Hartung, both swimmers of the Illinois A. C., gave swimming and diving exhibitions at the grand opening of the club house of the Naval post, American Legion, at Randolph street and Lake Michigan, yesterday afternoon. Baseball, swimming, and canoe tilting also featured the outdoor activities.

ILLINOIS MAN IS PICKED TO RULE COLLEGE SPORTS

To Decide Eligibility and Amateur Cases.

AS ANNOUNCED!

ON June 5, THE TRIBUNE announced that John L. Griffith, director of physical education at the University of Illinois, would be named commissioner of athletics in the western conference. This was heroically denied by certain scribes at the time and only recently an effort was made to camouflage the appointment by the announcement that an eastern man would get the position. There was no truth in this report as yesterday's developments indicate.

Columbus, O., July 29.—[By the Associated Press.]—Major John L. Griffith of Champaign, Ill., has been appointed the first commissioner of western intercollegiate conference athletics, a post created by directors of physical education of the Big Ten universities early in June. Announcement of the appointment was made here today by L. W. St. John, director of athletics at Ohio State university and chairman of Big Ten athletic directors.

The new commissioner will be charged with conducting an educational campaign looking toward the development of better sportsmanship, belief in the amateur law, and understanding of the values of competitive athletics.

He will study athletic problems of the various conference universities and will assist in enforcing the eligibility rules. Another duty will be to foster relations among students and alumni.

Not a Judge Landis.

He will not, however, be the "Judge Landis of Big Ten athletics," as appeal can be made from his decisions to the Big Ten athletic directors.

The Big Ten directors in their announcement pointed out that the establishment of the new office was prompted by the growth of intercollegiate athletics to such a scale as to demand that one man give his entire time to the study of athletic problems and administration of the activities which concern all Big Ten colleges.

The appointment puts into effect in the Western conference a plan unparalleled in any other intercollegiate conference in the country. The plan was initiated by the athletic directors themselves.

In entering upon his new duties, Major Griffith will sever connections with the athletic department of the University of Illinois, but will continue to edit and publish the athletic journal, which he founded.

Griffith a Beloit Man.

Griffith was an all-around athlete at Beloit college, where he was graduated in 1902. He served as director of athletics at Yankton college, South Dakota; Morningside college, Sioux City, Iowa, and Drake university. During the ten years he remained at Drake, Griffith founded and managed the Drake relays, which have grown to be the largest outdoor relays in the west.

During the war Major Griffith had charge of recreation at Camps Dodge, Gordon and Pike. Finally he was called to Washington to direct the physical and bayonet training activities of the entire United States army.

Since the fall of 1919 he has been a member of the instructional staff in the department of athletic coaching at the University of Illinois. He also is a member of several important committees of the national Collegiate Athletic association.

ANSON TAGGERS HOLD SWAY AUG. 5 UNDER MISS MENN

Miss Olga Menn will have charge of the army of girls that will do the tagging Aug. 5 for the Anson memorial fund. The purpose of the fund is to build a monument to the memory of Adrian C. BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 29.—[Special.]—After dropping the opening contest 6 to 2, Bill Killefer's battling Cubs came back today and trimmed the Phillies, 7 to 5, in twelve hectic innings. Home runs proved too great a handicap for the Bears in the first game, while topnotch pitching by Tony Kaufmann brought the afterpiece into camp.

Seven homers featured the twin bill, the Phillies poling five. In the first game, Lee, Henline, and Walker got homers. Lee's four base drive was his sixth of the week and his twelfth of the season. In the afterpiece, Wrightstone and Henline for the Phils and O'Farrell and Cheeves for the Cubs socked four basers.

Osborne Starts Opener.

Osborne started the initial clash for the Cubs, but gave way to Stueland in the seventh. Still the clouting of the Philly bombardiers continued. The Bears didn't really have a chance to cop the opener after the fifth inning, but might have made a run or two more if Hack Miller hadn't gone to sleep at second base in the eighth.

To win the final, the Bears just stepped out and pushed into the lead, but were knotted when Cheeves weakened in the fourth and fifth and the Phils clouted in five tallies. Then, with Kaufmann on the slab, Killefer played a waiting game and when Singleton got wilder than the man from Borneo in the twelfth, the Bruins took advantage of two bases on balls, a hit batsman, a single, and a wild pitch, to score the two winning runs.

Phils Take Lead in Second.

The Phils were out in front in the opener, grabbing two runs in the second inning on a double by Fletcher and Lee's home run. The Cubs scored one in the fourth, but Henline's homer in the fifth got that back for the home folks. They jumped out for two more in the seventh and took their final tally in the ninth on Walker's four base drive. The Bears got a run in their eighth, but what mattered it?

Both contests might have had different and more sudden endings had it not been for some startling catches by old Cy Williams and Mokan, a Pittsburgh castoff, who performed in the outer gardens. Williams grabbed no less than four balls which would have been home runs into the bleachers, by leaping catches, while Mokan made several sterling running catches of drives that seemed sure singles.

The Bears have an off day tomorrow.

AMERICANS BEAT CANADIAN BOATS

White Bear, Minn., July 29.—America won the first leg on the Duggan trophy, emblematic of the international class B fresh water yachting championship, here late today, when the Kawa and the Canvasback of the White Bear Yacht club took first and second places in the first of a series of three races with the Canadian entries, Red Patch II. and Anaetis.

BIG ENTRY LIST FOR ALGONQUIN BENEFIT

With the larger mid-western clubs booming their teams to win the Algonquin club championship to be shot over the Lincoln park traps one week from today, for the benefit of mothers and babes, there arise the ghosts of former clubs which have long been marked "dead," claiming a field of "old timers" that will force the younger nimrods to "hold tough," or be "fleeced of their wool."

"I'll load a team that will cold cock the whole program," says Frank Hughes from the northern trout streams. "I'm out of practice," writes Ed Silver, the famous Mark Arie battler of 1920, "but I'll shoot for such a worthy cause."

The Old Guard Aroused.

Every shooter knows what that means and the old guard around Ed Silver suggests a combination of the old Chicago Gun club, the Washington Gun club and The Prairie Marksmen.

And, too, the Sparland and Lacon crowd are waking up. The old river "busters" have some great shots. It is rumored that Milton Seward, perhaps the greatest duck shot on the Illinois river, will load up his Marmon and burn the roads for Chicago. If he does, Jennys and Larsons, beware!

With practical assurance of a big club field, Lincoln park traps, according to their interclub agreement, lose many good marksmen who are members of other clubs. The brilliant Winklers, Kammerer, Charles Rambo, and Dr. Stranton will shoot for the South Chicago gun club. Dave Thomas, "the grand old man of the traps," will be the backbone of the squad.

Some of the Entries.

Here are some of the entries:

SOUTH CHICAGO GUN CLUB—Winklers, Kammerer, C. Rambo, Dr. Stranton, and Dave Thomas.

SOUTH SHORE COUNTRY CLUB—Walter Peacock, L. A. Bell, Thompson Ross, Charles Antoine, W. K. Cochrane, Hardy, John Judd, Col. Morse, Otto Haseell, and Dr. Timm.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—Although outhit, the Browns defeated Boston today, 4 to 1, by pounding Pennock for five of their six hits in the fourth inning and scoring all their runs. Williams collected his twenty-fourth home run, and Shocker pitched well in the pinches.

Catcher Hank Severeid and First Baseman George Sisler of the Browns were injured and retired. Severeid had a finger on his right hand split by a foul and Sisler was spiked below the knee when sliding into first base. Score:

EVER HAMMER WORTHY FOE OF BENNIE LEONARD

BY FRANK SMITH.

EVER HAMMER.

Bennie Leonard, lightweight champion, fresh from his victory over Lew Tendler after twelve rounds of hard fighting in Tex Rickard's pine bowl at Jersey City on Thursday night, is due in Michigan City tomorrow. Manager Gibson will be there Tuesday. Bennie is coming around these parts early to get a little rest and exercise before engaging Ever Hammer, the bristling blonde, in mortal combat at Floyd Fitzsimmons' Michigan City arena next Saturday evening. The boys will go ten rounds or less.

A census of the boxing rialto shows that the lads who follow the game are of the opinion that Mr. Leonard is going to have a much tougher time on Saturday than he did with Rocky Kansas on July 4. Ever Hammer is no slouch, but whether he has had enough top notch experience to stave off the veteran champion is a question. His friends and the boys who do a bit of wagering think he is due to upset Leonard and all the boxing dope.

Holds Technical Knockout.

Bennie holds a technical knockout over the bristling blonde. This happened six years ago in Kansas City, before Leonard smacked Freddie Welsh and moved into the best boxing society. The knockout wasn't registered until Hammer had given Bennie, according to the latter's own version of the affair, the toughest time of his career up to that time. And it hasn't been equaled since that time, Bennie avers.

At that time, Hammer was under the management of Kid Howard, proprietor of the Arcade gym. The Kid had groomed his charge up to that point where he felt sure there would be no doubt about the result and for a time it looked as if the local lad would put the bee on Bennie. He had his elongated foe in distress in the early rounds, but when the eleventh was called, Hammer was all in. He weathered the gale, but in the twelfth left an opening and Bennie put over the haymaker.

Hammer probably is one of the greatest infighters in the lightweight division. For ten rounds during the Kansas City bout he peppered Leonard about the body until the easterner was in sore distress. That will be his aim in the coming bout on Saturday. Dispatches from New York last night said Mr. Leonard was feeling a bit sore from the body pounding administered by Tendler. The midsection will be a bit tender, even on Saturday, and if Hammer is able to get inside, the champion probably will wish himself back in Gotham.

Retires from Ring.

Shortly after the Kansas City battle with Leonard, Hammer broke with Howard and retired from the ring. A year ago he got some resin in his nose and couldn't resist the call. During the year Ever staged a great comeback. He has beaten some of the best boys in his division, and at this writing appears to be boxing much better than at any time in his career.

One of Hammer's most notable recent victories was that over Charlie White, local left hooker. This pair of 158 pounders clashed at Aurora and at the end of ten rounds Hammer received the popular decision. In the ninth round Ever caught Charlie flush on the jaw with a left swing. The blow knocked White half way across the ring and he sat on the second rope. It was a mighty wallop. This battle convinced fans that Hammer was better than ever.

Will Give Bennie Tough Fight.

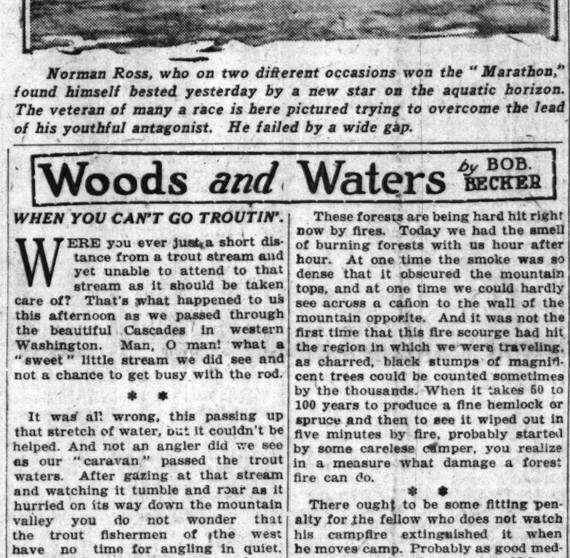
Whether Hammer will be able to give the champion as tough a fight as he did before Bennie won the title remains to be seen. Ever is confident he will win the popular decision, while Manager George Ferguson is under the impression that his man will win by a knockout.

Promoter Fitzsimmons has made elaborate preparations to handle a large crowd. The prices of admission will be $3, $5, and $10. Special boats will carry thousands from Chicago at the round trip rate of $1.

THE START IN THE GREAT I. A. C. RIVER MARATHON

Never before in the history of the annual water event that lines the banks of the Chicago river with crowds of spectators, as half a hundred or more of the best local swimmers test their endurance in a race of approximately three and one-half miles, was the start more auspicious than yesterday. The contestants seemed to hit the water in unison, and are here pictured as they are making their getaway from the Municipal pier.

Here we have the youngster, Richard Howell, as he plowed through the water about half way from the pier to the Wells street bridge. If landlubbers think it is any fun to paddle through the aqua at top speed for a long distance, the river will be there today for them to try it out.



RICHARD HOWELL.

Norman Ross, who on two different occasions won the "Marathon," found himself bested yesterday by a new star on the aquatic horizon. The veteran of many a race is here pictured trying to overcome the lead of his youthful antagonist. He failed by a wide gap.

to whom should go a share of the laurels won by yesterday's victor. McGillivray coached his protege carefully, never urging him to tiring exertion. Bud Wallen, a three time winner of the race, and Johnny Weissmuller, sponsored Ross.

Plows Through Water.

It was the old story of youth against age. Big and strong, outweighing Ross, who is himself a "mountain of a man," Howell plowed along at a steady, rapid gait, his arms flailing the water white. Though he showed no weakness, Ross' older muscles failed to respond to the swift pace set by the youngster, who had an advantage of 150 yards at the river mouth.

Stroking powerfully and apparently unwinded by the three and a half mile stretch, Howell flashed up to the Wells street bridge amid the cheers of the crowd that lined the wharves and hung over the bridge railings. Then came Ross, and five minutes after him, George Borst of the Central Y. M. C. A., and Sam Greller of the Jewish People's institute, only a few seconds apart. Then the other thirty-six came straggling in, and the race was over.

Charles A. Dean, chairman of the I. A. C. athletic committee, acted as referee of the swim, with F. W. Blankley as chief judge, and Roy A. Davis as starter.

CHICAGOANS WIN BOXING BOUTS AT CAMP ROOSEVELT

Camp Roosevelt, Laporte, Ind., July 29.—[Special.]—Final bouts in the boxing tournament staged by the Y. M. C. A. were fought tonight, with Chicago boys winning a number of the places. The winners:

105 pound class—Fred R. McBrien, Staunton, Ill., Company D.
115 pounds—Pasqual Schiavone, 1102 Vernon Park place, Chicago, Company D.
125 pounds—William Cessna, Webster City, Ia., Company B.
135 pounds—Will Jacobs, 4341 North Kildare avenue, Chicago, Company B.
145 pounds—Clarence Norwood Jr., 4624 Greenwood avenue, Chicago, Company A.
135 pounds—John Weislogel, Hamilton, O., band.

The best bout of the tournament was in the 135 pound class, between Jacobs of Company B and Powers of Company A. Superiority in boxing ability won Jacobs the decision.

KILBANE-CRIQUI GO IN MAKING

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—An international championship match between Johnny Kilbane, king of the featherweights, and Eugene Criqui, European titleholder, is in the making. It was reported today that Tex Rickard has offered $50,000 to Kilbane to meet Criqui at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City on Labor day.

Criqui while in this country will be represented by Jack Kearns, and Dan McKettrick. The little Frenchman is expected to arrive here shortly with the set purpose of securing a match with Kilbane. Criqui has defeated every formidable contender in Europe.

Bogus Tickets Passed at Leonard-Tendler Go

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—Counterfeiters shared in the profits from the recent world's lightweight title bout between Bennie Leonard and Lew Tendler in Jersey City. As was the case on the occasion of the Dempsey-Carpentier battle a year ago, the bogus ticket makers reaped a small harvest. Inspection of the tickets collected at the various entrances to Rickard's arena disclosed that more than 1,700 counterfeit pasteboards were accepted.

Wilson, Kilbane Rate as Mere Challengers in N. Y.

New York, July 29.—The New York State Boxing commission made another move today in its program of "making champions fight," having announced that it will recognize the winner of the Dave Rosenberg-Phil Krug bout as the head of the middleweight class, and the Johnny Dundee-Danny Frush mill as featherweight champions. Today the commission notified Wilson and Kilbane that they will be given "first consideration" for a match with the winners of the two scheduled bouts and an opportunity to regain the titles in the respective divisions.

BANNING OF SCALPERS MAROON AIM IN NEW TICKET SELLING PLAN

PAST ticket selling uproars at Maroon football games have influenced University of Chicago authorities to adopt a new plan for the distribution of football tickets, which will be put in practice this fall. The essential feature of the plan, which combines elements of the Yale, Harvard and Princeton systems, is that all tickets for the Princeton, Illinois and Wisconsin games will be assigned on the basis of written applications, with preference given to students, alumni and faculty.

The number of tickets for any one person will be restricted to four, with the understanding that at least one seat will be occupied by the applicant. Application blanks will be mailed early in September to all graduates of the university, who are expected to agree not to dispose of the tickets to scalpers. Communications will be handled by the football tickets committee in care of the University of Chicago, to which they should be addressed, instead of Bartlett gymnasium.

RICKARD OFFERS WILLARD DATE WITH DEMPSEY

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—Jess Willard, former world's heavyweight champion and challenger of the present title holder, Jack Dempsey, has received a contract from Tex Rickard offering him a bout with Dempsey Oct. 6, he announced today.

The contract is as yet unsigned, Willard preferring to substitute Oct. 31 or a later date. He said, "I have accepted Rickard's terms with the exception of the date."

White to Meet Barrett at New York August 7

New York, July 29.—Charlie White, Chicago lightweight, and Bobby Barrett of Philadelphia have been matched for a fifteen round decision contest in New York velodrome Aug. 7, Tex Rickard announced today.

Woods and Waters

by BOB. BECKER

WHEN YOU CAN'T GO TROUTIN'.

WERE you ever just a short distance from a trout stream and yet unable to attend to that stream as it should be taken care of? That's what happened to us this afternoon as we passed through the beautiful Cascades in western Washington. Man, O man! what a "sweet" little stream we did see and not a chance to get busy with the rod.

It was all wrong, this passing up that stretch of water, but it couldn't be helped. And not an angler did we see as our "caravan" passed the trout waters. After gazing at that stream and watching it tumble and roar as it hurried on its way down the mountain valley you do not wonder that the trout fishermen of the west have no time for angling in quiet, placid lakes and streams such as you find in the middle west. Troutin' in the mountains means, as a rule, swift, active, rushing, cold water — water in which it is difficult sometimes to keep your feet. And about you are fragrant forests, usually virgin forests, that are almost as attractive as the streams themselves.

These forests are being hard hit right now by fires. Today we had the smell of burning forests with us hour after hour. At one time the smoke was so dense that it obscured the mountain tops, and at one time we could hardly see across a cañon to the wall of the mountain opposite. And it was not the first time that this fire scourge had hit the region in which we were traveling, as charred, black stumps of magnificent trees could be counted sometimes by the thousands. When it takes 50 to 100 years to produce a fine hemlock or spruce and then to see it wiped out in five minutes by fire, probably started by some careless camper, you realize in a measure what damage a forest fire can do.

There ought to be some fitting penalty for the fellow who does not watch his campfire extinguished it when he moves camp. Probably as good medicine as any for that type would be to put him on the fire fighting gang for about twenty-four hours without rest and let him battle with a creeping forest blaze. That is some medicine, and we'll wager that twenty-four hours of that heat and dust and gasping for breath in acrid smoke would convert the most careless camper alive.

ILLINOIS STATE RIFLE BODY TO BUY EQUIPMENT

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Illinois State Rifle association at the Hamilton club, decision was reached to send a fully equipped state rifle team to the national matches at Camp Perry, O., in September.

For the first time in history, the Illinois team last year came home winners of the famous Port Clinton trophy. This prompted the state association to start a campaign to raise the necessary funds to provide the equipment with which it is believed the crack shots of Illinois will stand an excellent chance of "cleaning up" in most of the events.

Gen. Leroy T. Steward and James Edgar Brown of the Hamilton club and the Hon. A. R. Eppstein were appointed as a committee to take charge of the campaign.

The campaign will be carried into every city in the state. The fund required is estimated at between $3,000 and $5,000 dollars. The team is composed of twenty men who have to take part in a series of matches stretching over the better part of the month of September.

MAY WINS FROM BURTON IN SHOOT AT LINCOLN PARK

A program of three big events was run off yesterday at Lincoln Park Gun club. The first was a 50 target distance handicap which was won by J. H. May in a shootoff with Ward Burton, 23 to 22, after they tied at 39. The twenty yard event was captured by H. M. Rowley with 43, nosing out A. Lino by one target.

The third event was at eighteen yards, and was won by Dr. F. W Belknap with 43. Otto Hassell was second with 42. The sixteen yard event was won by C. Ebbole with 36. Twenty-five pairs shot in the doubles, with W. G. Warren finishing on top with 49. E. McCormick was second high with 46, followed by:

H. E. Eickerman, 44; Dean Berger, 44; Dr. W. E. Little, 39; H. A. Henry, 39; E. C. Buchan, 38.

A special four man team match finished the program. They shot 400 targets at sixteen yards. The quartet which was captained by E. C. Buchan won from Dean Bergen's team, 381 to 380. Berger got 99 out of a possible 100.

YACHT INTREPID WINS CHARLEVOIX 3 DAY REGATTA

Charlevoix, Mich., July 29.—[Special.]—Intrepid, which early this week won the annual Chicago to Mackinac yacht race of the Chicago Yacht club, also took first honors in the annual regatta of the Charlevoix Yacht club, which closed three days of racing on Pine lake here this afternoon. The yacht was skippered by D. F. Prather of Chicago, its owner. Rainbow was second; Jackson Park II., owned and skippered by A. A. Bennett of Chicago, third; and Alpha, owned and skippered by R. W. Simmons of St. Louis, tied for fourth place with Tiger, owned by J. H. Smith of Detroit and skippered by George Duffield, of the same city.

Seven-Mile Triangle Course.

Other yachts in the race were Orello of Milwaukee; Vanadis, Gordon Seagrove, Chicago; and Spider, C. L. Broomster, Chicago. Spider withdrew after the first day of racing. The course was seven miles around a triangle, both on Thursday and Saturday, with a straight run from Charlevoix to Boyne City Friday.

In the special class for open boats, Cynthia, owned and sailed by John P. Wilson II. of Chicago, won. Other boats in this race were Jane, Robert Stuart, Chicago, and Whistle Wing, Joseph King, Chicago.

Detroit Motor Boat Victor.

In this afternoon's motor boat race Laura B., owned and motored by Samuel T. Gilbert of Detroit, took the cup, with Militant, owned by J. B. Lord of Chicago, not far in the rear.

The regatta judges were Frank Weaver, chairman of the regatta committee of the Chicago Yacht club; Harold, Clarence and Norman Shaw, George Armborst, Chicago, and Ray Hamilton, Charlevoix.

Commodore Sheldon Clark of the Chicago Yacht club has disposed of Rainbow, flagship of the Mackinac island cruise, to Steadman of Harbor Springs.

MOTOR BOATS IN RACE EVENTS AT FOX LAKE TODAY

The Fox River and Lakes Improvement association will hold a special program of motor boat races this afternoon at Fox Lake, starting in front of the Mineola hotel. Eight races are listed for the displacement classes, the final being a free for all.

In addition to the races there will also be exhibitions of aquaplanes and speed trials by hydroplanes. Suitable prizes will be awarded the winners. The association has planned a program of races for the remainder of the season.

Abe and George Defeat Gardner and Johnston

Wausau, Wis., July 29.—In an exhibition thirty-six hole match Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, British professionals, defeated Bob Gardner of Chicago and Jimmy Johnston of Minneapolis, 2 and 1, today. At the end of the morning's round Duncan and Mitchell were 7 up. Duncan and Mitchell each made 70 this morning and Gardner and Mitchell made the round in 72 each. Par of course is 74.

Hagen-Kirkwood Beat Sarazen-Fotheringham

Long Branch, N. J., July 29.—Walter Hagen and Joe Kirkwood defeated Jean Sarazen, national open champion, and George Fotheringham today, 5 and 4, in eighteen holes. The game was played as an exhibition match at the Norwood Country club.

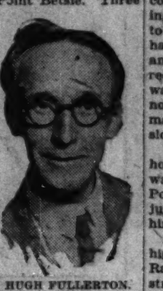
Kirkwood was low at 72, Hagen taking 74, to 79 for Sarazen, whose short game was far below average.

THE RAINBOW'S LOG OF THRILLS ON THE MACKINAC RACE

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

ARTICLE III.

MIDNIGHT; a racing sea astern, a heavy southwest breeze driving Rainbow north by east, a point east—straight down the steamer lane for Point Betsie. Three flames to west against the pitchy sky marking Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee with the faint blur of Chicago fading astern. Eight hours down the racing course and seventy-seven miles logged. Faintly astern to the west the light of a yacht fleeing straight north—Rainbow leading the fleet.



HUGH FULLERTON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

6:30 a. m., port watch, wind lighter. Agawa coming up. Intrepid evidently passed to westward during early morning. Sail on horizon. Much difference in opinion regarding taking east or west shore courses. Skipper, relying upon weather predictions, against own judgment agrees to follow steamer course. Northeast by north. Speed down to four and a half miles. Sea running heavily. Rainbow riding like duck. Laid off at 7 o'clock to set light balloon, but with lack of canvas cannot hold Agawa, which is footing and pointing better. Breakfast on deck, with cantaloupe, ham and eggs, hot bread, and black coffee.

Mutiny Threatened.

Mutiny threatened. Skipper cleaned his shoes and shaved and Ed followed his example. Crew complains that there is too much style.

At 10 o'clock land disappearing. Position off White lake. At 11 o'clock no land in sight. Lake vacant save a dot, which seems to be Intrepid.

The wind dropped and the change resulted in a sacred concert by Charlie, who was in good voice. Dinner on deck: Chicken, tongue, salad, peaches, and angel cake. It was the skipper's birthday cake, and if the wind continues light he'll get back in time to eat the next one.

Land sighted to east at 1:30. Barometer rising and every one pulling for it to fall. Argument as to exact position started the mind, but ships carrying more canvas gaining. Picked up Vanadis, due west and sailing well. Agawa sighted three miles ahead. The wind freshened and the sky became overcast at 3:30, and Jackson Park II. and Spider were sighted racing each other off to the westward. With the freshening wind Rainbow raced down upon Agawa rapidly.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Rainbow was off Pentwater, Mich., having held her own with boats carrying greater sail areas. The wind swung to the northwest, then north, and Rainbow came about off Pentwater in a thirty mile blow.

Without knowing it Rainbow was at the turning point of the race. The lake was piling up in huge rollers against the dangerous, bar guarded coast off Pentwater, the bars stretching north across Ludington entrance to Big Point Sable. The storm which had raged evidently was dying out—and everything depended upon the direction of the wind when it shifted. It was blowing almost straight from the north with lessening strength which made progress against the big seas slow and laborious.

Five sails were sighted inside of an hour. Disaster overtook us: Cookie was sick—the first and last victim. Poor Cookie is probably the best skillet juggler on the lakes, and we missed him.

At 10 o'clock, wallowing wildly in high seas with light and gusty winds, Rainbow was tacking on and off, straight out and a beat back. Cookie was trying to throw up his job and Charlie, unfeelingly, dropped him a boat sponge advising him to throw that up.

The night was pitch dark. To the starboard the big light on Big Point Sable lifted. Around the great bay lights flashed and disappeared. We knew that four and perhaps five of the racers were caught in the same predicament, and it was a question whether any had succeeded in getting past that area and escaping northward before the head winds and high seas fell upon them.

At 11:20 that night Rainbow was on the starboard tack, with the right of way, and battling seas that ran higher and higher.

Stowed Cookie in Bed.

We stowed Cookie in a soft bed of light canvas on top of the engine, and poured more canvas over him, permitting him to sleep in such peace as he could find.

Suddenly, almost upon Rainbow, appeared lights. Coming booming on from shoreward on the port tack, was a yacht, half smothered in seas.

Warning yells and shouts were swept away in the half gale, and the pounding of seas drowned the warning whistles. The right of way was Rainbow's, but, rather than stand on sea etiquette, the cry, "Hard a lee, stand by to go over" sent the men leaping to stations. Rainbow went about just in time. A yacht, flashed past half a boat length away, and we recognized Agawa. So deep was it in the seas that the crew had not seen Rainbow's lights until too late to make the shift.

The starboard watch, which had been roused by the alarm, went back to bunks, cussing out Agawa's crew, and just as they were falling asleep Rainbow suddenly was lifted on a huge wave. The water seemed to fall away from under it and it seemed to drop straight downward with a crash that must have reminded it of its days on the Grand Banks.

Water Pours Over Decks.

Water poured over its decks in a solid mass of green. The port watch clung to lines, the commodore, at the helm, lowered his head and hung on. Water burst through the ports and shot into the cabin as if from the nozzles of fire hose. The crew turned over, cussed and went to sleep again. Rainbow shook herself and shed water as if playing and rode high and free, taking the big rollers with a lift and rush that was exhilarating, excepting for poor Cookie.

Never again during that entire battle did water heavier than spray hit the decks of the little ship—nor was her rail ever down in the water.

Fifteen minutes after that wave deluged us, the Starboard watch took charge as the whistle blew. The Commodore, who had not been below for thirty-two hours, yielded the wheel to Mel and crawled into his bunk.

BY JOE DAVIS.

The annual junior championship of the Western Golf association, which will be held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at Olympia Fields, the annual team championship of the Chicago District Golf association at Indian Hill on Wednesday, and the annual southpaw tournament of the Midlothian Country club on Thursday will be the main local attractions this week.

BURTON W. MUDGE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The western junior title is held by Burton Mudge Jr. of Exmoor, who won last year at Nashville. It is open to players under 20 years of age and is expected to draw one of the best fields in its history.

Onwentsia Now Titleholder.

The team honors of the Chicago District Golf association rest with Onwentsia, and that club is expected again to make a strong bid for the Charles Evans trophy. Indian Hill will have a strong four, and the Edgewood club of La Grange should finish near the top.

Lew Pitcher and Frank Helmer, moving spirits in the annual event of the left handers, expect a record field. Wallace Winter of Onwentsia is the present champion.

President Albert R. Gates and Secretary Harless of the Western Golf association recently visited the Oakland Hills club of Detroit, which will be the scene of the western open tournament starting Aug. 23. The Chicagoans report that the course is a stiff one and in fine shape.

On Aug. 22 the Chicago District Golf association will hold its annual club relations day tournament at Hinsdale.

Public Links Players at Toledo.

The first amateur public links championship of the United States will be held Aug. 28 to 31 at Ottawa Park, Toledo, one of the best public park courses in the country. Philadelphia, and New York are sending teams of 12 to 15 players, and San Antonio is sending a team of six. Chicago is planning to send at least 12, and President Norman C. Naylor of the C. D. G. A. and President Albert R. Gates of the Western Golf association have sent a circular letter to clubs in the Chicago District Golf association, asking each of them to donate $25 towards sending the Chicago team.

Assistant Secretary T. J. McMahon of the United States Golf association, has issued the program for the national amateur championship Sept. 2 to 9, at the Country club of Brookline, Mass. The tournament is open to players whose names appear on the 1922 eligibility list of the U. S. G. A. and such foreigners visiting here who may be invited to compete.

The Championship Committee.

The championship committee this year is composed of Robert A. Gardner of Onwentsia, Joshua Crane and Albert D. Locke of Boston, Edward S. Moore of New York, Thomas B. Paine of Atlanta and Alan D. Wilson of Philadelphia. The entry fee is $5 and entries must be made through the secretaries of clubs. Nominations must be sent to T. J. McMahon, 55 John street, New York by Aug. 19.

HOLD TRIALS TO PICK RIDERS FOR BICYCLE TOURNEY

Elimination trials will be held soon in Chicago to determine the two bicycle riders, junior and senior, who will represent the state of Illinois in the national championships of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, Sept. 16, at Atlantic City, N. J. The western board of control of the league will meet tomorrow evening to classify those who are to take part in the trials. Riders and representatives of all bicycle clubs are invited to attend the meeting and make suggestions.

Twenty-Six States Represented

Twenty-six states will be represented in the national meet by their champions in junior and senior classes, who will be determined by various local trials and later state eliminations.

The senior national competition will include the quarter, third, half, and one mile scratch races and the five mile event, unpaced against time. In the junior division, boys up to 15 years old will race the quarter, third, and half mile scratch events and a one mile distance, upaced against time.

Point System to Govern.

The rider winning the greatest number of points in the series of each division will be declared national champion. Contestants' expenses will be paid to and from Atlantic City.

Only riders who are registered with the league and have not competed in any meets not sanctioned by the league are eligible for the national championships. Entries should be made with Julian T. Fitzgerald, western representative, 2812 West North avenue.

INWOOD COUNTRY CLUB LANDS 1923 OPEN GOLF MEET

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—The Inwood Country club, located near Far Rockaway, has been selected as the site for the 1923 national open golf championship, Morton Wild, secretary of the club, announced today. The United States Golf association selected the site with the approval of the Professional Golfers' association.

The course is comparable, according to experts, to that at Sandwich, England, where the British open was staged this year. It is located on a peninsula and is bounded on three sides by Jamaica bay. It is of the Scotch type of seaside circuits, mostly on level ground.

Its present length is 6,324 yards and par is 36—36—72. The course is so difficult that the official record is 71.

WINS CANADIAN OPEN GOLF TITLE

Montreal, Que., July 29.—L. A. Watrous of Bedford, Mich., won the Canadian open golf championship today with a score of 303 for the seventy-two holes over the course of the Mount Bruno club.

Another American, Tom Kerrigan of the Siwanoy club, Mount Vernon, N. Y., finished second with 304. Other leaders were E. Bannister, Winnipeg, 309; A. H. Murray, Montreal, 309; Jack Gordon, Buffalo, 310; Tom McNamara, Siwanoy, New York, 312.

It was the fourth straight year that an American has won.

Patterson, Anderson Beat Johnston and Wertheim

New York, July 29.—In an exhibition doubles match today Gerald Patterson and J. O. Anderson of the Australian Davis cup team won from William M. Johnston, American Davis cup player, and R. C. Wertheim of Australia in three sets, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

For PLAYERS of WHIST By A. R. METCALFE

DISCARDING IS A TRIAL, BUT EASY AND EFFECTIVE.

DISCARDING is a trial to most players, but can be made both easy and effective. Like every other department of the game, its efficiency is in exact ratio to its simplicity. Boiled down, the rule for discarding is simply to throw away the cards which you do not want.

A discard in suit therefore signifies weakness in that suit when discarded in the natural order. Reversing the order reverses the meaning. Thus, supposing the bid to be no trump and a club led, south discards the deuce of hearts. This indicates weakness in the heart suit and probably strength in one suit which has not been led. Should south, however, discard first the five of hearts and then a smaller heart, he would be showing strength in the heart suit, and guarding a minor honor in another suit.

Two Discards Tell.

Two discards from the same suit positively tells his partner that he has some strength in the other. The kindergarten discard, that is a seven or higher card, indicating strength and a lower card weakness, is of use to beginners, but a handicap to players after the first season.

There are many times when it is more profitable to conceal the strength of the suit than to show it. Suppose, for instance, west to have bid a no-trump and dummy puts down a strong hand including the ace, queen, and ten of diamonds; south, holding the king, jack, seven, and deuce of diamonds, should discard the deuce at the first opportunity in order to encourage the declared to finesse the suit.

In such a case, any information which south might give regarding the diamond suit would benefit the declarer more than it could possibly help north's progress. Should the discard come on a trick which north had won or might win, south would discard the other suit. All the phony discards, corkscrew, odd and even, rotary, etc. are unmitigated nuisances and something less than useless.

Exit Cards Hard Problem.

Deals in which exit cards are more important than cards of reentry are the hardest nuts for the average player to crack. One of the most common forms in which such situations develop is illustrated by the deal which follows:

THE HANDS.

S—Q, 9, 6, 5, 2.
H—A, Q.
C—8, 7, 6.
D—8, 4.

S—A, K, 10
H—10, 7, 3
C—A, Q, 10, 6
D—A, Q, 7

S—6, 4, 3.
H—J, 9, 6.
C—K, J, 4.
D—6, 5, 3, 2.

S—J, 7.
H—8, 5, 4, 2.
C—9, 5, 2.
D—K, J, 10, 9.

Score: 0—0.

West dealt and bid one no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the original lead.

Tricks—	THE PLAY. N.	E.	S.	W.
1	6S	8S	JS	KS
2	3C	JC	2C	6C
3	7C	KC	5C	10C
4	8C	4C	9C	QC
5	2S	9S	3S	AC
6	HQ	H6	H4	H3
7	D8	D2	D9	DQ
8	D4	D3	D10	DA
9	HK	H9	H5	H7
10	HA	HJ	H8	H10
11	8S	6S	7S	10S
12	D5	D6	DJ	AS
13	QS	D9	DK	D7

West secured nine tricks.

Trick No. 1 should have informed the north player that the declarer had the ace and 10 of spades remaining and that north must certainly lose a trick should he lead that suit a second time. As a matter of fact north did reason out that proposition, but did not know how to evade the trap or foresee the trap which the declarer placed for him later.

He had a hazy idea about keeping cards of exit when he threw away one of his spades at trick 5 and kept the two worthless diamonds. He should, however, regardless of the risk of establishing one or more cards in that suit for the declarer, have played off his A, K, Q of hearts at the first opportunity.

The declarer played well in taking the second round of diamonds and then continuing the heart suit. He could not be certain that he would take the little diamond from the north hand or that north must win all tricks in the heart suit, but it was his only chance for game, and his play was correct.

1924 OLYMPICS TO DRAW BIGGEST FIELD OF NATIONS

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—Between fifty and sixty nations, the greatest number in the history of the Olympic games, will compete in the 1924 world games in Paris, Allan H. Muhr, secretary of the international committee, said today upon his arrival on the steamship Paris, with the French Davis cup team, of which he is captain.

"Both the far east and South America will be represented, giving the next Olympic the most worldwide aspect it ever has had," Mr. Muhr said. He will confer with the American Olympic committee about its plans. Work on the stadium, just outside of Paris, to seat between 50,000 and 60,000 spectators, is under way, he added.

The French Davis cup players, Andre Gobert, Henri Cochet, Jean Borotra, and Jean Samazeuilh, were met on their arrival today by an official committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association. They expect to enter the invitation tournament at Seabright, N. J., next week and may give exhibitions at Forest Hills before meeting the Australian team at Boston Aug. 10, 11, and 12.

Mr. Muhr is a native Philadelphian, but has been a resident of Paris for thirty years, where he is recognized as one of the leading European sports authorities. He also is secretary of the Racing association, which donated the site for the Olympic stadium.

ILLINOIS EXPERT BREAKS RECORD AT EDGEWATER

Rial E. Rolfe of Ridgemoor, member of the University of Illinois golf team and runner up in the recent Illini championship tournament at Urbana, broke the course record at Edgewater with 34—34—68, against a former figure of 71, held by Hiram D. Fargo Jr., and a par of 36—34—70. These figures appertain to the new course, which represents a year's work of revamping and improving several of the holes.

Rial had three birdies and was one over par at one hole going out, and two birdies and two misses coming in. His card:

Out	4	3	3	3	4	5	5	3	4—34
Par	4	4	4	3	5	5	4	3	4—36
In	3	4	4	3	5	5	4	3	4—34—68

HAWTHORNE NET TEAM IS BEATEN BY RIVER FOREST

Due to the opening of the western tennis championship tournament, which practically drained all local clubs of their interest, only two matches were reported yesterday in the Chicago Tennis association's interclub tournament.

In the south division "B" play, River Forest thumped Hawthorne, 7 to 2, on the loser's courts. W. Grabelle was the only Hawthorne player to win a singles match, and paired with R. G. Ziesimis captured the lone doubles victory for his team.

Illinois Bell Telephone journeyed to the Lawchester club courts and emerged with an easy 4 to 1 triumph in the division "C" class. Summaries:

DIVISION B.

GRIT AND SKILL OF MAY BUNDY BOW TO MOLLA

Harrison, N. Y., July 29.—[Special.]—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, national woman's champion, won the New York state championship here today on the grass courts of the Green Meadow Country club, defeating Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, several times former national champion, 4—6, 6—0, 6—1.

MOLLA MALLORY.

Mrs. Bundy, as in the 1921 national play, fell away through physical exhaustion as the match progressed. Her playing seemed to become less and less effective, until at last she seemed to be carrying herself forward against the champion only through sheer determination.

Her grit in the face of odds she appeared not to have the strength to overcome won her round after round of applause from the brilliant assemblage that watched the players.

At the start Mrs. Bundy played splendidly, completely baffling Mrs. Mallory with repeated sharp returns into the service court.

But her strokes were less sharp, and continually less accurate in the second set, and it was apparent that her strength was failing her.

Many friends in the gallery thought that final victory might still be hers if she could call enough reserve force into play, but the closing set saw Mrs. Bundy trying in vain to match her rival in a base line game.

TILDEN-RICHARDS WIN TRIALS FOR DAVIS CUP PLAY

New York, July 29.—William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards, national doubles champions, defeated R. Norris Williams and Watson M. Washburn in the American Davis cup doubles team trials at the Crescent A. C., Brooklyn, late today. The scores were 6—4, 4—6, 1—6, 6—3.

TILDEN-WEINER LOSE

New York, July 29.—Robert and Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco, the titleholders, will meet Samuel Hardy and S. Howard Voshell of New York, tomorrow in the final match for the Metropolitan doubles tennis championship. The Kinseys won in the semi-finals today from William T. Tilden and A. L. Weiner at Philadelphia, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2. Voshell and Hardy defeated Philip F. Neer of Portland, Ore., and James Davies of Los Angeles, intercollegiate champions, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Miss "Bobs" Waidner Wins Northwestern Net Title

Minneapolis, Minn., July 29.—Joe Armstrong and John McGee, both of St. Paul, won the Northwestern lawn tennis doubles championship this afternoon at Dee Haven courts by defeating Myron Hutchinson and Clarence Sanders, also of St. Paul, last year's champions, 7—5, 1—6, 6—4, 6—3. Miss "Bobs" Waidner of Winnetka, Ill., won the women's singles championship yesterday.

No Secret Disease Lurks to Mar This Home's Happiness

TO better safeguard our homes against infection from some secret disease was one of the motives which prompted the group of broad-minded, public-spirited Chicago citizens whose names appear in this advertisement, to organize the Public Health Institute—not for profit, but to render a real public service.

Outside of the medical profession few people realize to what an alarming extent the so-called social diseases have invaded the sanctity of homes and cast their blight upon innocent wives and helpless children.

Let no one doubt this. No higher authority could be quoted than Dr. Rupert Blue, former surgeon general, U. S. Public Health Service, who says: "Gonorrhea and syphillis constitute the most urgent, vital health problem confronting the country today. From time immemorial these diseases have been the scourge of mankind, flourishing in the darkness of ignorance and striking inexorably the innocent and helpless as well as the guilty. Now they must be exposed to the cleansing light of universal knowledge."

State boards of health are no less vigorous and outspoken in their notes of warning. The one issued by the Indiana State Board of Health is typical:

"The venereal diseases are social assassins. They spare neither virtue nor innocence. Why deny the existence of an assassin by professing to ignore his presence? Is that wise, brave or in any sense good policy? It would seem to be very much like the policy of the silly ostrich which, hiding its own eyes to danger, believes it is safe."

The Toll Exacted in Lives, Human Wastage and Dollars

We are not appealing to sentiment. There is little sentiment in facts and figures. Yet these facts and figures are such as should cause you Chicago men and women to do some close thinking.

In the United States alone, according to carefully compiled statistics, these twin scourges kill annually more than 300,000 people. And Chicago contributes its quota in full measure. But appalling as it is, the toll of human lives is by no means the greatest indictment that can be brought against these diseases.

Together they are responsible for 80 out of every 100 babies born dead; 20 out of every 100 people who are committed to insane asylums owe their defective mentality to the same cause.

Syphilis causes locomotor ataxia, paresis, paralysis, and degenerative changes of the vital organs. One eminent medical authority states that from 25 to 50 per cent of the major operations performed upon women are due to venereal infection, and he estimates that about one-third of the childless marriages are due to the same cause.

We pride ourselves on our efficiency. Yet these secret diseases so lower the vitality of those afflicted that one authority who has given the subject close investigation estimates the reduced efficiency is costing this country $300,000,000 a year! How much of that reduced efficiency does Chicago pay?

These Diseases Must Be Wiped Out

The Public Health Institute is making remarkable headway in wiping out venereal disease in Chicago. It is now more than two years since the Institute was founded, during which time its ministrations have steadily increased in number, until now its staff of physicians are treating approximately 800 men, women and children every week day—a monthly total of more than 20,000.

The facilities of the Public Health Institute are unequaled. Patients are examined and treated by thoroughly trained, skilled physicians, whose broad experience in treating these diseases is the best assurance that can be given that every case coming under their care will be treated according to the most approved methods known to medical science. The Institute maintains, as an auxiliary, the most completely equipped laboratory in America for its special work, where every diagnosis is verified by exact chemical, bacteriological and serological tests.

The utmost privacy possible is assured. Each patient, upon registering, receives a number and thenceforward calls for his record by number only. Forty individual treatment rooms insure prompt attention.

On a different floor from the men's department there is a separate department for women and children—with trained nurses in constant attendance, ministering to the increased comfort of the patient.

Any person coming to the Institute will find those in attendance kindly and sympathetic; he will return to his work with a heavy burden lifted, for he will know that the best that medicine affords is at work to get him well.

The cost of treatment is small, and is available on terms so liberal that any person regularly employed can afford it.

If from any cause whatsoever a person has reason to suspect infection from a "social" disease—and it should be noted that frequently a disease of this character lurks in the system for years without revealing its presence—we urge the importance of an immediate examination. Even a day's delay is dangerous—not only to the patient but also to those near and dear to him.

As for the person who already knows he is afflicted, he of all people should undertake immediate treatment — the best that may be had.

MOTORDOM

Difficult Roads Remove Joy from Foreign Tours

So many auto owners are planning to motor in foreign countries next year that the Automobile Club of Southern California has prepared a bulletin of national interest showing touring conditions in some of the out of the way foreign lands.

This bulletin, just issued by the touring bureau of the club, shows conditions abroad as follows:

Australia: Reasonable conveniences exist here for motor travel. You drive on the left and pass vehicles on the right.

Brazil: It is necessary to obtain as many licenses to drive an auto as there are cities.

Belgium: Roads here are mostly paved with cobbles except in the departments of Liege, Namur, and Ardennes. Many of the interesting old cities of Belgium cannot be reached except over cobble roads. Visit the valley of the River Meuse.

Egypt: Good roads as known in America do not exist in Egypt except in the vicinity of the larger towns. A new road has just been built between Cairo and Alexandria, however, according to late reports received by the auto club. Owing to the absence of roads and the difficulty in obtaining gasoline it is not advisable to take an auto to Egypt now. Cars may be hired there.

India: Most roads are made of "kunker" and are well maintained. The grand trunk highway extends from Peshawar to Calcutta, and all the roads of southern India are generally good. North of Delhi the roads are also good. Bridges are noticeable by their absence over the big rivers.

Another bulletin is to be issued by the auto club at an early date giving information on Italy, England, France, Jamaica, Japan, and Malta.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's out to learn the truth about motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 cash for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question Mrs. G. M. Crusins, 119 East 3d street, Sterling, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

In your travels, what city appealed to you the most?

The Answers.

Hugo Nelson, 1155 South Clarence avenue, Oak Park, Ill.—I have a special liking for Rensselaer, Ind., and I hardly know why. I have seen many of the larger cities. I just like to go there the same as another might prefer an old-fashioned hotel in some city having up to date hotels.

Ole Olsen, 1512 North Talman avenue, estimator.—Cleveland, O., is the best laid out city in the east, outside of Washington, D. C. The scenery, the accommodations, everything, is all that the traveler could ask for. It is quiet and restful there, and solid comfort to motor around and about.

Dr. R. Le Febre, 3935 West 26th street, dentist.—Returning from my tours it's a treat to set foot on these old granite pavements right here in Chicago. New York's boulevards do not compare with Chicago's, and they can have their 5th avenue. Stately Michigan avenue is preferable to New York's scattered tall buildings.

James Donovan, 1736 North California avenue, police officer.—The finest city in the country is Washington, D. C. And some day it will be the most attractive city in the world. Pennsylvania avenue, from the capitol to the White House, can't be beat. White buildings, beautiful avenues—some brilliant white, others shaded by arched trees.

A. L. Reaum, 4037 Waveland avenue, salesman.—The city that appealed to me most is Minneapolis, Minn. It is so clean and everything so well regulated. The streets are so wide that a lot of traffic can be handled. There's a great contrast between Minneapolis and narrow street cities like St. Paul and Chicago.

Iowa Improves Crossings.

Since one-third of Iowa's highway fatalities occurred last year at railroad crossings, the Iowa state highway commission has designated 416 grade crossings for improvements. Two hundred and ten of the danger spots have already been reconstructed. In thirty-five instances overpasses or underpasses have been built.

Tire Record.

Five hundred carloads, a total of 700,000 tires for the month of June, proved to be the largest month of tire sales since the founding of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company twenty-two years ago. The present demand is taxing the production, with no immediate indications of slackening.

Road Revenue.

Tourists along the National Parks highway, which runs through North Dakota from Chicago to points along the Pacific coast, spent $6,000,000 in towns along the route, K. B. Hawkins, traveling secretary of the highway association, told a meeting of the North Dakota section of the association in Fargo.

Then Why Tolerate It in Your Car?

You wouldn't stand for the inconvenience in your home—a table just inside the door that you have to squeeze past every time you went in or out. Why then squeeze and twist to get in and out of your car? Install a Neville More-Room Steering Wheel—(slides up out of the way)—and walk in and out with ease.

It is a handsome wheel of black walnut and polished aluminum. Standard equipment on many of America's finest cars. Made for every make. Your auto dealer can supply you.

8 Better Features

That Make Overland the Greatest Commercial Car Value in America

1. The chassis has been especially designed for commercial purposes and is not a passenger car makeshift.
2. The rear axle has been built to stand the strain of heavy loads and the shaft is quickly removable.
3. The frame extends clear under the entire body, reinforcing it and supporting the load.
4. The patented Overland Triplex Spring Suspension provides comfortable riding and protects fragile loads.
5. There is no superfluous passenger car cowl. Its absence provides maximum carrying space.
6. The transmission is of the most advanced three-speed type.
7. The consistently high gasoline mileage for which Overland passenger cars are famous is equally a feature of the commercial car.
8. And while on the subject of economy, do not overlook the price—the Overland at $450 is lower in price than any other fully equipped commercial car chassis.

Now Sidewall Protection!

This introduces to Chicago the finest quality cord tire ever made. A handsome, big mileage tire, having a feature no others possess — the Corduroy Cord with Sidewall Protection!

Sidewall Protection is the greatest development in tires since the coming of cords. Eight massive corrugations of live rubber flank the tread and resist the abrasive action of curbs, ruts, and sharp stones.

With most tires, 80% of all blow-outs occur at the sidewall. Sidewall blow-outs have been minimized in Corduroy Cords. Consequently, much longer mileage results.

Corduroy Cords are de luxe equipment for sport roadsters, luxurious closed cars, electrics, etc.

Yet they are moderately priced, so that even on the 30x3½ size the cost per mile is lower than on other tires.

A few more select dealers can secure the Corduroy Cord franchise, providing their location is not in a district where we already have representation

Motor Industry Rides July Hill in Highest Gear

Makers Fear Fall Freight Blockade May Hurt Record.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., July 29.—[Special.]—Midsummer lull in the automobile industry, which is an annual occurrence and for which the manufacturers always prepare, has developed only in spots which includes a few of the larger cities.

Authentic reports from the great farming districts, backed up by substantial orders, indicate that the farmers are beginning to buy after a long period of quietness. Dealers, it is pointed out, are not ordering cars in large numbers merely on a chance of selling them. The July output, however, will undoubtedly fall below that of June's record of 271,000, but it will surely go above the 200,000 mark. July, 1921, with a production of 176,000 passenger cars and trucks, was, with the exception of August, the best month of that year.

The truck production continues to average about 11 per cent of the total output. Substantial sales of light commercial vehicles are now being made, especially in the agricultural districts, but sales of heavy trucks are handicapped by the presence of a large number of unabsorbed American made army trucks sold in Europe after the armistice and reimported.

Unless the Graham act is passed by congress, several thousand more of these trucks will be brought back to this country for disposition. The Graham resolution would impose a prohibitive reimport duty.

No shrinkage has been noted in the volume of their business by parts makers.

Any forecast of production for the next five months is complicated by the fact that a serious freight blockade on the railroads seems certain to follow the resumption of coal carrying, together with the heavy grain harvest, which must be moved in a short time. With railroad equipment in bad order on account of shopmen's strike it appears inevitable that the carriers will be unable to handle the volume of miscellaneous freight which will be offered them during the third quarter.

The lake vessels are still carrying out of Detroit and Michigan hundreds of automobiles and trucks daily, and the popular driveaways are still in vogue.

XXIII. WISCONSIN CAMP SITES

STEADILY increasing tourist traffic, the source of Wisconsin's greatest summer revenue, has served to develop hospitality to a high degree in the Badger state. This year, in addition to pushing the highway improvement program to the limit, communities have entered into a free camp site race which has created more comfortable camps than may be found in any other like territory in the country. In each case the camps have more than paid for themselves, according to reports from county and township authorities.

The above map shows the location of 143 such free camps. There are in addition numerous other tourist camps where nominal fees are charged for the use of community accommodations.

The areas shown in the two black circles show the two most popular touring objectives visited by Chicago motorists during the month. They were located by checking the inquiries for road information and routes which came to Motordom in July.

Motor Exhibits Add Big Feature to 1922 Pageant

MOTORDOM struck a day from its touring calendar yesterday and discovered that the automotive section of the second annual Pageant of Progress rivals even the national auto shows in the number and variety of motor exhibits.

Scores of Chicago distributors and factory branches, members of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, have completed elaborate exhibits, which not only include a showing of all new car models, but also mechanical demonstrations of engineering progress in the industry.

A huge feature of the automotive section is the national industrial tractor show held in conjunction with the pageant at the pier. Sixty leading manufacturers of industrial equipment in the United States are represented in these exhibits which utilize tractors exclusively as power units. This industrial show plans a parade and special exhibit Aug. 10 with 20,000 people in line. Henry Ford has been invited to lead the procession which will include seventeen bands and fifty tractor floats.

Motors in Shanghai.

Motor vehicles in Shanghai number 2,500, more than three times the total of horses, according to the Shanghai Sunday Times. Coolie drawn rikishas, however, are the most popular type of equipage, totaling 16,000.

Latest Preserve Maps

NEW maps of the Cook county forest preserve district, now comprising 25,000 acres, are ready for distribution to motorists from suite 547 in the County building.

The map, developed by H. E. Rice, veteran Chicago pathfinder, shows county roads and the preserve district in detail. On its reverse side is the story of each of the fourteen tracts in the district, with instructions concerning motor, steam, and electric line routes.

The maps have been issued by President Daniel Ryan and his board associates, and are being distributed free of charge. One thousand of the supply are now available at THE TRIBUNE loop editorial office, Tribune building, Madison and Dearborn streets.

THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES
REO

The present series of Reo Sixes is the product of an organization which for eighteen years has shown a continuously successful growth. In this entire period there never have been any reorganizations, financial or otherwise, in the Reo Company—a record which attests to a demand for Reo cars which could only have been sustained by their inherent worth.

This record, and the fact that more than ninety percent of Reo sales are to Reo owners, are tangible evidence of the "quality in unseen places" and unusual value which have represented Reo's policy from the start.

Check over carefully those things which you believe a car of Reo's price class should offer—and then see Reo.

Market Highways Featured in New Illinois Plans

Wider Pavements Urged as Traffic Grows on Main Roads.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

WITH political embargoes lifted at last and all but a few routes in the great Illinois highway system definitely located, surveyed and planned, the 1922 road improvement program is assuming gigantic proportions. More than 1,000 miles of continuous, connected routes now offer unbroken pavement from state line to state line at the four points of the compass. Work on old contracts is proceeding on half as much mileage to connect city with city in the state, and new contracts approved or awarded this year will launch construction on some 400 miles more before the end of the building season.

As it stands, Illinois already offers more continuous pavement between important points of destination than any state in the middle west. The original state highway plan, which disregarded all of the old formulas for scattering short pieces of hard road at unrelated points throughout the state, ordered the building of four primary, interstate trunk lines. This concentrated work is now complete. It makes it possible for state traffic and tourist travel to roll over continuous pavement from Chicago to St. Louis via Danville, Marshall and Vandalia; from Chicago to St. Louis via Ottawa, Peoria, and Springfield; from Chicago to the Mississippi river via DeKalb, Dixon and Fulton and from the Wisconsin line to Marshall.

These completed trunk lines now take care of practically all of the interstate traffic which crosses Illinois from east to west and the important intrastate and tourist travel from north to south. Completion last week of the overhead bridge entering Marshall eliminates the last detour between Chicago and St. Louis on the Dixie-National highway route, and fast work near Bureau has closed all but one eleven mile gravel gap on the Chicago-Peoria-Springfield-St. Louis road.

This year's program, although delayed until nearly the close of the building season, will concentrate the actual building work next year on the more important market highways of the state. They call for practically continuous paving along the "Illini boulevard" from Joliet through Bloomington to Springfield to make a third and incidentally the shortest route from Chicago to St. Louis. The Egyptian trail through southern Illinois will also be completed. The ocean to ocean highway running from Danville through Champaign, Decatur, Springfield, Jacksonville, and to the Mississippi is given intensive attention and other market roads, including the corn belt trail, Grant highway and central western routes will be brought out of the mud.

According to reports from the state highway department, most of the construction work already completed or contracted for has been done with the aid of federal highway funds, as well as money from the 1918 bond issue and county treasuries. Thus the greatest cost of the state system to date has been shouldered directly by the automobile owners who use the road through payment of license fees. These funds have also provided for the marking of state routes and for maintenance.

So far there has been little need for expensive repairs along the completed pavements, but here and there the increasing weight of traffic has demonstrated that new provisions will soon be necessary to care for the cost of repairs.

A striking example is to be seen on Roosevelt road, between Forest Park and Wheaton, where overloaded trucks have damaged the concrete and asphalt paving in numerous places, and the eighteen foot width of surfacing is inadequate for the weight of traffic. Less than a month ago state and village road crews made extensive repairs all along the highway, but new holes have developed all along the road shoulders where vehicles are forced to turn out. Authorities agree that this trunk line must be widened in order to carry the traffic, and believe that in less than a year the state highway department will be confronted with the necessity of widening practically all of the main trunk lines leading from Chicago.

SMALLER CARS.

The average American passenger automobile has a wheelbase of 122 inches, carries 33x4 inch tires, and weighs 3,100 pounds. The engine is of six cylinders.

CAPE COD'S PATRIARCH

State authorities in Boston were at a loss for placing this "vintage" veteran on the pension list this year, until its present owner of Brockton, Mass., guaranteed to keep it in repair sufficient to insure it against falling apart in the street. With regular hours for rest, he declared, the "night owl" is good for several years to come. The picture shows one of its rest hours. Note the peaceful occupant and the weight which anchors the old steed to the pavement.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THE R. C. Cook company, distributors for Velie in the Chicago territory, received announcement last week of a new price cut in the model 58 touring car, effective at once. The cut of more than $100 brings the fully equipped job to $1,275. According to factory announcement, increased demand for the car has brought capacity production at the plant and gives the public the advantage of reduced production costs.

The steadily increasing demand for automobiles in 1922, coupled with advanced production methods, has made it possible for a number of manufacturers to announce price reductions. The revisions generally are small and represent savings made in the rapid turn over of materials and maximum speed gained in the big factories.

Among the companies which have already announced cuts in prices of new and former models are the Auburn, Olds, Oakland, and Pierce-Arrow companies. Several other big manufacturers are said to be contemplating revisions in their fall and winter price lines.

H. P. Carter, for three years manager of the Chicago Buick branch, was appointed district manager of the newly made Chicago district organization last week, when a factory plan creating eight sales districts in the country was inaugurated. C. F. Yonkers succeeds Mr. Carter as local branch manager. The new central district, with Chicago as headquarters, embraces Milwaukee, Battle Creek, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, and St. Louis territories.

Five hundred Gray cars were turned out in the Michigan plant during July, according to Frank L. Klingensmith, who supervised the opening of his exhibit at the Pier yesterday. During August he expects to produce fifty cars a day and by Jan. 1 to advance production to 200 cars daily.

Announcement was made last week by W. C. Durant, president of Durant Motors, Inc., of the addition to the line of Durant enteprises of a popular priced six cylinder automobile, to be known as the "Flint."

The car will be ready for public inspection by the middle of September, and for delivery Jan. 1, 1923. The price has been established at $1,180, and the manufacturing company at Flint, Mich., will have a capitalization of $5,000,000.

ONE REMEDY.

"Thank-you-mams" have been suggested for highways in New York state as a scheme to prevent violations of the automobile speed laws.

Ford Locomotive.

It was disclosed last week by Ford officials that a high efficiency oil burning locomotive is to be developed by the engineering forces of the Ford organization. The oil burning locomotive will raise railroad efficiency to the greatest degree possible, they say.

A laboratory, 200x800 feet, where all Ford engineers and scientists will be housed, will be built immediately in Dearborn. The new building will contain 3,500 rooms.

Two new plants are to be built—one at Green Island, near Troy, N. Y., for the manufacture of roller bearings, and the other at New Orleans, where cars will be assembled at the rate of 150 a day.

HIGH TAXI COSTS.

Upward of $1,500,000 is spent each week in New York City for taxi rides.

FARM AND GARDEN

Illinois Needs State Police for Rural Protection

By Frank Ridgway.

THE overflow of criminals from Chicago and other cities into the rural districts, where homes are robbed, cattle are poisoned, and barns are burned, has made the subject of state police a year round topic among Illinois farmers, bankers, and business men.

The state police has come to have a particular appeal to farmers since the program of road building has been started and the state of Illinois is being lined with surfaced boulevard-like highways that link up the cities and towns. Illinois' 12,300 miles of surfaced roads makes it possible for criminals to carry on their depredations at night in one part of the state and be hundreds of miles away by sunup the next morning.

Millions in Storage.

Corn cribs, granaries, cellars and smoke houses on the farms of Illinois are filled every year with more than a billion dollars worth of products. With the exception of an unloaded shot gun, an old toothless dog and possibly a ten cent look on the cellar or hen house door, this agricultural fortune goes unprotected. Dozens of country homes, stores and banks in small towns and at cross road villages are robbed almost every week in Illinois, and comparatively few criminals are brought to trial for such offenses. There is no way of getting the exact total of the heavy loss that is caused by burglars in the rural communities. More roads and high power cars are being built and more burglars are being trained every year which means that there is no relief with the present system of catching rural thieves. About 4,800 miles of hard surfaced roads will be added for the high speeding crooks to run over in this state by the end of the year.

Figures are not available to show the enormous fortunes that are gathered from the farmers here and there over the state every year. The Illinois bankers association's report shows how rapidly money is being stolen. If protected, money is so easy for burglars to get, then unprotected farm products must be an easy prey.

Loss of $1,512,000 in One Year.

The bankers report shows that in 1919, 1920 and 1921 there were 197 burglaries, forty-one holdups, resulting in a loss of $1,512,000 or enough money to maintain a state police force of 425 men to patrol Illinois country roads for three years.

With no highway police protection in this state the speed maniacs are becoming a menace to farmers when they are on the roads hauling grain, live stock and other farm products to market. Even tourists are in danger of speeding cars that have little or nothing to fear so far as law enforcement is concerned. City men who own farms in the country make their visits less frequent every year because of the danger on Illinois' unprotected roads.

Highway Police in Other States.

States that have police organizations to patrol the country roads are: Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Tennessee. Texas has the Texas rangers. Delaware, Nevada, Idaho, Washington and Arizona are in the process of organization. The state police question has been up before the state legislatures in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. Many farmers as well as business men and bankers have come to the conclusion that if a state police is a good thing for all of these other states it would be a valuable thing to keep down rural crime in Illinois. Before fully analyzing the expense of operating a state police they throw their hands in the air when told that it costs about $7 a day for each policeman. They breathe more freely and are much surprised when told that the state police can be made a self supporting organization. According to Frank F. Barth, secretary of the state police committee of the Illinois chamber of commerce, Illinois could have a state police without increasing the state taxes one cent. Even if the expense had to be paid out of state funds collected from taxes it would only cost 5 cents for each $100 of taxable valuation for state purposes, and the city would pay about two-thirds and the farmers one-third, he said.

New York Force Pays Its Way

The Illinois state police problem would be quite similar to that of New York state where troopers started patrolling the roads in 1917. Last year New York's state police of 350 men cost $1,087,000, but the force more than paid for itself, collecting $250,000 for delinquent motor taxes, $300,000 in fines and $500,000 from the sale of alcohol extracted from seized liquor, a total of $1,350,000 or a surplus of $263,000.

DOWN ON THE FARM

BUMPER CROP OF DOGS—P. G. Peterson said in his letter which came along with this picture that in Piatt county, Ill., everything grows in large quantities, including hogs, corn, and cattle—dogs, too. He sent the above picture along to prove it. This is a picture of a part of Mrs. Collie's family.

Peterson added, "She became peeved and took her other two away when we took this picture."

If you have a crop bigger than this, send a picture of it to the Farm and Garden editor, The Tribune.

Brand to Be Marketing Expert for Government

Charles J. Brand, who was the organizer and first chief of the bureau of markets, Washington, D. C., has resigned as vice president of the American Fruit Growers, Inc., to become consulting specialist in marketing in the United States department of agriculture, according to the Official Record, a government publication. Mr. Brand is to take over his new work at once.

CHARLES J. BRAND.

He will have an office in the Packer and Stockyards administration, says the report, and will carry on and direct investigations and studies of the packing industry. As a highly specialized marketing expert his services to the entire agricultural department as a consulting specialist are considered of great value to agriculture.

Government work is not new to Mr. Brand, for he was for many years connected with the bureau of plant industry in charge of clover and alfalfa and paper plant investigations and cotton handling and marketing. It was largely his plans and ideas that were used in organizing the bureau of markets, which he headed soon after its formation.

Dairymen's Jottings

Not many years ago a cow that produced forty pounds of butterfat in a month was a rarity, but there are many of them owned now by western dairymen. Members of cow testing associations in nine of the western states own 9,484 cows that have made more than forty pounds of butterfat in a single month, according to a report from the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

For years dairymen have been arguing about the advantages and disadvantages of fall and spring calves, and most of them have considered chiefly the labor involved and probably have not given enough attention to the production of milk. It has been found at the Kansas station at Manhattan that a cow calving in the fall will produce thirty to forty pounds more butterfat in a year than one calving in the spring.

Clover is an essential crop in the rotation on the average dairy farm, and dairymen are finding out that if they are to produce the best crop of this legume they must lime the ground. Fall is the time many farmers spread lime on their clover fields. Limestone is cheap and pays for itself when applied where clover is being grown.

DURANT

Real cause for a Pageant of Progress:

In January, 1922 (seven months ago), Durant stood fortieth in number of new cars registered in Cook County.

During the month of May Durant was eighth! And would have been fifth if more cars could have been obtained.

Figures like these have but one meaning: People find in Durant the very qualities they are looking for—Economy, Reliability, Durability. And the complete satisfaction of the early Durant purchasers accounts for Durant's splendid popularity and good will today.

You, too, will admire the Durant Four. Its special valve-in-head motor, quiet and sturdy, the patented Tubular Backbone, which prevents body squeaks and rattles; the riding comfort of its long springs; the instant accessibility of all parts — these are some of the features which justify Durant's great success in Chicago and Illinois.

Annual Midsummer Flower Show Opens in Lake Forest

LAKE FOREST'S annual midsummer flower show, which opened yesterday at noon, is serving as a great outdoor horticultural school to flower lovers. Visitors from many parts of the country are attending. There is probably no other place in the whole United States where a more rare collection of flowers, shrubs and trees can be found than those at Lake Forest. Elaborate exhibits of flowers are on display at the Gorton school. The way flowers may be used for decorative purposes is a feature of the indoor exhibits.

The rarest and finest blossoms from Lake Forest greenhouses and gardens are being shown. There is a great treat in store for many of the visitors who come expecting to see only flowers. The show is unique because the management has arranged for visitors to see indoor displays and then take tours with a guide through gardens where the flowers are grown.

Fifty Acres of Beauty.

It is more than an exhibit of flowers, for the tour takes the visitors through the north shore's wild woods, where they have a chance to see and study the unusual collections of trees and shrubs that have been brought here from various parts of the world.

The arboretum owned by Mrs. Byron L. Smith is open to visitors. Here are fifty acres of land used entirely for the purpose of growing shade and fruit trees, shrubs and flowers. Fashioned after nature's plan of planting, this wild wood that stretches along a high lake bluff is one of the finest—many call it the finest—pieces of natural landscape designing in this or any other country.

The collection of trees comes primarily from France and Japan; there are sixty-five or more different kinds. E. Bollinger, superintendent of the Smith arboretum, specializes in the growing of coniferous trees. Names are printed on tags and attached to trees so that visitors will have no trouble in distinguishing them and they may become familiar with names and characteristics of unfamiliar foreign ones.

CHAMPION MILKMAID—Julia Schifferer, Elgin's champion milker, challenges all other speedy milkers in and around Cook county to meet her at the Great Chi-Cook fair at Maywood in August. She holds the record of drawing eight pounds and six ounces of milk in two minutes and thirty-six seconds.

Tree Predicts Rain.

Mr. Bollinger says one of his rarest trees is an elm, a native of Holland, known to professional gardeners as urmus superosa major. Visitors are taking an unusual interest in Mr. Bollinger's "weather tree," a European weeping linden. Its leaves are of a grayish color on the bottom and dark green on top. They turn over with the bottom side up a few hours before a rain.

"I can always depend on the old weather tree," said Mr. Bollinger, who is a scientific gardener. "When the leaves turn bottom side up, giving the whole tree a whitish, gray appearance, I always know it will rain within eight or nine hours."

Another interesting specimen on the Smith estate is an Indian warfare tree, an American elm, moved to the Lake Forest grounds twenty years ago, when it was only six inches in diameter. It is now more than three feet through, sending out a branchlike trunk a few feet above the ground. These and many other interesting trees are to be seen as visitors wind through this natural garden where there are more than three miles of walks leading down the steep wooded bluff to the lake shore and along the bluff's rim. There are fifteen feeding grounds for birds, where water and feed are kept all winter so the birds will not starve. In this forest, where there are sixty-four varieties of evergreen trees, seventy-five different kinds of shrubs, and 100 varieties of lilacs, the birds are comfortable even in cold weather.

Schweppe Garden Attracts.

The Charles H. Schweppe estate is also open to flower show visitors, offering them an excellent opportunity to study formal landscape designs. Midsummer annuals are now out in full bloom in the Schweppe gardens, splashing the green lawn and the dark green foliage on the trees with rich, soft colors.

One of the features on this estate is the formal bed of annuals bordered with a low growing clipped barberry hedge.

Another real picture that attracts visitors is an alley bordered with annuals and perennials with an ancient Italian wellhead at one end. The flowers are in soft pastel shades. Along each side of the long green strip of grass are long, graceful spikes of red, pink, and white hollyhocks waving in the lake breeze and nodding a welcome to visitors.

POULTRY TIPS

Arthur T. Nelson, state marketing commissioner of Missouri, says better eggs from the farm and better eggs from the country exchange, merchant, or dealer will result in placing better eggs in the hands of the consumer and will mean better prices and a greater consumption of the product. It is with this big idea in mind that Missouri poultrymen are starting out on what the state officials consider the greatest egg campaign ever initiated by any state. About 350 towns will be reached by the field forces in the campaign, and advice on egg candling and grading will be given in each place.

One of the many things that may be accomplished by poultrymen through cooperative organizations is finding out what breeds of poultry are best for their locality to unify the type kept in the community. Experts are recognizing the value of this, because the producer gets better prices for his eggs.

Every poultryman needs a well trained rat dog to keep the rodents under control around the fowls' quarters.

Selling cockerels in midsummer saves feed, makes more room for the pullets in the runs and on the roosts, and puts more money in the poultry keeper's pocket.

It's Theft-Proof Always Visible—Day or Night

THE Borg & Beck Heat Indicator is a "theft-proof" scientific instrument, which accurately records, the true temperature existing at the motor, on a Dial that is always visible—on the dash. It tells everything that other devices tell, which are installed on the radiator, and as its efficiency does not depend, in any way, upon the water circulating system, it warns you of motor trouble, under conditions that render other devices useless. It warns you of "over-heating" before the danger point is reached, and its accuracy is not affected by cold winds, rain, fog, snow or other exterior conditions.

Borg & Beck Heat Indicator

The silver plated, etched metal Dial is installed on the instrument board, where it is always visible, and easily read by day or night. The temperature ranges are of contrasting colors, and the large white pointer shows, at a glance, the true condition and efficiency of the motor. A flexible shaft in protective housing mechanically operates the indicating hand.

The Actuating Unit is clamped against the motor and contains a highly sensitive thermostat, of unique design—small in size, but positive in action, and any slight variation in the temperature of the motor causes it to expand or contract automatically, in direct proportion to the degree of heat or cold existing at the motor.

Tells What You Ought to Know

The average motorist is usually not aware of motor trouble, until the engine begins to lose power and "knock." Fan belts break, water connections leak, oiling systems fail, and many other things happen that cause "over-heating," which may result in scored cylinders, scored pistons, broken wrist pins, damaged bearings, and serious motor trouble. These troubles invariably cause large repair bills, and unnecessarily increase the cost of upkeep.

Thousands of motorists have already discarded their crude radiator devices and equipped their cars with this accurate instrument.

Don't wait—until "knocks" in your motor tell you that something is wrong—after the damage is done, and it is too late.

WESTCOTT

The Car Longer with a Life

Away With Flapping Curtains

See the Newest Idea in Winter Enclosures at the Pageant of Progress

Space 27, Section Y, at the Pageant of Progress, holds an exhibit of unusual interest to motor car owners, same cars also on display at our salesrooms.

It is the latest Westcott special touring model, equipped with a steel sheathed, steel braced, triple lined top, and the very latest ideas in rigid frame plate glass winter enclosures. Beautiful crushed brown leather upholstery and disteel wheels. You will see the first satisfactory solution of the body problem, which has bothered motor car designers and buyers for years.

In this new Westcott, with its permanent top and plate glass enclosure, you get a car that looks like and is built like a closed car, and that gives all the weather protection.

Yet it has the light weight and economy in first cost and upkeep of the open car, and gives you all the driving pleasure, "pep," power and speed.

Notice one feature in particular. The center glass sections are divided, allowing you to ventilate the car as easily as a closed car.

No longer will you be perplexed between the choice of an open and a closed car. The Westcott gives you the advantages of both and none of the disadvantages.

And, most surprising of all, this Westcott model sells for only $2,110, or $2,235 complete with the winter enclosure.

Don't fail to see it.

You wouldn't believe a Ford could ride so easy

The Duplex Spring Action does it

Putting Shock Absorbers on your Ford is good common sense. You are repaid many times in riding comfort and in the saving of your car from the hammering and jarring that shakes it to pieces. Shock Absorbers are a paying investment. The only question is what design to use.

Get Duplex Shock Absorbers

$20 per set

Using the famous Cantilever principle, Duplex Shock Absorbers work the same in both directions—up and down. That is the secret of the wonderful Duplex spring action—something no other shock absorber can give you, because it comes from the Duplex design. Duplex first soften the downward shock and then in the same way catch the vicious upthrow. Instead of the jolting and bouncing that break springs and toss you out of the seat, there is a gentle up and down motion, unbelievably smooth and comfortable, even over the roughest roads.

The ease and freedom of operation resulting from the Duplex Shackle design allows Duplex to work in complete harmony with the main springs. Duplex have none of the artificial checks or stops found on other shock absorbers. The freedom of movement is not hindered and one spring is not made to work against the other.

Working Spring Length is Doubled

Duplex add twenty-two inches of working spring length to the front spring and twenty-eight inches to the rear spring. Thus the actual working spring length is practically doubled.

Be sure to get the correctly designed shock absorbers for your Ford. Insist on Duplex. If your dealer hasn't them, he can get them instantly.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

FINDS 36 STORY BUILDING PAYS BETTER THAN 21

Earle Shultz Gives Data on 185 Structures.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago has suffered so much from the repeated changing of the height of office buildings that every one interested in zoning realizes that when the new zoning ordinance settles on a permanent limit it should be permanent. With that in mind, more real study is being put on the question, "What is the best height for an office building?" than has ever been done in the history of the city. Architects, engineers, realtors, medical men, attorneys, bankers and men representing many other activities are looking at the problem from every possible angle.

EARLE SHULTZ.

Last week we gave a report of George C. Nimmons, of George C. Nimmons & Co., architects, on what he considered the best paying height, basing his studies on a building the size of the new Stratford. Mr. Nimmons figured that a 20 or 21 story building paid the best returns for the size of the lot he used. Mr. Nimmons' report was made to the Chicago Real Estate board's zoning committee.

Studies Actual Buildings.

Meanwhile Earle Shultz, building manager of the Edison building, and recently elected president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, had made a careful study of heights and reported to the Chicago Real Estate board. His figures are based on 185 actual buildings already in operation and his heights run up to thirty six stories.

Briefly, his results can be summarized as follows.

Height.	No. of bldgs.	Net return.
3	1	6.0 %
4	4	3.9
5	12	3.6
6	17	4.5
7	16	4.8
8	15	4.5
9	8	4.2
10	22	5.3
11	11	5.3
12	21	6.0
13	11	4.9
14	12	5.5
15	8	4.7
16	6	5.3
17	4	6.0
18	6	6.1
19	4	5.6
21	4	6.0
24	1	7.5
30	1	6.5

"In connection with the problem of zoning, there has been a great deal of discussion as to whether office buildings are profitable if erected beyond a certain height," said Mr. Shultz. "It is agreed that the additional cost of heavier steel construction to support the taller buildings, together with the added space required for larger columns and for a greater number of elevators, tends both to increase the investment cost per square foot and also to reduce the amount of rentable space available in the taller buildings.

Get Average Net Income.

"In an endeavor to obtain some actual information on this subject, the National Association of Building Owners and Managers has collected the net income of 185 office buildings in over forty cities in the United States. These buildings were grouped according to their heights and for each height was obtained the average net income of the buildings in each group. The 36-story building is one of the largest office buildings in the world. It will be seen that the low buildings have the smallest net income and that the net income increases to about 17 stories, after which it remains about level for the very tall buildings.

"It is, of course, true that the increase in column and wall sizes and in the number of elevator shafts brought about by extremely high construction finally will determine an economic height beyond which it would not be profitable to build. Such a limit, however, would depend more upon the size of the lot than upon the height of the building. That is, for very tall buildings on small lots, the economic height limit would be reached at a much lower point than for buildings on large lots. The reason for this is that the additional amount of space required for heavier columns and for elevators is a much larger proportion of the entire floor area in the buildings on small lots than in the buildings on large lots.

Higher the Better.

"A consideration of the land investment will show very clearly that the taller an office building—up to possible limits which certainly exceed thirty stories—the more profitable it will be. It has been found that the average office building obtains about .7 of a square foot of rentable area with which to earn a return on each square foot of the lot on which the building stands.

"If, however, a ten-story building is built on this lot, there would be seven square feet of rentable area for each square foot of lot; which means that each square foot of rentable area would be required to carry only one-tenth as much of the lot investment as in the case of the one-story building. If the building were twenty stories high, there would be fourteen square feet of rentable area for each square foot of lot so that each square foot of office space would carry only one-twentieth of the investment in land.

Adds to Land Value.

"Increasing the building's height, therefore, very materially increases the earning power of the land on which it stands. It is my belief that the height of an office building can be increased, provided the lot is of sufficient size, to a very great extent before the added investment in building per rentable square foot of office space would by any means absorb the corresponding reduction in land investment per rentable square foot.

"A corollary of the above line of reasoning is that a limitation on the height of buildings that can be built on high value land will necessarily result in a very marked increase in the rent that must be charged in such buildings in order to earn a proper return on the high value of the land."

Chicago's First Aquarium—in Lincoln Park

Above is an exterior view of Chicago's long wished for and much talked of aquarium, to be erected in Lincoln park by the Lincoln park commissioners directly south of the lion house. Architects Clark & Walcott have designed a building 153x82 feet, of brick and stone, to have eighty-six tanks, containing almost 400,000 gallons of water, for fresh water fish of all varieties, including tropical specimens. There will also be a hatchery where approximately 10,000,000 fish a year can be produced. The fronts of the tanks will be of plate glass, and the tank sizes range from 16 up to 3,000 gallon capacity. Water in all tanks will be in constant circulation and automatically controlled at proper temperatures. It is hoped to have it open to the public late in the fall.

$750,000 Apartments South of Jackson Park

Above is another big project just started in the south shore district, to front on an entire block on the south side of 70th place, 378x128, between Crandon and Oglesby avenues. Architect Albert S. Hecht has designed the group in the Gothic, and he announces it will be completed for fall occupancy. It will have ninety-six apartments of four, five, and six rooms. Henry F. Blomfield is the owner. He has named them the Country Shore apartments. Strauss Bros. company has underwritten a $440,000 bond issue. W. K. Young & Bro. will manage the property.

ARCHITECT HAS SHORE PLAN TO HOUSE 500,000

Paul Gerhardt Outlines a Novel Scheme.

Architect Paul Gerhardt has submitted what appears to be a novel scheme for housing on a luxurious and enormous scale, which by its very magnitude stirs one's imagination although by the same token arouses one's doubts as to its practicability.

PAUL GERHARDT. [Morrison Photo.]

"Being familiar with the methods adopted by some of the largest European cities for their expansion and beautification at the least possible cost to citizens," writes Mr. Berhardt, "I wish to offer the following suggestion in connection with the south shore lake front boulevard.

Big Saving to Taxpayer.

"It would be a tremendous saving to the taxpayers of Chicago if a strip of land, let us say 600 feet in width directly east of the right of way of the Illinois Central and facing the proposed drives and lagoon, could be made, subdivided by the city or park board to make approximately 160 city blocks and then sold under proper restrictions and easements to individuals who might erect residences, hotels and apartment buildings.

"The money derived from the sale would be almost sufficient to cover the entire cost of the improvement, including the shore drives and their maintenance.

Cut Off Unsightly View.

"In addition this row of attractive buildings would cut off the view of the unsightly I. C. tracks from the outer drives. Moreover, it would supply housing facilities for approximately 500,000 people in a convenient and attractive location.

"Besides providing a background for as well as a means of financing the proposed south shore boulevards, it would benefit the adjacent business sections, especially the strip from 22d to 47th streets. All these benefits would be attained free to the taxpayers; in fact, more than that, at a real saving to them."

New Telephone Square Building

Above is the thirteen story Telephone Square building, designed by Architect John Archibald Armstrong, now being erected at the southwest corner of Washington and Franklin by A. Irving Jordan and leased for twenty-five years, as recently announced, to the Illinois Bell Telephone company. It will be of variegated gray brick with putty colored terra cotta trim, and will have six shops on the first floor, with the main entrance on Washington, near the present telephone building, on the west. S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a 6½ per cent serial bond issue of $850,000.

PLANS EVANSTON RESIDENCE.

Howard F. Bishop, who is reported to have bought considerable Evanston vacant recently, has purchased a tract at Keeney street and the lake, through Baird & Warner, from Mrs. Julia B. Kuehlmsted of St. Petersburg, Fla., for a reported $30,000. Mr. Bishop intends building a residence and making his

MORE OLD NORTH SIDE HOMES BEING TURNED TO BUSINESS USES

More and more are the attractive old time residences of the near north side being converted to business uses, especially for artists and advertising concerns. A. R. Tressler, who handles the north side properties of Rowe & Whitman, yesterday announced that he had sold for Fenella Wunderle, daughter of the late G. R. Gilsdorf, at one time one of Chicago's best known builders, the property at 611-15 North Dearborn street, to Louis Bernstine, for $20,000. The lot is 42x80 and is occupied by two old houses, both built by Mr. Gilsdorf. Mr. Bernstine probably will remodel into studios or a business block when present leases expire.

Probably the outstanding residential work of the late Mr. Gilsdorf was the turreted home of Dunlap Smith at the northwest corner of upper Michigan avenue and Huron street. This was at one time one of the residence show places of the city. Marshall & Fox occupied it at one time for a short period.

Mr. Tressler also sold three houses at 849-53 North Dearborn street, at the northeast corner of Chestnut, for the John H. Leslie estate to Joseph S. Mayer. One of the residences was at one time the home of the late John H. Leslie and was one of the most attractive in the city. The three are now being operated as the Leland hotel. The new owner intends eventually to turn them into an office building.

A third deal reported by Mr. Tressler for Rowe & Whitman was the sale of two old business buildings at 1245-47 North Clark street, 42 feet frontage, bought by Charles W. Stewart from H. D. Huszagh and Charles H. Briggs for $15,000 and $18,000, respectively. They were both built just after the fire. The new owner intends to remodel them extensively.

The three story residence at 641 North Dearborn, 20x80, has been sold by Leo P. Perron to Margaret Flynn, through O. F. Graham of J. H. Graham & Co., for $10,500. It will be remodeled into studios or offices, although no architect has yet been engaged.

North Side Landmark Sold to the Modern Printing Co.

One of the north side's best known landmarks, the four story building at the northeast corner of Larrabee and Vedder streets, which belonged to Christ Jensen, wholesale wine merchant, since 1870, has been sold to the Modern Printing company by Mrs. Elise Jensen, now in Europe. The new owners probably will make it their plant headquarters. C. Menge negotiated the deal.

MONTROSE CORNER SOLD.

Kenneth A. Rice has sold the store and apartment building at the northeast corner of Montrose and Mozart to Oscar Schreiber for a reported $66,300, subject to $71,300. George J. Jank, of W. E. Meyers & Co., and Fleck & Gritzer were brokers.

"230 DELAWARE" SOLD TO STEEL MAN; $375,000

Gold Coast Apartments Traded for Farm.

The middle initial of Edward M. Bertha's name evidently stands for "move." Last February he spent just eighteen hours to buy the seven story gold coast apartments known as 230 East Delaware place, which Callistus S. Ennis, the broker in that deal, claims is a record breaker.

When Mr. Bertha recently decided to sell "230" he moved with just as much speed, or rather his brokers, Kurt Rosenthal & Co., did, and in just about the same time he had a buyer in the person of Harry R. Curran, president of the Central Steel and Wire company, and apparent profit of $50,000. The price paid by Mr. Bertha was reported as $325,000. The consideration in the sale to Mr. Curran is given as $375,000. Mr. Curran gave in payment the 215 acre Montdale stock farm at Valparaiso, Ind., said to be one of the finest in the state. It is stocked with high grade Ayrshire cattle, registered Poland China hogs and prize winning chickens. The apartment building was conveyed subject to an encumbrance of $224,000.

"No. 230," contains fourteen apartments, twelve of seven rooms each and two of three rooms each. It fronts 100 feet on Delaware and has a depth of 108 feet. Harold T. Peterson of Kurt Rosenthal & Co. assisted Mr. Rosenthal as broker.

Mr. Curran is now building a $75,000 residence on the east side of Judson avenue, between Clark and Church streets, from plans by Architect Emil H. Frommann.

GARRICK THEATER DEAL CLOSED AT LAST: $800,000

Well, the Garrick theater building at last has been sold. The rumor that Louis Bomash, head of the Independence State bank, and eight associates were negotiating for it has roamed around the loop for weeks. This department printed it on July 19. But the actual deal was not closed till yesterday. Chutkow & Botham were the only brokers.

A reported $800,000 was paid and $200,000 worth of improvements are contemplated. The gross annual rental is claimed to be $275,000. The Garrick Building corporation, owned by Raymond Redheffer and Rufus Kiftredge, were the sellers of the leasehold and building. The fee is owned by Bayard Warren and Bayard Tuckerman Jr., trustees, of Boston.

The Garrick Building corporation paid $65,000 annual ground rental. The theater is leased by the Shuberts at $40,000 annually. Some time ago Jones, Linick & Schaeffer leased it from Sept. 1, 1923, at $75,000 a year. The Shuberts, who thought that too high at the time, later subleased it from J. L. & S. at $96,000 a year. The present syndicate is said to have refused an offer of $100,000 more than it paid for it. There is a $330,000 bond issue on the property.

PLANS BROADWAY DRUG STORE.

Richard T. Davis has leased the store and basement in his new building, now being completed at 5256 Broadway, to William S. Bucke for five years at a term rental of $21,000, for a drug store. Mark Levy & Bro. represented all parties.

WAR ON CROOKED REALTY DEALERS GETS UNDERWAY

The war started on crooked real estate concerns recently by the Chicago Real Estate board in conjunction with the real estate brokers' license commission, a state body, is now in full blast. It was reported last night that evidence against fraudulent realty men was pouring in to the realty board and the state commission in a steady stream—and the significant point to it is that much of it is of the kind that will probably send several of the smooth talking realty gentlemen out of the realty game for good and possibly to a vacation in Joliet.

Subpœnas already have been issued for several to appear at the first public hearing to be held in the rooms of the state commission at 130 North Wells street on Aug. 15. It is expected the hearings will last several days. The commission also will act on applications for brokers' licenses.

Don't forget, if you've been swindled, or think you have, send in a complete statement of facts, the more complete the better, either to the Real Estate Brokers' License commission, at 130 North Wells street, or to the Chicago Real Estate board, 67 West Monroe street, which will forward it to the commission.

New $300,000 Roadhouse to Be Called 'Garden of Eden'

Chicago's most elaborate roadhouse is planned for the interesection of the Waukegan and Wheeling roads. It'll be called "The Garden of Eden," said to cost $300,000 and is designed by Architect A. J. Fisher. In addition to a large dance floor, elaborate revues will be staged. The building will be 150x300 in the Spanish mission style.

Building Permits

Eighteen building permits of a total value of $243,450 were issued yesterday, among them being the following:

Get Unprejudiced Heating Advice

Call Franklin 2866 for an "R & B Man"

Put up your Heating Problems to an "R & B Man"

A builder can use his own judgment on shingles, flooring, finish and fixtures and not go far wrong. But on heat, he needs advice.

Heat is a business for specialists. Men spend their lives studying the action of air currents, the flow of heat through rooms placed in different arrangements, and the merits of different systems.

If you are building a home or an apartment in Chicago or vicinity, get the advice of a specialist before you go ahead with your heating plant. Go to someone who knows all kinds of heat—warm air, steam, vapor and hot water. How can you expect a man who sells only furnaces to recommend a hot water system—or a man who sells only boilers to give fair judgment on a furnace?

Call an "R & B Man"—He Knows

We offer a wonderful service to builders. Without charge, we will send a specialist to go over your plans and advise you. This company makes every kind of heating system. Our service men are capable of telling you how and why one kind of heating plant will work and another will not. Why one plant will be economical and another will not.

Call an "R & B Man." Use this service. It may save you hundreds of dollars. It may make the difference between a house that is worth living in—and one that is never satisfactory when the heating plant is going. Get answers to these questions:

- Do you advise a warm air furnace?
- Are the rooms arranged best for a pipeless furnace?
- What heating system will take the least coal?
- How can radiators be placed to be most convenient and yet effective?
- How much will a steam heating plant cost?
- What is the advantage of vapor heat? Would you recommend it?
- Will hot water save me enough fuel to pay for itself?
- Why will vapor heat cost less than hot water?

"R & B Men" can answer these questions for you. Call them! Get the benefit of the 85 years' experience which the Richardson & Boynton Company has had in the manufacture of heating and cooking equipment. If you want estimates or advice on any of the following lines, call us:

Warm Air Furnaces — Smokeless Boilers
Steam Boilers — Tank Heaters
Hot Water Boilers — Garage Heaters
Vapor Vacuum Systems — Gas, Coal and Combination Ranges

Perfect Heaters
Just one of many R & B Products

This is one example of the superiority of Richardson & Boynton heating equipment. Where it is adapted, there is nothing superior. It is gas and dust proof. The air which it pours through the registers is as clean and pure as the out-of-doors. Women enjoy a home with a Perfect Heater because it makes it easier to keep house.

It is economical of fuel, for it is especially designed to get combustion practically perfect—and the smoke travel of 8 to 12 feet forces the gases to give up their heat before reaching the chimney.

A heavily corrugated firepot and flanges increase the radiation surface nearly 3½ times over the ordinary furnace. A combustion dome which conforms to the shape of the flame heats a large volume of air more efficiently.

Air passes freely through the grate, aiding perfect combustion without loss of fuel. Air is moistened—and a generous outside jacket keeps practically all of the heat inside of the heating system. Burns any kind or grade of hard or soft coal.

CHICAGO LAND VALUES GAIN $300,000,000

Olcott's Blue Book Shows Big Increase.

Olcott's Land Values Book for 1922 just issued, shows that there has been a phenomenal advance in land values throughout the city since its last issue a year ago. Almost every part of the city has shared in the increase, varying in different localities from 10 to 200 per cent in amount of advance.

"Two features were prominent in the movement," says George C. Olcott. "One was the increase in residential neighborhoods of the better class, particularly in the north shore section of the city, and the other was in the growth and expansion of the outlying local business centers. The latter was the more interesting feature, in that it is an indication of a tendency to gradual decentralization of the business center of the city which has so long held sway.

Roseland Gains 100%.

"On the extreme southern portion of the city, the values in the Roseland business district centering at 111th and Michigan showed increases from 50 to 100 per cent. In South Chicago around 92d and Commercial a like advance was recorded. In Auburn Park at 79th and Halsted and vicinity, substantial gains were made. In Englewood the 63d and Halsted center showed signs of spreading as values mounted up, while the 69th and Halsted corner loomed as a good second.

"The 67th and Stony Island business district made rapid strides. But the movement around the 63d and Cottage Grove business and amusement center where land values jumped from 100 to 200 per cent, extending both ways for blocks, was the star district on the south side.

"In the stockyards district the 47th and Ashland center attracted the most attention. Other neighborhoods such as 39th, 43d, 47th, and 51st were also active and advancing.

Milwaukee Avenue Active.

"On the west side the Milwaukee avenue business section showed signs of achieving loop importance with strong expanding tendencies. On North avenue between Western and California, also at Kedzie and at Crawford, strong advancing tendencies were shown. The West Madison district west of Crawford indicated a coming rival of the centers at Kedzie and Western on the same street.

"The West Roosevelt center between Kedzie and Crawford was the scene of much speculative activity with West 26th developing into a good second in that part of the city. Other minor centers all showed a healthy increase in values.

"On the north side the Wilson avenue district and the North Michigan avenue extension of the downtown loop center held the banner for phenomenal advances. From the river ta Howard numerous business centers such as Lincoln avenue at Belmont, at Irving Park boulevard and at Lawrence all increased in values and extended their boundaries. North Clark at Diversey, Belmont and at Foster, as well as at Devon and in Rogers Park, were among some of the other expanding centers while the budding centers on Devon avenue and Howard stret attracted much attention.

Whole City Gains 15%.

"Taken altogether indications were abundant that Chicago is finding its old clothes are getting to tight for it and that it is discarding them for metropolitan toggery. Estimating the total land values of Chicago in 1921 at approximately two billion dollars and the average increase for the whole city at 15 per cent, conservatively speaking, the net increase for the year in land values has been $300,000,000."

Hawkeye Emporium Owner to Open Woodlawn Shop

Math Smith of Muscatine, Ia., who operates a chain of stores known as Smith's Emporium, in several Hawkeye towns, has leased the store at 1302 East 63d for five years at a term rental of $21,100. He will open several more Chicago stores. Mark Levy & Bro. represented the lessee and Fred Lorish the lessor, W. K. Young & Bro.

Raze Henneberry House for Motor Row Building

The residence of William P. Henneberry at 2618 South Michigan avenue has been wrecked to make way for a $35,000 one story building, covering the entire lot, 44x179, which has been leased to the Westinghouse Air Spring company for ten years at a term rental of approximately $72,000. H. H. Harper & Co. negotiated the deal.

News of the Architects

The Chicago Architectural club announces that its entertainment committee has arranged for the annual all day picnic to be held this year on Aug. 27 in the Palos park forest preserve. The trip will be made by motor. A complete announcement will be issued to members later.

RENT MAN

Realty Notes

The Cook County Real Estate board will make a pilgrimage to Mooseheart next Sunday. Special trains will leave the Aurora-Elgin "Third Rail" station, 310 South Wells street, at 9 a. m. and every hour thereafter. Those with cars are advised to go via Roosevelt road to Geneva and then by Lincoln highway to Mooseheart. A special program has been arranged.

Rollo Shanks & Co. have moved into new quarters in the Otis building from suite 1640 to 349-51, where they have just twenty times as much space as they had four years ago. They have a five years' lease at $30,000. The new headquarters were opened last week with a basket picnic with more than 100 in attendance. There were movies, speeches, music, presentation of flowers, and general open house from 5 until after midnight.

NEW LOCAL ROTO PLANT TO SEND WORK TO GOTHAM

Work is under way on a new rotogravure plant on the south side of East Ontario street, just east of THE TRIBUNE's color plant, which is at No. 427, by the Julius Hermann company of New York. The local concern, largely controlled by Chicago printing and publishing firms, will be called the Chicago Rotoprint company. The new plant probably will be completed Sept. 1. Among the Chicago concerns owning stock in the Chicago Rotoprint company is the W. F. Hall Printing company.

An interesting angle to the development of Chicago as a publishing and printing center is the forming of a concern like the Chicago Rotoprint company. It will print rotogravure and color inserts for large mail order catalogs and magazines of New York concerns which are being printed and bound in Chicago. It will also do local commercial work.

BRITIGAN PLANS FIFTH ADDITION TO HIS WESTWOOD

William H. Britigan has bought five acres from W. H. Edwards of New York City, bounded on the north by West 68th, on the south by West 69th, Talman on the west and Rockwell on the east. According to Ira D. Malbrough, broker in the transaction, Mr. Britigan paid $16,000 cash. The property will be called Britigan's fifth addition to Westwood. It is three blocks east of Marquette park, four blocks west of Western avenue and a block south of Marquette road. Mr. Britigan will sell the lots with sewer, water, gas mains and cement sidewalks installed. All lots will have building lines and restrictions. According to Mr. Malbrough about a third of the subdivision already has been sold.

Nice for the Janitor in Winter; How About July?

Wonder whether the owner of the new $300,000 flat building to be built at the southwest corner of Merrill and 67th, was thinking of the janitor of his prospective tenants when he had Architect A. G. Lund draw his plans calling for a glass roof over the court. Of course there'll be no snow to shovel in winter, but won't the courtyard temperature be like a hothouse in summer? The building will be 127x177. John S. Smith is the owner.

Cottage Grove and 61st Corner Sold; $120,000

The southeast corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 61st street, 50x125, improved with a two story store and office building, containing six stores, eight offices, and five apartments, was sold by Samuel M. Haimowitz and Rebecca Richter to Charles L. Roberts for a reported $120,000, subject to $70,000. Frank H. Lang & Son represented all parties and will have charge of the property.

Villa Park Realty Company Buys 138 Acres in Ardmore

The Villa Park Realty company has purchased 138 acres in Ardmore from Senator Austin and according to Charles Behrends, sales manager, the property will be placed on the market shortly. Electricity, gas and sewer connections are reported in.

Closing hog values yesterday were lowest of the day and practically lowest in six months. After a steady start the market declined 5@10c. There was an early top of $10.60 with equally as good late at $10.50. Day's general average dropped to $9.30 against $9.80 a week ago, and $10.60 a year ago.

Combined receipts of hogs at the eleven leading markets last week at 525,000 were unusually large for this season of the year, and 142,000 above the fourteen year average. Chicago was credited with 141,800, the largest in over twelve years, comparing with corresponding week in previous years.

Besides being large in numbers, the hogs are coming heavier in weight, Chicago's estimated average at 247 lbs being as heavy as any week since last September, and 7 lbs above the ten year average.

Choicest beef cattle met with a good demand throughout last week at slightly changed prices, best selling within 5c of the year's top, or $10.80. Uneven declines featured most other grades of cattle, with some of the inbetween steers as much as $1.00 below high time the previous week. The week's average price of beef steers dropped 40c, going to $9.25.

Lambs Regain Losses.

Native lamb trade reacted sharply after mid-week, regaining most of recent declines and closing fully steady with a week ago, while westerns ruled generally 25c lower. Initial day last week values were 50c to $1.00 lower than the Monday previous and at the lowest point in about two months. Top last week at $12.90 stands 60c below previous week. Handy sheep met active outlet at unchanged prices, though inbetween and weighty classes registered 75c to $1.00 decline.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 19,000 cattle, 44,000 hogs and 18,000 sheep, against 17,731 cattle, 44,971 hogs and 11,144 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs and 75,000 sheep.

Probable receipt of hogs for Monday range from 35,000 to 50,000. Robert Ellis marked 35,000; Felix Gehrmann and H. H. Moore, 40,000; J. M. Waters, 41,000; F. R. Burrows, 42,000; E. R. Gentry, 43,000; Lester Armour, 46,000; Edward Morris, 47,000; E. S. Waterbury, 49,000, and Frank Flynn, 50,000.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

On a light volume of trade the Chicago unlisted securities market reacted to a fractionally lower level. A better tone was in evidence for Corn Flakes, with sales of 400 Switchboard and Supply was dull, 55 asked, with few reported sales. A common was offered for sale at 25 and 28 for odd lots—off 1½ points.

The sugar issues were quiet, but prices showed minor gains. Cuban was quoted 6 bid; Holland-St. Sugar, Godchaux, 74@77; Michigan, 90@95; Idaho, 3½@3¾.

The public utility market was without definite price trend.

Butler Bros. was practically unchanged, 38 bid, 38½ asked, ex dividend. Belden's common continued in good demand, 106 bid, 108 asked—up 1. Orders were again in evidence for Kellogg Corn Flakes, with sales of 400. Switchboard and Supply was dull, 55 asked, with few reported sales. A common was offered for sale at 25 and 28 for odd lots—off 1½ points.

The sugar issues were quiet, but prices showed minor gains. Cuban was quoted 6 bid; Holland-St. Sugar, Godchaux, 74@77; Michigan, 90@95; Idaho, 3½@3¾.

The public utility market was without definite price trend.

GRAIN PRICES SEESAW; CLOSE AT NET LOSSES

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain prices moved within a narrower range, the market being nervous and the trade lighter. Early recessions were followed by bulges and although there was a sharp advance at the last on buying attributed to exporters which cleaned up the wheat market, the last sales were at losses of ¾@1¼c on the distant futures and ¾@1¼c on the distant futures and ¾@1¼c on July. Corn lost ¾@1½c, with July leading and oats were off ½@¾c. Provisions and short ribs 5c for the day. Export business was lighter and country offerings not so heavy. News on the whole was mixed and there was a general evening up for the week end.

The range of prices for the week was lower and the close, as compared with a week ago showed losses of ⅝c to 1½c for the week, corn ⅜c to 1¼c for the distant futures, with December leading, while July gained ⅞c; oats, unchanged for July and ⅝c lower for September and ⅛ higher for December. Rye, 2¼c to 3c lower; lard, off 12½c to 32½c, with January leading; short ribs, 42½c to 55c lower than a week ago.

Best Buying at Close.

Wheat was on sale on all bulges from ledgers and local traders, but the pressure was not very heavy and the day's range inside of 1½c on the deferred futures. Liverpool closed unchanged for July to ¾d and 1½d lower for the futures, while spot was off 1d to 2d.

The movement is liberal, but the southwest showed a falling off from that of a week ago, the three markets having 720 cars, against 879 cars a week ago, and 1,645 cars last year. Chicago receipts were 4,236,000 bu for the week and shipments 1,888,000 bu.

Corn Trading Light.

Trading in corn was light and the price range small, except on July, which was under pressure and closed around the bottom. Cash demand was good and country offerings fair, but a little over the market. High temperatures were reported in the southwest and good rains in northwestern and western Iowa. The week's movement is to shw a decrease in stocks.

Oats were picked up by a local trader, but there was little interest in the market. Cash business was fair and trading was on a September basis with No. 3 whites ⅛c under to 1⅛c over. Stocks show a decrease for the week.

Rye was bought by exporters who absorbed all the September and a good business with the seaboard was on.

Lard Advances.

Lard was picked up fairly by local traders and sold on the advance by profit takers. Domestic trade is said to be good and lard is selling under the price of cotton oil. A St. Louis packer sold 400,000 lbs at 11c. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders were mixed at the last by the large buying which absorbed the offerings and caused a general scramble of early short sellers. Exporters are taking all offerings on weak spots and the trade seems to lose sight of the fact that the latter are absorbing the hedges as well as the short sales. Technically the trade is looking for sharp fluctuations.

There is said to be a fair sized holding of July among a few commission houses who are selling it on bulges in sufficient volume to satisfy all buyers. There were 310,000 bu on July sales and there may be track deliveries on Monday, the last of the month. The short interest in July corn appears to have been somewhat relieved as the price declined from absence of support and was only ⅝c premium over September at the finish.

Famine in the Volga valley in Russia is said to be over. The wheat crop is estimated at 185,000,000 to 375,000,000 bu more than last year in a statement to Secretary Hoover at a conference with Colonel Haskel of the American Relief association in Russia.

Wheat shipments from Australia for the week were 936,000 bu. against 632,000 bu the previous week. Since January 1 the aggregate was 70,728,000 bu.

William C. Wiegand of the J. Rosenbaum Grain Co. says the decidedly unfavorable exchange rates of continental Europe restrict buying to immediate needs and the large North American surplus tends to encourage importers to refrain from excessive buying, particularly as Argentina has still some 30,000,000 bu available and a possible 45,000,000 bu from India may be reckoned with. Stability of exchange rates is possible through the much talked of loan, but American bankers are unwilling to extend it unless the participating countries recognize the necessity of economic reconstruction. Meanwhile wheat seems more plentiful than buyers can readily absorb and when a surplus is pressing for sale it is the prices regulating factor. Reluctant buyers always have the advantage when supplies are plentiful.

The Winnipeg wheat market is 37@53c per bu lower than a year ago, while we are 17c higher, says J. T. McLaughlin. This will give an idea of the keen competition we will meet from the new Canadian crop. We look for much lower price for our December wheat.

"Trading in May wheat will soon start," says C. A. Kings & Co. of Toledo. "In 1913 we raised 763,000,000 bu wheat. Our crop this year will be over 800,000,000 bu. First trade in May wheat on the 1913 crop was made on June 13, at 97¼c. High point early for May wheat was 98¼ during August. Market then declined to the low of the crop at 86⅝, which was reached in October. Market gradually advanced, finally touching $1.00 during May. The range in May wheat for the 1914 crop was from 84½ to 1.67. In 1915 May wheat ranged from 93@1.38⅝. In 1916 the range was from 1.37@3.25 and in 1920 from 1.19½@1.87. Last year May wheat ranged from 1.03¼@1.49⅝."

Weakness in foreign exchange due to increased offerings of grain bills, has not materially affected the export business, judging from the purchase of nearly 4,500,000 bu in all positions on Friday.

Lard should eventually work higher if there is a temporary slackening in hog receipts, says W. L. Gregson. In any event prices are reasonable and should be maintained. The big receipts of hogs at western markets are variously interpreted as responsible fer easier markets in product during the week.

The trade is looking for a private crop report due Monday to show 25,000,000 bu more wheat and around 200,000,000 bu more corn than the government figures.

A lake carrier paid $11.50 a ton for coal Friday. At this rate the carriers figure that the lake rate on grain from Chicago to Buffalo and Georgian Bay should be 3¾, instead of 3c.

Sales Manager Wanted

For Bond and Security Department

A conservative Company dealing exclusively in high grade investment bonds and securities, with branch offices in many of our principal cities and still growing, seeks a high grade sales manager who can make its sales organization more efficient and productive.

He must be able to plan and carry out successful campaigns. He must be a man of sterling character and know how to win the confidence and arouse the enthusiasm of those who work under him.

The salary and commission paid will be limited only by his ability to produce large results, but they will be sufficiently large at the start to appeal strongly to the man who is qualified by experience to fill the position.

Applicants should indicate experience, education, nationality and religion. All correspondence will be treated as confidential.

Address "A," New York P. O. Box 64, Trinity Station.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

[Copyright: 1922: By Fairchild News Service.]

LOWELL, Mass.—An official of the Masscachusetts cotton mills states that the strike in their mills is over. Eighteen hundred operatives, or 90 per cent of their force, is back to work, he says.

WINNIPEG, Man.—Flax acreage in the prairie provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta this year is estimated by the government at nearly three times that of last year, with prospects of a good yield. Most of the Canadian fiber is exported to the United States.

NEW YORK.—An increase in the demand for fall ribbon is reported by wholesalers. Narrow goods particularly show every sign of continuing in big demand for some time to come. Two tones and picot ribbons are said to be continuing in favor.

NEW YORK.—The demand for women's felt hats is increasing, according to manufacturers here. During all last season, a large business was done in these, and buyers now in the market are said to be ordering well on felts for August delivery. Color demand seems to be running to Marocain, reindeer shades and all brown tones, although black is also holding up well.

BERLIN.—Although the German textile imports and exports showed a heavy increase in May over April, Germany's total foreign trade shows an excess of imports over export figures of 5,200,000,000 marks, according to government statistics.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Silk importers, arriving with a $6,000,000 shipment of raw silk from Japan, protest against the speed restrictions on United States shipping boards ships to 17½ knots. Canadian and Japanese vessels, they say, log 18 to 19 knots, saving as much as two days on each trip, and thereby thousands of dollars in interest, insurance and depreciation in value of silk.

The Tribune Investors' Guide

Answers to inquiries are based upon reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but beyond information, THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer in order to receive attention. Answers thought to be of public interest will be published. If an answer is not of general interest it will be mailed provided stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide.

What We Are Doing.

Eight years ago THE TRIBUNE realized that there was a great need for a bureau to which the public could turn for impartial expert advice on investments. To fill this need the Investors' Guide was started and the eagerness with which the public began to avail itself of the service offered showed how very genuine this need had been. Letters began pouring in, asking all sorts of questions about investments, and the fairness, conservatism and thoroughness of the replies received soon established the department in the public confidence. This confidence has been strengthened through the years until today THE TRIBUNE'S Investors' Guide enjoys a unique position in the investment world. It is known and its opinions respected throughout the country.

During the eight years of its existence this department has received and answered, either publicly or privately, over 124,000 letters, many of them containing numbers of questions about different securities. These letters come from all parts of the country and the questions cover the entire range of subjects pertaining to investments. As the matter of investing one's money is of the most vital importance, the greatest care must be taken in replying to each letter, frequently involving a great deal of reference and research work. Each letter is treated as a separate problem and given individual attention.

The confidence earned by this department is attested by the fact that a large number of men and women will not make a single investment without first consulting the Investors' Guide about it. Not only that, but letters from banks, insurance companies and investment houses in different parts of the country, seeking information or advice about corporations and securities, either for themselves or for their customers, give further proof of the enviable reputation for reliability which the department has established.

Such a reputation could not have been attained had it not been earned. It could not have been earned had not the greatest care been exercised to secure all the information obtainable, to analyze it thoroughly and to apply the result of this analysis, logically and accurately, in forming an impartial opinion. The vast amount of data and information which has been accumulated through eight years and the financial library which has been acquired are of great value in enabling us to give comprehensive reports to our readers.

To any who may have hesitated to write to this department for investment advice, we wish to make it plain that the Investors' Guide is conducted solely for the benefit of the public. All are free to write to us at any time for advice and information about any subject pertaining to investment. Our resources and experience are at your disposal. All letters are treated as confidential. It is necessary only to enclose a stamped, addressed envelope as the vast majority of letters are answered by mail. Those replies which are published do not carry the name of the enquirer.

There are two requests we wish to make to those writing us: Do not ask us to suggest securities for investment and please do not ask more than three questions in one letter. This department never has suggested and never will suggest a security to the investor. The reason for this policy is obvious—we cannot suggest one security rather than another without incurring the risk of partiality. We give information or advice only on securities which are specifically inquired about. The reason we request inquirers to limit their questions to three in any one letter is that this department receives many letters daily and cannot devote unlimited time to any one. The only object of this request is to enable us to give prompt service.

Government Estimate on Cotton Is Due Tuesday

Washington, D. C., July 29.—The department of agriculture's estimate of cotton condition on July 25 will be issued Aug. 1, on the same general basis as in former years, with a forecast of production based upon the reported condition of the crop on July 25 and the acreage estimated on July 3.

WOOL MARKETS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29.—Argentina's wool clip, which begins next September, is expected to be the smallest in the twentieth century, according to a survey issued today by the commerce department. Sheep grazing in Argentina, the department found, has dropped from 74,380,000 in 1895 to 44,855,000 in 1918 and to between 25,000,000 and 35,000,000 at the present time.

It is not likely, the department declared, that this year's clip in Argentina will produce more than 180,000,000 pounds of wool, or approximately 190,000 bales, of which only 13,500 bales will be first class merino.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Practically no resistance was offered yesterday in the foreign exchange markets of the world to the heavy selling of German marks. No new theories for the fresh decline were advanced. It was merely the pouring out of speculative holdings in much larger volume than they could be absorbed by the market. London was not such a heavy seller as were Amsterdam and Paris, bankers declared.

The substantial increases of freight revenues over those a year ago which the New England roads have been showing, in spite of the coal strike, is considered highly significant in railway quarters. May freight revenues at $13,094,894, for example, were the largest of any of the first five months except March, when they were $14,293,331. Passenger earnings, however, have shown a decrease as compared with a year ago, although at $6,360,227 for May, 1922, they totaled greater than for any previous month. Operating expenses in May proved to be larger than in any previous month of the year owing principally to a heavier maintenance outlay.

One large firm in the Wall street district in a letter it has sent to its customers declares tities on its properties in Montana. The North-Pacific railroad has struck oil in paying quanies on its properties in Montana. The Northern Pacific is developing its oil lands in Montana, and the reports received in the street indicate that the company has met with success. Oil producers have been casting their eyes toward Montana for some time, with the belief that it will be the next great field opened in this country.

St. Paul's "hidden assets" in the form of valuable timber lands in Idaho and Washington have been the subject of considerable discussion in Wall street lately. According to officials of the road, the value of these timber holdings—placed on the books at $30,000,000—does not represent the proportionate value of the various small parcels which are constantly being sold, as every year the increasing shortage of timber enhances the value of the outstanding supply. Another angle of these hidden assets that is expected to result in increasingly substantial revenues for the railroad is the fact that the timber lands are so situated that the lumber will go over the St. Paul line when it is prepared for shipment.

American bankers have been informed by cable that the Argentine government has decided to come into the market for a 500,000,000 peso loan, equivalent to $165,000,000 at present rates of exchange and $225,000,000 at par of exchange. Par for the paper peso is 42.45 and its present quotation is 36.51. The loan will be a refunding operation, presumably. Argentina has two outstanding short term obligations in the New York market, both sold within the last twelve months. One is an issue of $50,000,000 two year 7 per cent notes, due in 1923. The other is an issue of $27,500,000 five year 7 per cents, due in 1927.

The Eastern Manufacturing company has voted to pass the quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent, due at this time on the first preferred stock. The dividend on second preferred stock was passed at this time last year. The Keystone Watch Case company decided to pass the dividend on the stock. The previous distribution was three-fourths of 1 per cent on May 1. On Feb. 1 last a dividend of 1¾ per cent was paid, that rate having been maintained quarterly since August, 1918.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending July 26 by 360 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $907,821,000, compared with $980,563,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $907,821,000, compared with $844,077,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Bradstreet's reports 387 commercial failures in the United States last week, compared with 350 in the preceding week and 153 during the corresponding week last year.

7½% Until September 1st— Beak Plan Bonds Will Sell to Yield 7½%

Beak Plan First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds were never so attractive to conservative investors as now. They are selling to yield 7½%, almost the high peak of interest returns. All other classes of investments return a lower rate of interest than six months or a year ago, and every indication points toward still lower rates.

Until September 1st (less than six weeks away) investors will have an opportunity to secure the present rate of 7½% on these high grade bonds.

Beak Plan Bonds represent the maximum of safety because they are secured by absolute first mortgages on Chicago buildings which are already completed and occupied and whose value and earning power are definitely known. In many cases they are rented and managed by our own organization, which is an additional protection to the bondholder. Easy to investigate!

We are now offering a selection of six different issues, all of which yield 7½% and have a very large margin of safety. We will be glad to send you complete description.

Notice of Redemption

To Holders of Victory Notes and Others Concerned

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN AS FOLLOWS:

1. Call for partial redemption of 4¼ per cent Victory notes:

All 4¼ per cent Victory notes, otherwise known as United States of America gold notes of 1922-23, which bear the distinguishing letters A, B, C, D, E, or F prefixed to their serial numbers, having been designated for the purpose by Lot in the manner prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, are called for redemption on December 15, 1922, pursuant to the provision for redemption contained in the notes and in Treasury Department circular Number 138 dated April 21, 1919, under which the notes were originally issued. Interest on all the 4¼ per cent Victory notes thus called for redemption will cease on said redemption date, December 15, 1922. Victory notes of the 4¼ per cent series bearing the distinguishing letters G, H, I, J, K, or L, prefixed to their serial numbers are not in any manner affected by this call for redemption, and will become due and payable as to principal on May 20, 1923, according to their terms.

2. Detailed information as to the presentation and surrender of 4¼ per cent Victory Notes for redemption under this call is given in Treasury Department Circular Number 299, dated July 26, 1922, copies of which may be obtained from the Treasury Department, division of loans and currency, Washington, D. C., or any Federal Reserve Bank.

The New York Times.

New York, July 29.—[Special.]—The continued and rapid decline of the German mark was again the event of outstanding importance on today's markets.

The stock exchange, whose attention was still absorbed in the labor situation, ended the week with a showing of strength which reflected Wall street's continued belief in the settlement of the strikes. It has been a somewhat peculiar fact in the situation that the stock market has shown such absence of interest and concern in the fall of the German currency's valuation to unprecedently low depths.

Dollar Worth 645 Marks.

Measured in hundredths of a cent, the mark's lowest price before the present year was 33; the 29¼ price of March was the low point until June, when it reached 15½; but has now fallen with accelerated rapidity to today's figure of 15½.

It is impossible to measure such a movement on the basis of intrinsic valuations, for the reason that a paper currency increased week by week on such a scale admits of no intrinsic valuation. The weekly reichsbank statement of July 22 showed paper circulation had increased 1,589,000,000 marks in a week, 18,107,000,000 in a month, and 62,984,000,000 or 55½ per cent since the beginning of the year. The fall in the mark's gold value which has accompanied that inflation was as inevitable as anything could be in an economic situation.

Stock Market Shows Strength.

French exchange again declined but its low rate for the week is still considerably above what was touched when the mark was falling in the first week of July. Sterling exchange closed today slightly above its final rate of any preceding week this month.

In the light trading of a mid-summer half holiday, such noteworthy advances as occurred on today's stock market were mostly in the industrial shares; but railway stocks also showed strength, a few of them rising a point or more. Comparison of the week's closing prices with those of a week ago shows the extent to which the market's attitude has been changed by its belief that the labor difficulties will not be of long continuance. The bond market also shows a preponderance of advances for the week, although with considerably more irregularity in the European securities.

New York Bank Reserves Fall.

An increase of $32,945,000 in loans is shown in today's weekly statement of the New York clearing house banks, accompanied by an increase of $40,776,000 in time deposits and a falling off of $17,740,000 in demand deposits. Surplus reserve increased $4,257,220. Surplus reserve now stands at $29,623,560; loans and discount total $4,643,594,000; and net demand deposits, $3,947,880,000. HARRIS BROTHERS Co

Daily Deliveries!!
Daily deliveries are made to all parts of Chicago and surrounding suburbs by our own fleet of motor trucks direct from our plant to your door. Quick, efficient, painstaking service assured.

When you attend Chicago's great Pageant of Progress Exposition at the Municipal Pier, opening July 29th, be sure to visit our interesting exhibit in Section S. Free souvenirs, books and much valuable information will be yours for the asking. Look for the Yellow Presto-up Garage.

Open All Day Saturday!!
Our entire plant is open daily, including Saturday, from 8:30 A. M. to 5 P. M. Thoroughly posted, intelligent salesmen are waiting to assist you in every possible way.

"Presto Up" Bolt-Together Garages

Patented Apr. 2, 1918. Sept. 3, 1918. Mar. 22, 1921. July 18, 1922. Other Patents Pending.

$50 Down and the Balance on Easy Monthly Payments

Guaranteed from Foundation Up

Over 3000 Presto-up Garages stand erected in the City of Chicago alone. Always the sure choice of exacting buyers because they give you utmost possible garage value—still our prices are conveniently low and our liberal terms place these splendid buildings within the reach of all.

When your Presto-up arrives you get a complete building—not just a load of rough lumber nor a flimsy, makeshift, portable building, BUT the finest garage built, complete to the last detail, painted and ready to bolt together with all doors, windows and hardware in place.

The Case against the Flapper

COLOR

FREE Full Trial!

A Full-Sized Jar of the Real ENGLISH Complexion Clay to Prove It Will Make Any Skin Absolutely Beautiful

A NEW SKIN in half an hour! Blemishes banished, full color restored—while you dress for the day. And this new, natural beauty will stay. We cannot ask you to believe it, so we are going to let you see it.

Your name and address, please, and this full-quantity jar of fresh Terra-derma-lax will be sent you by first post. This dressing-table test on your own complexion will tell more than pages of talk. Our offer sounds daring, but really is not; this English clay's peculiar powers are more than a match for any and every impurity that dulls the skin. Even the domestic clays inspired by the discovery of Terra-derma-lax are of benefit to most complexions. But wait till you try Terra-derma-lax! The English Clay laxates the skin—any skin—renovates, restores, remakes it as you shall see.

ASTOUNDING Things that Terra-Derma-lax DOES

—Acts in half an hour with complete results.

—Flushes each minute pore of all impurities.

—Brings back the full color and skin health of rugged youth, and the benefits last.

—Keeps pores their normal size, because it is laid on, not rubbed in.

—Stifles hair growth on face.

—Leaves even a pimpled skin smooth in texture.

Beauty While You Wait

A young scientist's search of three continents brought to light this clay of the British Isles. Then American ingenuity preserved its precious properties in a vacuum-closed earthen jar. The miracles this clay performs have been told in the public prints. First laboratory demonstrations caused a furore. The simple truths as stated by the press were scarcely believed. Perhaps you read, and doubted. So here is your chance to see for yourself. A full jar awaits your word that you want it, and will try it!

Spread this natural clay on face and neck—and forget it. In ten minutes, laxation starts; you can fairly feel the purging, purifying action in every pore. The whole skin structure responds. Another twenty minutes, and the clay is wiped away—revealing a skin silky-soft, bright with color.

Never Before, or Again, An Offer Like This

The regular price of Terra-derma-lax is $5—but don't send it. Our broadcast public offer must have reasonable restriction, of course. We cannot gratify the merely curious, nor send expensive English clay to children. So a small deposit to cover actual cost is asked as evidence of good faith. We have figured this down to only $1.95 plus postage. You need not trouble to enclose even this; the postman will accept your deposit. But please understand that it is a deposit—held to your credit, while you try the clay. Every penny will be returned to you unless your complexion is so marvelously and overwhelmingly improved you would not take many times its cost for the results obtained.

In other words, we guarantee that Terra-derma-lax will make your skin beautiful, enamel-smooth and colorful. You will see this new brightness and bloom with one application. But take five days, for an unhurried decision. Then, and only if you voluntarily keep it, will we consider your deposit of $1.95 as a payment in full for your jar. Meantime, use a little of the clay, or use all of it. For we want you to know that the free trial is indeed free and unconditional.

We realize this announcement will bring a storm of applications. We are ready! Every one who accepts the offer here and now is assured a full jar of the freshly compounded, active English clay. So, away with the coupon—off with the cover—on with the clay that is fast making poor complexions as scarce in America as they are in England!

Dermatological Laboratories
329 Plymouth Place · Chicago

Please send full sized jar of Terra-derma-lax for five-day FREE trial. I will deposit $1.95 [plus postage] with the postman, as payment in full for the clay in case I decide to keep it. If the trial does not delight me with results, my full deposit to be returned.

Out of the Depths of Classenwell Pool Came the Spirit Voice, in the Days When the Pixies Still Haunted Dartmoor

WHERE Elizabethan miners broke the moor for tin, or later men have delved for clay, there gapes a mighty pit on the breast of Dartmoor, near Princetown. A little lake fills the bottom of the cavity and Classenwell Pool is its ancient name.

At this season, on the last day of August, a rare pattern of pink heather bloom and autumn furzes wound in amethyst and gold about the mouth of the great cup, while beneath, where grassy banks sloped downward, the margins of the little tarn glittered with granite gravel, white and sparkling. Tracks, stamped out by the cattle that came to drink, chased the sides of the pool and wound away above, where great moors rolled their vastness under tender tones of green and gray, that blended along distant ridge and steep under the milky haze of late summer.

Southward, Lether Tor and Sharp Tor lifted their jagged sides to the sky, and from the shoulder of Sheep's Tor there swept forests and spread miles of fertile land to the dim horizons of the sea. Hard by the cup, humped in the heather, stood a medieval cross roughly wrought of the granite, still marking a highway trod by monkish feet in Tudor times. A line of these emblems had once extended over the great waste between monasteries whose ruins alone now rose in the valleys beneath.

The hot air danced and bumble bees made a perpetual organ music as they droned in the heather bloom, while upon the face of the little lake there fell a rich vision of color from the burning banks and golden clouds aloft, all subtly changed by the mirror that reflected them. At midmost water the images ceased, fretted away by wind ripples, that set up a ruffle and tarnished the placid depths. Beside the water stood three black ponies—a mare and two foals of successive births. The mare's daughter already attained to adult shapeliness; her son was a woolly babe with a short coat, thin, shaky legs and a little face like a rocking horse. He still ran to her black udder when thirsty and flew to her for protection if alarmed. Then peace was banished for a moment by the sudden stampede of a half dozen red bullocks goaded by the gadflies. They came thundering down with heavy hooves and uplifted tails; they rushed to cool their smarting sides and presently grew calm, plunged knee deep in the margins of the pool.

Upon the edge of Classenwell, under a whitethorn that rose there and offered a patch of shadow, there sat a girl on this day of a vanished summer. She was clad in sober colors and crouched so still that one might have thought her a stone; but her sunbonnet challenged with its note of pink and her hair, as she flung off the bonnet, flashed still more brightly, for sunbeams fell through the whitethorn and settled there, like bees on a flower. She was a blonde, flaxen maiden with pale locks the color of the light on fading grasses. Her eyes were gray and round; her face had been burned to redness by the summer sun; her form was full at the breast and waist. She looked like a mother; but Mary Durnford was a maid and her love adventure still awaited her.

She stared down into the pool, shared the common belief that it was of infinite depth, and considered the ways of the supernatural being who dwelt therein. For Mary sat in the heat haze of a day full seventy years ago, when many spirits—of the middle place between man and angel—still haunted Dartmoor and were accepted as part of the order of things. Today the pixies have deserted dene and dingle; the witch hare starts from her form under our feet no more; the herbs and simples have lost their power; the spells and charms are futile; even the little heath hounds are never heard in full cry on winter nights. They hunt the Evil One no longer, nor is the wise woman's hand crossed with silver any more. The corpse candle has been blown out forever, the voices of the mine goblins are dumb.

Beneath the shores of old romance have sunk Dartmoor's legendary spirits, good and evil; they are as dead as the Neoliths, whose ruined homes still glimmer like mushroom rings upon the lonely heather and whose tombs still lie under uplifted stones on the hill slope and beside the river cradle. For knowledge has stricken tradition hip and thigh in the West country, and our children today, in the transitory stages of learning, see only the unlikeness to truth that stamps the faces of these far off things. Therefore they spurn them, having no patience or imagination to seek for the inner verities that may lie hidden behind legends, folk fables, and old wives' tales.

Mary, however, knew well that Classenwell pool harbored Tankerabogus, and that this mysterious creature, though it lived in the depths of the water, yet ascended and, by the will of God, spoke with human voice to human ears at certain times and seasons. But humanity was never in any haste to seek that supernatural utterance; indeed, men and women alike took jealous care to be far beyond earshot of Classenwell at the critical hour, for this spirit had no cheerful words for mortal. Tankerabogus foretold nothing but death; and on those occasions, all beyond measure authentic, when ill chance or secret promptings had driven luckless folk into the range of these mysteries, they had only learned their own swift destiny, or that of other unfortunate neighbors.

"O, Sammy, Sammy, my dear soul, I've heard the Tankerabogus!"

Now, while Mary considered this dark demon and wondered why it was permitted to rise through the waters on Christmas night, at a season of all others sacred to cheerful hope and goodwill, there came to her a man upon a pony. He alighted, hung the pony's bridle to the thorn tree, then approached and flung himself beside her. He was a thin, poorly nourished young fellow, with lantern jaws, rather pallid complexion, and large, melancholy brown eyes that seemed to ask an eternal question life could not answer. His hands were bony, his blue linen shirt boasted no collar. He wore a felt hat, tarnished to a rusty moss color with age; his small clothes were of corduroy above brown wool stockings; for the rest he was clad in a waistcoat with sleeves, but no coat over it.

"The blue fly be in the sheep something cruel," he said. "I wish the weather would turn colder, Mary. 'Tis like the plague of Egypt, the fly this year."

"Summer's fleeing quick enough," she said. "Us shan't have many more hot days, Samuel. Winter will be at the door in a few weeks."

She pointed to the gorse at her elbow.

"Going dead again a'ready. Just a little joy us gets of it, and then 'tis gone again, like a douted candle."

SAMUEL DURNFORD regarded his cousin and there came a hungry expression into his face. He desired above all earthly ambitions to wed her, and he hoped still that might happen, but Mary had other strings to her bow, albeit not in love as yet with any man.

She liked Samuel and she liked Warrender White, nor felt she the least objection to David White. But Warrender and David were well to do and Samuel was not. Samuel, however, rejoiced in a rich and childless uncle, who thought exceeding well of him. Indeed, everybody thought well of him, for he was a worthy and respectable lad and a good and understanding shepherd.

His prospects might have been declared satisfactory in all directions but one; but that was vital. He did not promise to make old bones. He came of doubtful stock and his elder brothers were both dead. Each had died at twenty-six years—one from consumption, the other in a quarry accident, and Samuel, now himself twenty-five, half expected to follow their example. His father also had died at twenty-six, and, not unreasonably, Samuel regarded that age with a great deal of uneasiness. Mary heartily sympathized in his concern and strove, without much conviction, to waken hope in her cousin. His precarious hold on life actually drew her to him more than the robust and healthy state of the brothers, Warrender and David, attracted her in their direction. They were twins, and had never known a day's illness or a day's grief in their lives; but now tribulation waited at their door also, for Warrender and David, though devoted each to the other, both found themselves under the dominion of Mary Durnford; and they loved her better than it was possible that they could love one another.

They were brawny, industrious men, and together farmed King Seat near Classenwell. They grew oats, ran sheep and cattle, bred ponies for the coal mines, and prospered. They kept themselves and a widowed mother in comfort, and if some folk held their dealings a little open to doubt and their bargains harsh, none could voice more than a general suspicion, or venture any direct indictment.

Mary's home lay over Meavy river, at Lether Tor farm, where John Durnford had a full quiver and desired his daughter's room rather than her company. Her parents agreed that it was more than time their eldest took a husband, and waited with some impatience for a proposal from one or other of the twins. Warrender and David could not both succeed, and John Durnford was equally agreeable to either; but of one thing he and his wife felt no doubt. In the matter of Shepherd Samuel Durnford they were assured. His expectations might be good; but what were expectations to a ning we were taken downstairs and made to sit on a bench till 4 in the morning waiting to be questioned. When we finally were ushered into the commandant's office, standing behind a large table I saw a tall, black man and at the table sat another man, writing.

OUR ESCAPE FROM THE BOLSHEVISTS

The tall one asked our names. I answered, "Artsimovitch." The man at the desk did not catch the name, but before I could repeat it the big bolshevik exclaimed in a loud voice. "Artsimovitch—father, mother, and daughter." So we knew for certain that my husband was also in the prison. A few questions were asked of us and we were ordered from the room back to our cell. I had left it hoping that we should be set free. The disappointment was so great that I felt sick and faint. I had hardly slept at all since I had been in those walls. My heart and my nerves were getting more overstrained every day. Thoughts, one more distressing than the other, passed through my brain; thoughts that I could not tell my daughter, and, unexpressed, they weighed upon my mind until they drove me almost to the point of madness; and then all the suffering around us!

Every unexpected noise—the shutting of a cell door, the shout of a sentinel, even the song of some prisoner—made me shudder and tremble.

WHAT was most horrible was that twice and sometimes three times a week motors arrived from the "Gorokhovaia" filled with drunken young soldiers, who shouted out just under our window the names of the poor unforunates whom they came to fetch to be shot.

Sometimes fifty known names would be called in a night, and all the time I was listening in the fear that the next would be my husband's name. The anguish, the suspense and lack of proper nourishment were horrible. How did we live through it?

At the end of two weeks we were ordered to get ready to come to the prison office when we should be called. Again I imagined we were to be set free and began giving away our little pieces of soap, of bread, and other little comforts that seemed so precious then. Miriam seemed depressed and finally said: "Mother, I heard we are not to be set free; we are to be taken to Moscow as hostages." Somehow it did not make much impression; suffering had blunted me. I had a vague presentiment that we would not be sent to Moscow. Miriam told me afterwards that she thought then I had entirely lost my mind. I was, as usual, dazed, and while waiting to be called soon fell fast asleep for the first time since our imprisonment.

Leaving me there, Miriam went to the commandant and asked him to see to it that I should not be taken to Moscow, as I could never live to get even as far as the train.

He ordered her out of the office, gruffly telling her that all of us were to go, her father, too. Miriam told me this when I woke up and we began to pack our few things.

But our dog! What is to become of Krassavitza? Shall we be forced to part from her? For the first time Miriam cried bitter tears. The little dog had been with us through all our troubles; we both were so attached to her! The funny little thing was very popular in the prison and the only ray of sunshine. She enjoyed special privileges, was allowed to leave the cell and to come back to it whenever she pleased.

As she positively refused to eat the prison soup, the cook sent us pieces of bone for her, and the other prisoners always saved the bits to give to her. One day, soon after we were brought to the prison, she was found wandering on the way to the men's side of the building. I am sure she scented that my husband had been brought there that day and was looking for him. Every night at roll call, when the number of prisoners present in our gallery was told, the guard would laughingly ask, "Is that with or without the dog?"

At 6 o'clock the commandant came himself to the cell to tell us that I should remain in the prison and that my husband and daughter would be sent to Moscow. I begged him to give me some work to do to keep me alive, but he answered, "I will get you out of prison." I wondered if he really meant it.

At 8 o'clock we were all ordered down to the court. My daughter was in despair; she feared that the commandant had changed his mind and that I also was to be taken to Moscow. She rushed to him to ask what he meant, but he only answered, "Your mother will be able to see your father."

THE door opened into the court. In filed over a hundred persons, men and women, and among them was my husband. We were allowed to have a short talk and we all sat about in the yard. I was very happy to see that my husband did not look at all depressed. This gave me great comfort. He held his head high and asked one of the guards for a light for his cigaret. The soldier gave it to him respectfully.

The commandant did not come out till midnight, and we had all that time to talk together, happy to be again united, but still feeling that it might be our last good-by.

When the commandant came and called out the names of those who were to leave, coming to Miriam's name he hesitated for a second and then said, "You can go upstairs. You must stay with your mother."

She was allowed to remain with me. What a blessing of Providence! For Moscow meant practically certain death. Most of the people in the court were friends of ours, and when they heard that Miriam was not going they shouted, "Bravo!" Poor things! They were all so kind to us. Some of them, to my knowledge, were liberated later on. What was the fate of the others? One can imagine!

Then the men were called out. When one of the titled prisoners was called, simply by name, he, passing by the commandant, said with a courtly bow, "I am prince and serene highness." The commandant looked at him with a funny wink in his eyes and answered, "So it is serene highness; that makes it much worse for you."

When the roll call of those who were to leave was over, they filed out of the prison gate, and from the little window of our cell I waved a farewell to my husband. Could he see me?

Another week passed with no other distraction than our daily walk in the courtyard.

On Sunday morning, June 22, the commandant came to our cell door. He looked in and asked if we had any complaints or requests to make. We answered, "None." Then he said, "In five minutes you will both be free," and walked out, without waiting for our answer. The emotion of hearing this news was too great for me. I fell in a dead faint and my daughter had to rush to our friends in the prison for assistance. They helped her to bring me to consciousness and to dress me, anxious to get me down to the office as quickly as possible.

The whole prison seemed to know that we were to be set free. As we walked, I still half dazed, down the corridors, I saw the faces of many of our dear friends at the corridor gate, asking us to take messages to their friends at home. Tears choked me.

WE finally reached the office of the prison, Miriam half dragging me, with the help of the guards. At the office we were asked to sign a paper. Standing near me was the second commandant of the prison, considered generally to be the cruelest of men. His wife was one of the warders who had looked after us in our cell and she had often whispered, "Have courage, be brave, you will be set free."

The second commandant extended his hand to me after I had signed the paper and expressed the hope that I should get well and forget all that I had gone through. I thanked him and asked him to thank also his wife, who had not been on duty that morning.

Near the door, as we passed out, stood the commandant himself. I tried to speak to him, feeling that he was the one who had the most to do with our liberation. He sternly waved me off with a movement of his hand. When I reached the door, with one foot well over the threshold, I nodded and waved to him again, to show that I appreciated this service.

In the corridors we passed several guards, showing our papers to them each time with a new fear that something might be wrong and that we should be turned back, until at last we reached the street. My daughter whispered, "Mother, we are out. We are free. O, God!"

She was carrying on her back, half dragging it on the ground, a sheet filled with all kinds of things that had been sent us from home during these three weeks. The little dog was quite crazy, jumping and barking out of pure joy.

The July sun burned pleasingly. No sign of any living being; the street was perfectly deserted. No cab to take us home. I felt terribly weak and we made but slow progress, though Miriam did all she could to get me away as quickly as possible from the sight of those prison walls. We stopped after some time, leaning against a house, when whom should I see coming towards us on a bicycle but our commandant.

He got off the bicycle, came up to us, saluted, and said he wanted to say good-by. He wished us everything good and hoped I should get well. He said he had done all he could to make it comfortable for us. It was quite touching coming from this gruff and powerful man.

I remembered that I had two bottles of champagne hidden at home which the Danish minister had given me before he left Petrograd, and knowing how difficult it was to get any wine, I offered to send the commandant the champagne. He answered, "For God's sake, no," saluted, and left us.

We continued our walk slowly toward our house, fearing we might perhaps find this gone, because usually when people are arrested their houses are immediately searched and often occupied or sequestered. Half way home we met a very dear friend, who, when she saw us, began rubbing her eyes, not daring to believe that we had been set free, and we all three began to cry.

TANKERABOGUS

Sammy, my dear soul, I've heard the Tankerabogus!"

"God's light, what ever did 'e go up there for? Pitch on this stone and get your wind. Lucky I was here to catch you, else you'd have been head over tail in a minute. Where's Warrender?"

Mary sat and panted.

"I hate him," she said. "I hate him for dragging me up there to hear that fatal speech. 'Twas like as if he done it on purpose, and when I'd heard, something came over me like a flame of fire to bolt."

"He was going to offer for you again. I know the signs."

"He'd begun to do it. He was axing me to marry him, when up came the awfullest voice from the water! It rose and cut the fog like a knife, and Lord knows what I should have seen if the mist hadn't hid it. O, Samuel, I'd rather have been deaf to my dying day afore I heard that name!"

She clutched his arm and spoke with a voice half terrified, half sorrowful, while Samuel began to divine the tragedy.

"The Tankerabogus spoke a name then—a man as you and me know perhaps?"

"Ess faith! 'Tis too cruel—a voice so deep as a passing bell tolling—tolling out your name. Yours, my poor dear man! 'Samuel Durnford! Samuel Durnford!' it cried, and on the instant I tore away from Warrender and fled. And then, as if that weren't enough, up flew a score of carrion crows from picking a dead pony."

"'Tis all over then. I be going home, I suppose."

"You mustn't go home! You shan't go home!" she cried. "'Tis against God and nature that this beastly thing should kill off anybody it likes. I was feared first; now I'm properly angry about it. So like as not the wretch is a liar and a trick of the Devil. But one wonder it's done, and that was to make me turn down Warrender White once for all. I haven't got no more feeling for him at all; because I know now I love you, you forlorn wretch, and if you was going to die a hundred deaths I'd love you still."

"My stars, your wits are touched, I'm fearing," murmured Samuel.

"Not them. I'm telling nought but God's truth. It came in my head like a thunder planet, the moment I heard you was to fall, and I gave one screech and flew from the man like a hare."

"I'm hearing things! What did he do?"

"He cussed and come after me; but the fog was that thick I'd only to hide behind a stone to slip him. And there 'tis—I'll marry you; if only for your eyes and your bad luck; and please the Lord I'll turn your bad luck into good yet; and if die you must, it shan't be afore I've brought a bit of happiness into your wretched life."

"'Tis defying ghosts and demons and your father to do it; but if you be up for that, Mary, then mark me! If you take me, then, afore my Maker, I won't die, and nought in Classenwell shall make me die."

"I will marry you, if 'tis only for five minutes, you unfortunate, blessed creature," sobbed she. "I love you now, yes I do, with every morsel of my heart, and when I heard this crooked news, I knew there was nobody in the world for me but you."

She wept in his arms and appeared to be much more perturbed than Samuel. Indeed, his sentence, from supernatural lips, struck him as a far less serious matter than the triump of salvation uttered from hers.

"If you can change at the sound of that beastly voice, so can I," he said. "'Tis a Bible fact that love casts out fear, Mary, and since you love me so fine, you grand wonder, then be damned to the Tankerabogus! I don't care a button for the nasty creature. You trust me from this minute; but keep it dark for the present when you get home, and just say you've heard a voice telling you not on no account to take White. And when this here tissick in my chest be gone, I'll step over and have it out with your parents. Death be a thing of the past now, I do assure 'e, my dear woman, for fool thought I may be here and there, I ban't the sort of fool that throws up the sponge when a maiden like you have said 'yes' to him. You've put half a century on my life. I'll devote every hour to your good."

Then he conducted Mary to her home and left her at the gate.

NEARLY a year after the spirit of the pool had uttered its dismal prophecy, two men, the twin brothers, happened to be riding past Classenwell on their way to Princetown. The day was cold and clear, with the sun setting out of a duck green sky and frost in the air. Light lay mirrored in the little tarn and ice already began to prick its margins.

"Just a twelvemonth," said Warrender, scowling down at the water, "and in half a minute more the minx would have took me; 'twas on her lips to do it."

"How could I tell, however? I only carried out the plan," answered David. "There was I, nicely hid in the favoring fog, when I heard your voice up over; of course, that was the appointed moment for bellowing out the man's name."

"You done it well enough," admitted his brother. "The voice come up all right and any sensible woman would have acted accordingly; and yet the trick wrecked all. You never know where you are with a she. To run back to that slack twisted shepherd just because she heard he was a dead man!"

"But he ain't—never less dead than now. I seed the beggar a fortnight since, plump as a partridge and bright as a bee. Putting on flesh without a doubt, and so terrible pleased with his bargain that he was bragging about his wonderful wife in the 'Ring o' Bells' to anybody as would listen."

"And his rich uncle dying at a gallop. The fortune always goes to undeserving men."

"Mary Durnford's breed don't die with her all the same," said David. "Her sister Milly's wife old, and a prettier piece than her at her best."

But Warrender shook his head.

"No more of that name for me. And you—you can't say as you've had so much luck with your wife that I should be tempted to try again."

David's face clouded.

"I can't, and I don't. In fact, it's come over me to doubt now and again if us was marrying men," he answered.

This time—no telltale line on his cuff edge

IT wasn't that he was so hard on his everyday shirts, but just that one place—the edge of his cuff—she couldn't seem to make come clean no matter how hard she rubbed.

This time—no telltale line spoils its immaculate freshness. Big lasting Rinso suds have gently soaked out the dirt. A light rubbing with dry Rinso made even the most ground-in dirt disappear.

Rinso is a soap different from anything you have ever used before. Its ingredients are so pure and perfectly balanced that just soaking in its lukewarm suds loosens all the dirt without injuring a single thread. This is why women the country over are using it in place of bar soap at every step of the family wash.

Rinso is made by the largest soap makers in the world. It comes in the regular size and the big new package. Get Rinso today—at grocery and department stores everywhere. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

NOTE: In hard water it takes from ¾ to 1 package (regular size) of Rinso to a tub to make good suds. In very hard water you will need from 1½ to 2 packages to a tub to get the big lasting suds that loosen all the dirt.

Before You Hitch Your Wagon Aloft, Be Sure There Is Solid Ground Beneath to Travel Upon.

MRS. ALDEN STEELE watched her husband as he breezed his way jauntily toward the station. No denying it, Aldy had the air of the most prosperous man in town. The contrast between him and K. W., who had joined him as he left the house, was marked. K. W. stooped a little and had a thin, worried visage. He even dressed a trifle shabbily. To be sure, he was the only man between Garden Bloom and the city limits who could sign a check in six figures. But some day Aldy could do that, too, and a lot besides. Some day, though until then——

Mrs. Steele turned away. No use crossing bridges before one reached them. The very worst bridges she had found never had to be crossed. Then, as if guiltily recalling something she had forgotten, she moved again to the window. Aldy always waved back to her when he reached the corner. He had done it for five years, never missing a day. How had it slipped her mind? Perhaps the thing he had said at breakfast, that dreadful suggestion. He had thrown it out lightly enough. She had been the one it had struck so hard.

Now he had turned and was waving back, once, twice. He was smiling, his boyish, irresponsible smile which took years from his face. Farther on across the street he turned, waving again, the last time before he was lost to view behind the huge hedge of the Willenson house.

Mrs. Steele pulled down the shade. She must not let the sun shine too directly on the rugs, not until they were paid for at least. She saw the curtains of the window next door move a trifle and the shadow of a large, voluminous figure disappear. That was Granny. She smiled tolerantly. Watching with her field glasses. She never liked to miss anything. One could not blame her. At eighty one had so few resources. Of course it was not always Granny. Daughter had a way of using the field glasses, too. Her husband never turned and waved. He never even came home any oftener than necessary. She seldom had a happy expression, even though they had two machines in their garage and she never wore a fur coat for more than two seasons.

The phone rang and she turned to answer it, slipping into the shining mahogany chair by her desk phone. Aldy had insisted on her having a desk phone and a mahogany desk to put it on because, as he said, while it would not be for very long that she would be doing her own work, she ought to have every convenience during that period.

IT was Mrs. Babby calling up to ask her to drive with her to Campden to do the marketing. So much cheaper, the groceries and meat at Campden, Mrs. Babby twittered. She knew that she should patronize home industry and all that. Still one couldn't afford to be robbed in wholesale fashion. And it would do Mrs. Steele good to get out. Bring the baby along if she had no one to leave him with.

Mrs. Steele hesitated. She would like to shop in Campden, but that took cash. And that was one thing which Mrs. Steele seldom possessed. It would be comfortable not to have to go to the grocery where they owed such a large bill. She was beginning to imagine that they were looking at her askance.

Another moment and her mind was made up. She would go, give her order at the grocery, and then drive on to Campden with Mrs. Babby. She would get to be a hermit after a while if she let fancies possess her. The grocer would not issue an ultimatum in public, and Mrs. Babby need not know why she refrained from taking advantage of the lower prices at Campden. As for the baby, she would take him along with her. She thought that Mrs. Armstrong showed signs of waning eagerness the last time that she left him with her. She disliked so asking favors. Aldy never felt that way. His mind was persistently fixed on the time ahead when he could return them all a hundred fold.

Outside the balmy softness of the air acted as a sedative, stirring from her mind the clouds of worry and slowly mounting fears. What had she been so disturbed about anyway? She had her home and her husband and her baby. No one could take these away. The furniture, of course, was different. They were so horribly back in their payments. Aldy's hint of possible disaster at the breakfast table had terrified her. But that deal he had on hand for today would surely go through, put them on easy street. His luck must change. For it was nothing but luck, she knew, that was so continually against him. He was cleverer than any other man in the suburb, better educated. He just did not seem to have the Midas touch. That would come. Just give him time.

Inside the grocery she stopped abruptly, a shadow crossing her face. From the market section in the rear a light, airy voice drifted out, filling the chilled smoky spaces between.

"I want the very thickest cut of steak you have, a foot thick if you have the nerve. Tommy has reached the point where the sky's his limit in the matter of meats. Of course, I should worry as long as he pays the bills." Here the voice stopped. A pair of gray eyes, cold, brooding, devouring eyes, noted the slight figure of Mrs. Steele in the doorway, appraised the cheap coat and the gleaming, glorious hair, the worn gloves, and the pretty face; too pretty a face to let go smiling on. She seized her prey.

"OH, THERE you are. Do come here and tell me all about yourself. I just heard that Aldy has a new deal on. I do wish Tommy wasn't so keen on this steady job stuff. We might fly a bit ourselves. Of course it keeps a roof over our heads and our furniture safe on the floor. By the way, I hear you sent your new washing machine back last week." A perceptible pause. "Didn't you like it? I thought it was a marvel myself. Nothing like it if you have to do the washing yourself."

Mrs. Steele went cold. Mrs. Stacey knew then about the washing machine they had not been able to keep. Aldy had sent it out so proudly, confident that they could finish paying for it within the month. It was the first experience of the kind she had ever had. She had heard of such things before, knew that they could happen in a hazy, impersonal way. But not to her. The dreadful looking man who had come, who had laughed when she had offered him a check.

"Had two of those already returned N. S. F.," he had replied. What N. S. F. meant she had guessed. How had Mrs. Stacey heard? Even the walls had ears and the wind carried tales in a small suburb like this. And if Mrs. Stacey knew every one knew by now. She felt suddenly faint and weak before the narrow gray eyes which were fixing her in faint amusement.

She gave her order—hamburger, stew, a pound and a half. She did not change it. She even laid stress on wanting a cheap cut. Then she got out. She did not wait to order her groceries. She could phone for what she wished.

Mrs. Babby was nowhere to be seen and Mrs. Steele hurried on, glad of the excuse not to have to see her. She pushed the black, heavy carriage ahead of her. The baby cooed and gurgled and shrieked with the sheer joy of living, but with no answering coos and gurgles from his mother. Her pretty head with its red, gleaming hair drooped as the sun slanted through it.

Why had she had to meet Mrs. Stacey? she wondered dully. Why that? On top of so much?

In the office of the Consolidated Song and Rhyming company gloom reigned with a heavy hand. Dejected salesmen gathered moodily in groups about dusty desks and cluttered office junk. The air was dense with smoke, sharp with cold. Leaky valves from ineffectual radiators spluttered and squeaked, protesting sounds of future heat to come. Business had gone to the dogs. The million dollar backer had flivvered. Even the stenographers were taking it hard. The office boy registered genuine despair. It had been such a fat job, in the parlance of the streets.

Above the din and confusion and pervading sense of a world gone wrong Aldy Steele's voice rang out. A hopeful, don't let yourself worry voice.

"Well, we aren't all dead and buried yet," he was saying, slipping into a rich looking overcoat. It had cost much more than they should have afforded, but, as he had told his wife, was bound to pay in the end. A man had to look the part if he was going to bring home the bacon these days.

"We're none of us back numbers, take it from me. Far, far from it! We have had three weeks of salary, three weeks of juicy commissions. And you all know how full the sea is of fish that haven't been caught. Not so bad, I'll say; not so bad." He was folding his freshly laundered scarf carefully about his short, full neck.

"From where you sit I suppose not," gloomed a thinnish man with spare hair and sallow face who sat hunched disconsolately on top of a radiator. "Nice home, nice savings account, nice checking account, nice credit to go on everywhere you turn."

"Sure thing." Aldy's smile, broad, hopeful, grew a trifle fixed. The smile of a man who keeps up the semblance after the mirth has gone. "And here's where I'm off. Fresh fields to conquer. New worlds I'm after. Hitched my wagon to a star. You know about the man who never discourages. Good luck to you all. Good-by."

"Good-by." A dispirited chorus of voices.

The door swung shut and Aldy's quick, assured step resounded down the hall.

"He's a fool, that man."

"Not by a long shot. Head on him like a tack."

"Which end?"

"The right end. He could buy and sell us all this minute."

"Forget him. Here comes the boss."

BY the time that Aldy Steele swung himself off the third rail express at Garden Bloom the sun shone high in the heaven and the Consolidated Song and Rhyming company, Inc., had passed from his mind completely. It no longer figured, one way or the other; relegated to the infinite has-beens of his life. The present occupied him absorbedly, the present and another scheme, a new scheme, a better scheme, a sure fire project this time, guaranteed to produce in three weeks' time.

He had already found a man not averse to separating himself from hard cash in its promotion. They could start the thing this very day, get it on its feet before twenty hours had swung around. The papers necessary to the first steps were reposing at home in Aldy's locked drawer. He had had a lock put on the drawer for the especial purpose. Foresight better than hindsight any time, he had said, though the five dollars had come a bit hard then. Now he was justified, though. His chest went out. Just as well he had not pursued the thing to a finish when he had first intended.

Mrs. Steele met him at the door. Her cheeks were flushed and her lips a little full from weeping, but he did not notice it in the fullness of his project.

"Your deal, dear—did it go through?"

"No; flivvered. As well, though." He dismissed the subject. Why hold a postmortem over something that had gone? His eyes were eager. "I'm on the trail of something else, a real stunt this time. You remember I told you about that oven idea, the new patent baking device. Well, I have landed a man to finance it. He has brains to see its value. Get me those papers, will you, in the locked drawer and my black grip and a sandwich and some tea. I'm catching that twelve five back to town."

Mrs. Steele's feet flew. She was not rallying quite so quickly as her husband from the shock of the Consolidated Song company going to pieces. Still, it was probably for the best. She had never had Aldy's faith in it. Probably for the best that it had petered out before Aldy became too involved. She recalled the day he had brought these other precious papers home. A million dollar idea, he had said, convertible into actual cash in a few months' time. He wouldn't trade that piece of paper in his hands for fifty thousand greenbacks.

Now something was really going to happen. She prepared his luncheon with swift hands. She was glad he had come home for even this brief space of time. His presence had already gone far to dissipate the painful flock of memories of the early morning episode. Now she would plunge into her work with renewed zest, do that cleaning she had not had the heart to do before.

She kissed him good-by with a bright smile.

"Hurry home."

"Yes, we'll take in a movie by way of celebration."

For the second time that morning he breezed his way stationwards, past the Willensons, on toward the Staceys, who lived at the end of the street.

"Good fellow, Stacey," he thought in a charitable mood towards life. "He'll never set things afire though. Belongs to the plodders."

Here he broke into a run, hearing the sharp whistle of the train a scant mile away.

The day wore on. Mrs. Steele sped through her tasks atop the wave. She even took no time to peer through the lacy curtains at her windows in the hope of seeing a passerby who would drop in for a brief chat. The Steeles lived at the end of town and in the new and striving suburb passers-by were an event in her life, as callers were an occasion.

The house was receiving a really extraordinary cleaning up. When it came to the dusting she expended even more than her customary care upon it. Nearly every piece occupied an individual place in her affections. So many had been given her as birthday or anniversary gifts. There were many women she knew who did not relish the idea of receiving furniture for presents. But Mrs. Steele had never felt that way. Wasn't the house as much hers as Aldy's, more so because she spent so much more time in it?

THE clock was striking 4 as she sat down by the front window with her mending. The baby still slept. There was an hour or more before she need think about getting dinner.

The wheels of life, once started, move swiftly to a denouement. Months, years slip by, serene and without event, until the ring of a bell, the knock at a door, a letter opened and read, and the heart stops for a thunderous instant, only to start again with hammer strokes that hurt intolerably.

Mrs. Steele heard the chugging groan of a motor truck in the street in front of her house. A covered truck with no name on the outside.

"Aldy has sent home some more furniture," was her first thought. Their goods usually came in this sort of vehicle. Firms at which one traded in partial payments were considerate along those lines.

Her sewing dropped in her lap. A new divan, perhaps. He had mentioned getting one a number of times. Or a dressing table for the little guest room off the sun porch. She saw two men jump down from the driver's seat, looking around as if to make sure they were at the correct place. A minute more and they were on the porch.

Mrs. Steele threw open the inside door. She was about to slip the catch in the screen when something in the face of the larger of the two men, a burly fellow with sleeves rolled up and a slouch hat, arrested her.

"You're Mrs. Steele?"

"Yes." She could not tell why, but she was sure now that the furniture was not for her.

"Well, I'm from the Standard Furnishing company," the burly man went on. "We've come to take your furniture." He stopped and then, deciding that the look of amazement was unfeigned, went on: "Mr. Steele, I suppose you know, is three months back in his payments. The firm has sent him all sorts of notices, but it has not done any good. So they are calling it in, ma'm. The dining room set, the three piece parlor set, and some bedroom stuff—I've got it down in the books."

MRS. ALDEN STEELE did not answer. Her face began to look a little pinched and gray in the vivid afternoon sun. Oldish, too. This was the thing then which Aldy had hinted of at breakfast—the dreadful, impossible thing, except that he had merely said a man might come to collect. Nothing more. There was something wrong about this, something he did not know of.

The burly man shifted from one foot to the other. It was late. Going on toward 5 now. And the Standard was not anxious to dole out overtime checks. He would have to hustle.

"Sorry, ma'm, but I guess we'll have to come in."

Mrs. Steele turned to the other man. He was older, smaller, a different type. His face had a troubled expression.

"You—you aren't going to let him do this," she cried. She did not know in the least what she was saying—anything—to gain time until her brain could be forced to work.

The burly man shook his head impatiently.

"He ain't got nothing to say about it, nothing at all." Then, in desperation, anxious to say something which would bring matters to a crux, "He can't help you, for he's come to do worse than me."

"What——"

The other man shot a look of protest at the speaker. Then in a resigned voice

"Well, I haven't come on a pleasant errand myself. I'm from Harris & Harris. This house—a bungalow, I believe you call it—is being taken into court for failure to make due payments and keep up the interest."

"What did you say?" An unnatural tone, sharp, the tone of a person in physical pain.

"Harris & Harris have started action to foreclose. I have brought some papers." He inclined his small, slightly bald head—he had removed his hat in his visible embarrassment—toward the big fellow, who was now shuffling his feet with mounting impatience. "He and I didn't come together. That is, we didn't mean to. He picked me up at the station. I was inquiring the way here and he said that he was coming, too."

MOMENTS passed, an eternity of minutes, it seemed, during which Mrs. Steele stared heavily at them. Of course this could not be so. Her home—Aldy's home—the furniture, perhaps, but not the house.

"Sorry to be in a hurry, ma'm," the burly man began again. "But it's getting awful late——" His hand went out to the screen.

Mrs. Steele roused. Her eyes looked bright, too bright almost. The lines about her mouth were growing hard. This thing they were talking about—it could not happen. She spoke in a quiet, level voice.

"You can't come in," she said. "You can't either of you come in. This house is mine—this furniture is mine." She paused. Her mind, whirling, whirling vaguely, chaotically, found it hard to direct her lips to sound, but she drove it on. "You had better go."

The hand of the burly man turned the knob of the screen. The other man stepped forward. His worried eyes had a propitiatory smile which spread faintly over his face. "If you will let us in I think I can explain——"

Mrs. Steele shook her head. Her voice was still quiet.

"But you can't. I have said it. I mean it. You can't take anything that I have. You had better not try. If you do—if you take one more step to come in this house I—I shall kill you." She finished coldly.

She shut the door, slamming it hard. It shut with an effort. Its hinges were old. They were trying to get through one more year without new ones.

She stood still, listening hard. Her breath, which had left her, had come back, even, slow. No hysterics now, no trace of emotion. Just a terrifying, deadly hardness.

She could hear the men talking in gruff, angry voices. She was glad that she could not hear what they were saying. Did she imagine it or was the knob turning? Were they going to force their way in? She turned toward the stairs. She was acting on impulse now, in the sway of blind, unreasoning instinct.

Up the stairs she flew, down the long hall, past the baby's bedroom, where she could hear him cooing peacefully alone. In her own room she fumbled distractedly among the contents of the dresser drawers. Somewhere among the debris was a loaded revolver. She was certain of this. Aldy had never wanted to keep it—a concession to her fears.

What if it were gone? In an agony of fear she searched another dresser, still a third. She had not forgotten any place. Yes, the den. The locked drawer by the fireplace.

Once the revolver was in her hands a feeling of coolness possessed her. This would do the work, she thought. She spoke aloud, in a quiet, level voice.

AT the top of the stairs she stopped suddenly, her eyes dilating. Her heart froze.

The door was opened. They were inside. There were voices, several men talking at once.

And Aldy's voice above the others. It drifted to her from below. Genial, persuasive. His laugh, too, and then more conversation which she could not hear. He had come home unexpectedly after having just been to see Harris & Harris. He had fixed things up. She heard him offer the men cigars, slap them on the back, say good-by.

She stood facing him now at the foot of the stairs, bewildered, pale lipped.

"Your deal—went through?" The same question she had asked him earlier in the day.

He shook his head.

"No, the man backed down—wouldn't come across."

"How then——?"

He smiled, not his boyish, irresponsible smile, but a deeper, graver one.

"I'm through with business deals. They aren't for me. I'm through with hitching my wagon to a star until I get some solid ground underneath me to travel on anyway. I have taken a job, a steady job, steady salary. Not much, but something I can do and get away with. You won't have that maid I've been promising you or the new fur coat. We won't be rich very soon, but it's a job that pays money each week. That much is sure."

He turned and walked briskly into the parlor, throwing himself into a huge armchair by the fireplace. For a minute she hesitated. She wanted to follow, to throw her arms around his neck, to cry out her joy. But from above the baby's cooing had changed to fretting, growing sharper each moment. Once more she flew up the stairs, two steps at a time, into his room, snatching him up, covering his face with kisses.

Who wanted to be rich or have a maid or a new fur coat as long as one had a kitchen to cook in, food to prepare, furniture to sit in, and a roof hung securely over one's head!

THE ROMANCE OF A MILLION DOLLARS

West broke the silence. "I have made a clean breast of it, Aunt Bulah," he said easily. "So far as you are concerned, it is simply one nephew taking the place of the other—you'll want to guard the family name just the same. My falling into the clutches of the law would create even a bigger sensation than Breck's arrest would have caused. You'll want to avoid that. You have the pearls, and have not had to pay for them—some little gain to you; now what arrangement are you going to make with me? I told you I am penniless, and, from what I have told you of myself, you realise that I would stop at nothing, not even murder, as you have seen. You were willing to pay Breck to go to Europe and cease from troubling his family. What will you pay me for doing the same thing?"

Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent was not given an opportunity to answer. Breck had started forward, but Marie spoke first. She had moved along the table until she was directly opposite West. She brought her little fist down on the table; her face was drawn and so white that it looked blue. "No!" she said with passionate intensity. "It is I shall decide this matter. Until tonight, when I would give you no answer and then you attempted to play the part of the caveman, I was utterly ignorant of the truth. In the pressure of your fingers beneath my chin there was the feeling of Mrs. Smith, but, more certainly than that, there was upon your breath that same cachou. I knew instantly that you were that same creature of the train! I understood everything, and from that moment I deceived you. I accepted you happily—I was so happy that at last I knew the truth. I vowed I would be revenged upon you—did I not tell you that I would try to reward you as you deserved? I learned of this meeting tonight and its purpose. I planned to unmask you as soon as the jewels would be safely in Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's hands. I escaped from my room and secreted myself here. I saw you enter the cottage as West Dunbarton-Kent and go hastily through that wall, which you closed behind you. Soon you returned as Mrs. Smith. You were in great haste—you were late from taking Mrs. Brant-Olwin to her home, a little plan of yours to absent yourself from Kent House without causing suspicion. West Dunbarton-Kent, by revealing your frightfulness you hope to terrify your family. For such as you prison is the only place. I intend that you shall suffer the full penalty of the law."

She shook her clenched fist at him, a white epitome of hate. "I shall be revenged upon you to the utmost—you thief, and one who would have murdered!"

They were all looking at her: Willetts' hands came together in noiseless applause; Haslett with full sympathy but with a clear understanding of what it would mean to the Dunbarton-Kent family should she carry out her threat; Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent with grim bleakness, the full realization of a necessary public as well as a private disgrace. Breck had paused on his forward step; he was looking observantly at Marie, at her clenched left hand, and at her right hand, which hung helpless.

OF them all, West was the least moved. His brows lowered slightly, that was all. "When you cool down, Marie Angouleme, you'll think differently," he said, with perfect assurance. "Your anger is natural enough, but you'd as soon cut off your hand as to advertise Breck's connection with this affair. He's a jail bird—his history would be public property, I assure you."

Breck did not move or speak; again it was Marie who flared at him. "What is Breck Dunbarton-Kent to me! From you I have had nothing but ugly deceit, and from him persistent scorn. This family—what is it to me! I do not belong to it!" She struck her fist on the table, her voice suddenly ringingly triumphant. "I said, West Dunbarton-Kent, that I would be revenged upon you to the utmost! Do you suppose that, before I hid myself here, I would not carefully make arrangements? That I would not telephone to the house of Mrs. Brant-Olwin and talk with her detective? That I have not allowed you to consume time in order that your capture may be the more certain? The reward offered by Mrs. Brant-Olwin will make me rich!" She looked across at him, laughing a little in her triumph, queer laughter coming from so white a face. "Whether you go, or whether you remain, your fate is as certain. Very truly I have won, Monsieur West Dunbarton-Kent!"

half sovereign out of his pocket with a careless gesture.

"Such a maiden did ought to be tossed for with a bit of gold—eh?" he asked.

"So she ought," agreed David, "but not with a bit of your gold."

"Why for not?" asked his brother, pretending surprise.

"Ax your sense. Would you suffer me to furnish the coin for this job?"

"No," admitted Warrender. "I certainly wouldn't, David."

He returned his money to his pocket and they debated how the election should be made. Finally they decided to put two bones on the hearth, call in a dog, leave him at the door, and stand out of his way. If he chose the right hand bone, Warrender won; if the left hand bone, then victory would lie with David.

THEY cleared the kitchen, set down the bones, and brought in a big and hungry old English sheep dog. He rushed in, wagging his bob tail genially. He sniffed, scented the food, and pounced on the right hand bone. David cursed; then he shook his brother's hand.

"I wish you joy," he said, "and I shall begin keeping company with Saul French's darter next week."

"Thank you, David, and thank you, Ship, my old hero," answered Warrender. He patted the dog's head and went to his own room without more words, but when he was gone David took both bones away from Ship and cursed him and kicked him into the farmyard again.

The twins, with that keen sense of the value of time and money which marked all their ways, proceeded swiftly each upon his business, and in a week from the trial by dog and bones David returned to the subject of marriage.

"I'm getting on steady with Rhoda French," he told his brother. "I took a dish of tea along with her family Sunday, when you were at Lether Tor, and I find Rhoda pretty good value. A bit homely, but beauty never did worrit me if there was wits. I shall pop the question to her this side of Christmas."

Warrender nodded.

"There's room for all at King Seat," he said.

"And you—have you axed Mary?"

"I have. Us needn't pretend any secrets. She didn't jump in my arms by any means. Wouldn't say 'yes' and wouldn't say 'no.' Must have time to think and all that nonsense."

"I'm surprised. 'Think!' What does the fool want to think about?"

"About that poor, thin creature, her cousin, the shepherd."

"Don't every one know Sammy Durnford's little better than meat for the grave?"

"Why, Bolt will outlast the man years and years! He's the sort that don't rot much quicker than granite," promised David. "What should he care for his nephew's widow? 'Tis pretty good cheek the girl not jumping at you the instant moment you offered."

"Come to think of it, so it is," admitted Warrender. "It shows there's a bit less sense there than I hoped."

"Have a tell with the shepherd, then, and hint he'll be wise to drop out."

Warrender followed this advice and spoke to Samuel, but found him resolute.

"I be fighting fair, Warrender White," he explained, "and I much hope as you'll do the same. So long as I have it straight from her that she's took no other man and still be in the market, so long shall I court her with all my might. She's the top flower in the bunch in these parts, as you well know, and though I wouldn't say I'd got any call to hope, still a man in love can't do nought else, because love without hope be foolishness."

AND Mary held the balance and wavered for a few months more, tending steadily to Warrender, yet continuing to love Samuel's eyes and voice and full of great truth for his destiny. David played a brother's part and whispered wisdom to the lady, but she told him to mind his own business—a piece of advice he had never needed until that hour.

Christmas came again, and it found David engaged to Rhoda French, his brother dogged and persistent in pursuit of Mary, and Samuel losing ground, with waning hope and a bad cough.

Then the bucom women, feeling that further delay was unfair to all concerned, and urged by a rough tongued parent to do her duty, decided; and it was upon Christmas day, when chance threw both lovers into her path, that she did so.

The shepherd came to take dinner with his relations at Lether Tor farm, and as they walked together before the meal he asked Mary to marry him yet again, only to hear her refuse once more, with the old hesitation and sorrow.

"I like you cruel well, Sammy," she confessed, "and as a figure of a man you fill my eye nice, but what's a woman to do with a father and mother like mine? Morning, noon, and night they be harrowing over me and badgering my bones through my skin near—of course, to take Warrender White. And now my sister, Sally, have started on to me, too, and says I did ought to clear out and give her a chance. And such a fair man as you knows that Warrender's all right. It ban't as though I hated him, or anything like that, though I don't love him; but you can't choose your man by weight and inches, or the color of his eyes, or the sound of his voice—not if you be in my position. In fact, I know well I did ought to thank God then anybody wants me at all."

"He's got his brother and fares and friends. I've got nought but the hope of you."

"And the hope of your Uncle Bolt. If you only didn't look so terrible like dying I might make shift and fight 'em and leave the question open a bit longer, but everybody shouts at me you'll be a goner afore the lambing time."

"Goner be damned!" swore Samuel. "I'm hard enough."

"That churchyard cough, too——"

"'Tis nought. It comes from the throat, not the vitals."

But his Christmas dinner was spoiled for the shepherd by this hopeless outlook, though he preserved a fairly cheerful exterior, helped Mrs. Durnford with the children, and made himself agreeable. When Warrender White arrived in the afternoon, to take a walk with Mary by appointment and present a gift, Samuel had five youthful cousins around him and was telling them the story of Classenwell pool.

Mary departed in the mood of a victim. Samuel knew too well that the hour had struck and that she would not return until she was betrothed. He poured out grim and grisly fairy stories of black witches and Childe the Hunter's tragic end, and he stopped his small listeners in such gloom that presently a little boy lifted his voice and howled for his mother. Whereupon the matron, who was enjoying an after dinner nap, appeared with sleepy eyes and tousled hair to bid Samuel be gone.

"You'm enough to fright any babe with your long, chap fallen face," she said. "'Tis enough for 'em to look at you without hearing these gashly tales. You ought to know better; and the fog's coming down off the moor like a wall, so you'd best to get on your way home."

"Mary's going to say 'yes' to Warrender White," he told her. "I ain't deceived—and she said 'no' to me again half an hour afore dinner."

"You ought to have better manners than to ax any more—Christmas day and all," declared Mrs. Durnford. "And as for saying 'yes' to Mr. Write, 'tis about time, and more'n time, she done so. Well to do chaps wasn't so patient in my days, and if a fool said 'no' to 'em they didn't often get a chance to change their minds. And as for you, to say it kindly, you've no right to seek marriage at all, for you've got one foot in the grave and be doomed to an early death. You must put your hope where there ain't no marrying, thank God."

"Cheerful talk for Christmas day," answered Samuel gloomily.

"Sense ain't often cheerful, but truth's truth, and Christmas day be also quarter day," she answered. "We want a bit of relief in this house, and 'tis time we had it. And you go to doctor for a bottle of physic for that cough. You give tongue like a hound, and the time's coming when your breathing parts will be no more use to you than a chunk of peat."

"I don't want to live no more—not now," vowed Samuel.

"That's in your Maker's hands, and you must do your part to keep the fire burning," she told him. "Get back home, and don't breathe this fog deeper than you can help, and wear flannel next your skin if you want to hear the cuckoo again."

"Damn the cuckoo!" cried Samuel and he departed, with his mournful eyes rolling over the gray curtains of the fog. It was driving up thickly and smothering the swift gloaming. He had walked but a quarter of a mile when he heard swift feet and a panting pair of lungs, and scarcely was he conscious of these phenomena before a solid body rushed out of the fog, flung herself sobbing upon his bosom, and nearly rolled him over. He staggered and exclaimed. His stick went one way, his hat flew another. He clasped the woman tightly to keep himself on his legs, and perceived that he was embracing Mary.

"What's the mischief's happed now?" he cried. "Have 'e seen a ghost?"

"Worse," she sobbed. "O, Sammy,

The Romance of a Million Dollars

by ELIZABETH DEJEANS

THE STORY THUS FAR

DUNBARTON-KENT'S millions are held in trust by his widow for two nephews, Breck and West, and a niece, Bella. They are to divide the fortune provided none commits a crime—and Breck was reared a thief! Mrs. Brant-Olwin's jewels, valued at $400,000, are stolen and $100,000 and some gems disappear from beneath Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's pillow. Breck and a mysterious "Mrs. Smith" are suspected, but he denies all. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent centers her efforts on recovering the gems and protecting the family name. Lovable Marie Angouleme, chauffeuse for Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, learns the family secrets and despite herself is attracted to the despised Breck. She discovers a love affair between Bella and Allen Colfax, a third nephew; receives a proposal from West, and finds an anonymous note in which the return of Mrs. Brant-Olwin's pearls is offered for $500,000. A flag is flown from Kent House to signal the writer that the offer is accepted. Mrs. Brant-Olwin is the guest of honor at a party given by Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent. Breck appears unexpectedly and devotes himself to her. Marie, piqued, consents to be married to West. She is on her way to her room when she meets Bella, grip in hand, about to depart. Bella reveals the ransom is to be paid at two that morning at "Mrs. Smith's" cottage and gives Marie a key, with the insinuation that of course she would "not wish to be double crossed." Later Marie hears voices in her room and is astounded to learn that the stolen gems have been hidden beneath a false bottom in her own trunk. She starts out for the cottage.

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Mrs. Smith Is Unmasked.

AT exactly half past two Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and Haslett and Willetts paused at the door of the cottage. It had been arranged that Haslett should be spokesman; the money which Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had carried about with her all evening was now in Haslett's breast pocket.

Neither Haslett nor West had told Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent about Walter Greene's discovery. Given his way, Greene would have subjected Marie to questioning, but West had been fiery in his objection, and Haslett had said, in the few moments he and the detective had had for consultation, "No, let things be. Either we get the jewels tonight or we don't get them. If we have been double crossed there is nothing we can do tonight." He had emphasized the last word. In any case, he meant that Marie should be given a bad half hour; she should not marry a Dunbarton-Kent if he could prevent it.

"I believe it's crook putting it over crook," Greene had urged, "and that girl has played her part. I believe it's a plot—somebody took the distributor brush out of Mrs. Brant-Olwin's car, a neat little trick, and it wasn't her chauffeur either—I know him—yet that infatuated fool, West, takes Mrs. Brant-Olwin home with all those diamonds on her, running the risk of a holdup. I tried to tell him, but he wouldn't listen."

"I talked with him," Haslett had returned. "He's armed—he told me so—and he has the chauffeur with him. Either he had to take Mrs. Brant-Olwin home or she would have to spend the night here, and I agreed with him that of the two dangers taking her home was the lesser. And we dare not tell Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent anything about it tonight—if she gets through without a collapse we'll be fortunate." Then Haslett had sent for Jones and Willetts and had told them of Greene's discovery. "Keep a close watch on her windows, Jones, and you, Greene, keep watch upstairs here—don't allow her to leave her room tonight.

It was a still night, no moon to lend shadows which would suggest life, only silence and gloom; the cottage might have been the home of the dead. "There is no light in the place, Haslett," Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent whispered anxiously. "Perhaps she'll not keep the appointment?"

Haslett was desperately afraid of the effect disappointment would have upon her. "If she doesn't we'll hear from her," he said reassuringly. "We will get the jewels eventually." He glanced over his shoulder to make certain that Willetts was directly behind him, then he tried the door. It was locked and he took the key from Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent and unlocked it and they entered. And not into darkness; there was a light there, though a dim one, and Mrs. Smith was there, a figure distinguishable even in the dimness.

IT was a tremendous relief. It was apparent that the woman had prepared for their coming. The divan had been thrust aside and the big desk table had been cleared and drawn near the fireplace and crosswise of the room, forming a barrier behind which she stood, facing them, her back to the high paneling at one side of the fireplace. On the other side of the fireplace was West's work table, and hung low above it was a green shaded electric bulb which cast a brilliant light on the work table, but which left the rest of the room dimly lighted. At her right, behind her, in the corner, was the huge old secretary.

They paused for the moment of inspection, Haslett and Willetts keen to discover whether there were possible hidden occupants of the room, but evidently the woman was alone. There was no furniture in the room behind which any one could hide, only the secretary, and that stood flush with the walls, as it had always stood. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked only at the woman.

Mrs. Smith spoke first. "Will you kindly lock the door again and come forward—you, madam, and the gentlemen?" There was sarcasm in the words: "Since this is a business transaction, let us consider this table a counter If you will come forward and be seated? This matter should not take long."

Her voice was thick and low, as if obstructed by her decided accent and an uncontrollable lisp, and yet it was a carrying voice, for it was so deep. As they approached her Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent eyed her with intense interest. Her face and figure were more distinct now. She was a tall woman, superbly formed and expensively and strikingly gowned, swathed in richly embroidered black satin. Her face was shaded by a wide brimmed hat, its crown formed of two paradise plumes, and her nose, mouth, and chin were obscured by a closely drawn veil with a silken tracery of leaves and flowers. Nevertheless her rich tinting was apparent and the glint of light eyes between black lashes. Around her throat and shoulders was wound the magnificent sable stole which had made such a deep impression on Marie. A length of it rested on the table against which she stood.

She was a regal looking woman, and Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent understood instantly why Marie had seen a likeness to Breck; it lay in the eyes, their ice blue lightness shadowed by extraordinarily thick black lashes. But above them were brows that belonged to no Dunbarton-Kent, heavy black brows that almost met across the nose, marring the face, as did the mouth, which was too large and too vividly red. And yet the woman did not look made up; her rich tinting looked natural. She was a conspicuously handsome creature, undeniably foreign, the vampire type par excellence, Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent thought. She looked capable of dominating any man.

When they reached the table and faced her Haslett spoke: "Have you the jewels here, madam?"

"Iei." Her lisp made the word a hiss. She drew aside the length of sable stole which lay on the table, revealing a long silver box chased with gold and on its lid the monogram "B. O." outlined in sapphires. "Within are the pearls—lacking a single ring, which I promise to send to you. It has not been sold; it was merely an oversight, left behind by mistake."

"We must examine them, of course." Haslett took the money from his breast pocket and laid it on the table. "Here is the money—we simply want to be assured that the pearls are genuine. Will you allow this gentleman to take them to the light over there?"

"Most certainly."

SHE shoved the jewel case toward Willetts, a sweeping gesture, then stood impassive, as if ennuied by the proceeding. Her manner throughout had been faintly scornful. Haslett motioned Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent to a chair, which she took. He stood erect on his side of the table, one hand in his coat pocket, touching his pistol, his eyes now on Willetts, now on Mrs. Smith, and occasionally he glanced about him. Mrs. Smith's left hand hung straight at her side; she had used it when she had uncovered the jewel case. He could not see her right arm, the sable stole covered it; but he felt certain her right hand held a pistol, as did his. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent looked at Willetts; so much depended on his decision. She was crimson and tense with excitement.

Willetts was doing his work thoroughly. He examined through his glass each pearl of the magnificent rope which was the piéce de résistance of the collection, then the earrings, rings, and the beautiful but shorter strings of pearls which was designed for a head ornament. In the lower tray of the jewel case was a yellowed paper giving in French the history of the collection and, appended to it, the receipted bill of sale and the listing of the French firm from which Mrs. Brant-Olwin had purchased the pearls. Willetts counted them. All were there save the single pearl ring which they had discovered in Marie's trunk. Then he placed them on their cream satin couch, where they gleamed faintly blue, palely lovely. No wonder Mrs. Brant-Olwin prized her pearls.

Haslett caught Willetts' nod. "Correct?" he asked.

"Yes, sir—lacking the one ring," and he brought the jewel case to the desk table.

"Give it to madam," Mrs. Smith said. "I promise you the mislaid ring—for that you must take my word."

Willetts gave the jewel case to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, and her hands shook as she took it; it was the end of a long and painful journey. At the same moment Haslett shoved across the table the packet of bills "Count them," he said, "then our transaction is ended."

MRS. DUNBARTON-KENT rose, the jewel case held to her breast. They all three stood and watched while Mrs. Smith counted swiftly and deftly, using both hands now, her body bent forward and the plumes in her hat a-quiver. Five hundred thousand dollars in bills of large denomination, a fortune. Suddenly there was revealed in the woman the excitement of the gambler: her slim, pointed fingers curved like talons caressing a victim, her cheeks glowed, and the pupils of her eyes contracted; she drew her breath with a hiss. Then, finding the count correct, with clenched fist on the pile of bills, her body still bent forward, she flung back her head and laughed noiselessly, her features distorted, her red mouth widened repellently.

They stared at her. All three were so absorbed, all four were so intent, that they did not see the cupboard door of the big secretary open or see the small figure that crept out of a space barely large enough to hold a child. They did not notice until Marie appeared at Mrs. Smith's side and, with a jerk, tore the bills from beneath her hand and flung them wide. When the woman shot erect Marie was facing her with pointed finger. "You are——!"

The woman sprang at her. She struck at Marie's mouth before her lips had formed the third word. It was Marie's involuntary swerve that diverted the blow. Mrs. Smith's clinched fist struck her shoulder with a force that flung Marie back against the secretary and crumpled her up on the floor. Then, simultaneously with Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent's shriek and before Willetts could spring across the table or Haslett circle it and reach the woman, she had backed against the paneling, had lifted her arm and fired at Marie, who was struggling to rise. When they did clear the table Mrs. Smith had been borne to the floor by an assailant who had sprung from—they did not know where.

For a moment, to Haslett and Willetts, what had happened was utterly unaccountable: the pistol struck from Mrs. Smith's hand, a shot gone wild, and a man struggling with the woman, who fought with the ferocity of a tiger. But Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had seen: when she had shrieked the paneling in the wall behind the woman had opened outward suddenly, like a door, and the man who had sprung upon Mrs. Smith was Breck; he had reached his confederate an instant before the shot rang out and had struck the pistol upward; then they had grappled.

So much Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent saw before she dropped the jewel case and went to Marie like a mother to her injured child. She reached Marie before Willetts did. But Marie had struggled to her feet. She put them both aside. "They—will—kill—each other——" she gasped, and staggered to the table, gasping and panting, and clung to it for support, her staring eyes on Breck and the woman. Then she saw how it was and waited.

They all watched and waited, fascinated. A million lay scattered on the floor, the jewel case gaped wide and pearls mingled with their ransom, but they had forgotten. Though a struggle of thief with thief, had Breck struck the woman Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent would have cried out; Haslett and Willetts would have dragged him off. But Breck had grappled with Mrs. Smith only, and now he was holding her pinioned. She had struck at him again and again; the blood trickled from a wound in his forehead; twice she had flung him off and had had him down; they had rolled over and over; her sable stole was a twisted mass beneath them; her hat had been dragged from her head, pulling away from her face its framing of raven hair; her gown was torn from throat to waist, revealing her chest. Now, when he had her pinioned and they saw the face of the creature whose strength had been almost equal to Breck's, she was strangely metamorphosed; there was a fringe of fair hair on her forehead, one eyebrow was broad and black, the other light; her bosom flat and hairy.

For the first time during the struggle Breck really saw the face of the creature who had fought with the strength of a madwoman. He loosed his hold and sprang to his feet. "You!" he said.

It was not the prostrate man who answered. It was Marie, who said clearly: "Yes, monsieur—it is West Dunbarton-Kent."

ABSOLUTE silence followed their recognition of West. The surprise that held the group was too overwhelming for even an exclamation, for the first few moments too dazing even for connected thought. Breck stood motionless, dishevelled, blankly staring with eyes in which vagueness was quickly changing to a glare of fury; Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent had paled until blue about the lips; Haslett had flamed scarlet, and Willetts, with neck craned and eyes bulging, simply leaned forward and stared. Marie alone showed no surprise. There was a curious radiance lighting her face. She clung to the table and looked at Breck.

West was rising from the floor. He stood upright, a strange figure in his tattered feminine finery. He neither cowered nor looked about him for a means of escape. He squared his shoulders and flung back his head. Apparently the displaced wig annoyed him, for he pulled it off and threw it on the floor. With a deft movement he peeled off the black eyebrow, all that remained of his disguise except the black on his eyelashes and the streaks of paint on his cheeks. He flipped the eyebrow from his fingers, then folded his arms, and, with head high, he looked at Marie. "You've won," he said with knifelike incisiveness. He ran his eye coolly over the petrified group. He did not quail even under Breck's look of fury. "Well?" he asked.

It broke the spell of stupefaction. Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent reached gropingly for a chair and sank into it, and Haslett went to her and put his hand on her shoulder, patting it. "Keep—calm," he said thickly. His own face was ablaze, the profound anger and deep distress of an honest man. "He tried to commit murder," he muttered aloud to himself. Willetts straightened suddenly. He looked at the opening in the young man whose own span of life was practically determined?

"He'll go at twenty-six, sure as eggs is eggs," said Mrs. Durnford, "and his hopes of his Uncle Bolt's money will go with him, and us don't want Mary back a widow on our hands inside a twelvemonth."

John agreed with her and they considered how best to quicken the operations of the twins.

"Seeing, by all accounts, they're both set on her, it may turn out a ticklish business," admitted Mary's father, "and how best to push 'em on I don't see too clear, 'specially as she hardly knows 'em apart."

AND now Sammy, moved by the weather and a strong rumor that the White brothers were reaching a conclusion respecting his cousin, again asked the girl, with mournful and faltering words, whether she would ignore the risks and marry him. He touched her heart no little and his body moved her even to love, for her own massive shape found her inclined toward his lean and graceful proportions, and she had always dearly liked his eyes. Warrender and David were stuggy men—solid and beamy and shorter by half a head than Samuel. Their voices, too, were throaty and high pitched; they lacked the melody of his. "Why for d'you want to marry anybody?" she asked. "Better bide a bachelor man and keep free, Sam. You should hear my father tell about matrimony. He says 'tis no state for a self-respecting creature."

"And yet he's terrible wishful to see you wedded."

"Only for the sake of a bit more room. We'm pushing the roof off our home pretty near."

"A grand creature like you didn't ought to be crushed," he said. "From the standpoint of ten childer, marriage may be rather a dark contrivance; but who's to blame? Us wouldn't have ten childer—that I will swear."

"You bide patient. There's plenty of time to consider. Wait till your twenty-six years be past. Nurse yourself a bit and let down more victuals. You don't eat enough, I reckon. Such a leery looking chap you be, though I'd sooner a lot have a thin husband than a fat one."

"Then there's a good ray of hope," he answered, "because they White twins will be round as barrels in a few years, both of 'em. And as for me, I'm hungry for you—nought else."

"Warrender and David have got into a pretty row at Brent pony fair," she said thoughtfully.

"They have then; and I've my own opinion touching them colts they sold. But I won't say a word against either of them, for a good reason. Because I know they're both after you, like a pair of cats after a young thrush, and I'm a fair fighter and won't say nothing that might be misunderstood, or thought to be jealousy."

"An honest line to take, I'm sure, Sammy."

"Yes—not that I care what they think about me; but I do care what your father thinks, and I wish to God he had a better opinion."

"It ain't you—only your poor health and doubtful future."

"You'd make my future. If I had you, I'd be good for another fifty years, I dare say. And be that as it will, your father ought to set my Uncle Bolt's money against it. An old, childless man and much given to me."

"He may last another ten year, however; and it's the—the unfortunate thing that happens to the men in your family when they get to be twenty-six year old, Sam."

"I'd be good for another fifty year if you took me," he repeated, and Mary changed the subject again.

"D'you believe what they tell about Classenwell pool?" she asked.

"Ess faith. It's gospel truth, I reckon—the Tankerabogus, you mean."

"That it cries out the name of any man or woman, so clear as a bell on Christmas night, if they are going to be took inside the New Year?"

"A terrible, curious mystery, no doubt; but it have happened time and again in living memory. And yet, to look at the water now, you'd think 'twas only a common puddle enough. But it's bewitched for certain and the dark creature lives somewhere far down under. Afore old Easterway went the voice was heard, and same thing before Gammer Nosworthy dropped: and there was a pretty case of a Christmas, seven or eight year ago, when Mrs. Vosper, coming that way home along after four o'clock in the evening, heard the name of Benjamin Vosper spoke out loud thrice. And there Sam. 'Tis putting a pistol to my head and I don't like it. Things have got to be as they will, and I ban't in no crying haste to marry any man. All the same," she added, after a pause, "if my taking you would mean that you was going to live, I'd likely do it—for charity."

Not a fortnight later the great matter of Mary's husband occupied other and more resolute minds, where Warrender and moment of their lives, and immense events would be determined during the next twenty minutes. They knew that both could not marry Mary Durnford and they knew that either would be welcomed as a suitor by Mary's parents. They also believed that she was ready and willing to accept either one or the other, when the opportunity came to do so. They were now about to cast lots for possession of her.

She crouched so still that one might have thought her a stone.

rose a fearful confusion in the poor soul's mind, because, you see, her husband was Benjamin Vosper, and so was her baby. And which was going home? Not till the baby died did the young woman have a minute's peace. And the cruel bad luck was they never got another."

He looked down upon the pool and shook his head.

"Now I'll see you home, Mary. You shall ride my pony, and I do wish to heaven above you'd say 'yes' and save me alive."

"You didn't ought to say it like that, his brother David sat and smoked their pipes after supper and waited for their old mother to go to bed. Presently she prepared to do so, put up her spectacles in their case, laid aside her knitting, wrapped her shawl about her, and took David's arm. The staircase ran down into the kitchen at King Seat farm. It was of stone. David saw his mother to her bedroom door, lighted her candle, kissed her, on the top of her black cap, and then rejoined Warrender.

"Now us'll set about it," he said.

The twins had reached the most critical

No brothers had been better friends, or kept fewer secrets from one another. Warrender understood David's character as well as he understood his own; David knew and heartily admired Warrender's powers and his devious acts to outwit a pony buyer, when the chance offered. Indeed, each had long approved the other's ingenuity in the affairs of life. Therefore, at this great pass, and having regard for the value of the prize, neither trusted the other. It was a duel, conducted with the utmost care and cunning, but no bitterness. Warrender took a paneling which gaped black like the entrance to an underground passage, then at the fortune which lay scattered on the floor beyond the table, and at West's pistol, which lay near the secretary, where Breck's upward blow had sent it. Then he moved closer to Breck, for Breck looked like a man who was ready to kill.

Marie was looking at Breck also, her eyes grown wide and distressed. She leaned over the table. "Monsieur!" she said, both pleadingly and warningly. "Monsieur!"

Breck turned and looked at her, full into her eyes, and Willetts saw his face change. He sought his handkerchief and wiped the blood from his face, then stood perfectly calm, erect, his face like stone, his eyes shadowed and watchful, fixed on West, who was speaking.

FOR, just as the detective had awakened in Willetts, his legal training had asserted itself in Haslett. He was facing West, a judge questioning a criminal. "What have you to say for yourself, West Dunbarton-Kent?" he had asked sternly.

West eyed him coolly. "Very little in extenuation. I had to gamble, even if I hung for it."

"What have you done with your fortune?"

"Mrs. Smith lost it—gambling. When I came into my money I hit on that disguise. It saved West Dunbarton-Kent from getting into trouble. Besides, it was amusing."

Haslett drew a long breath, then went on resolutely, "And finally you took to stealing to provide yourself with money?"

"Exactly. I had only a few thousands left when I built Mrs. Smith's house and dug a cellar against the wall of this cottage." With a backward motion of his head he indicated the hole in the paneling. "There's the entrance to it. I could go in as West Dunbarton-Kent and emerge in the house above as Mrs. Smith. I had planned to get Mrs. Brant-Olwin's jewels. I had to gamble, I tell you!" He showed a flash of emotion.

"Were robbing your aunt and Mrs. Brant-Olwin the only crimes you committed?"

"No. When in college I filched whenever I could do it safely."

"Have you ever had a confederate?"

"Never. No really clever thief ever has."

"Is there any one besides those present who knows of your double life?"

"No one—not to my knowledge." He laughed shortly. "In spite of my good Cousin Breck's conviction that I was keeping a dangerous woman called Smith in my pretty house up there, that I was a bad lot as to women, I've never been guilty of that sort of folly. That's one reason I've never been found out—until I ran afoul of Miss Angouleme. How long she has played me I don't know. I fancy she made the great discovery some time this evening; hence this dénouement."

AT mention of Marie's name Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent suddenly heaved herself up from her chair. She was shaking as from palsy and dead white. "West," she said in a voice that filled the room, "as you will answer before God some day, tell me what you have meant by your conduct to this child? You begged her to marry you—and you tried to kill her. You nearly killed her twice. Are you insane? What are you?" Hers was a commingling of horror and anger and a complete inability to understand the man before her.

West remained utterly unmoved, except that he frowned impatiently. "You'll have to have the whole story, I suppose, before we can reach any sort of an agreement. I was beautifully brought up, Aunt Bulah—I never gambled until I went to college. It took hold on me. My allowance wasn't enough—I stole so as to be able to gamble. Then I came into my money. I had an object lesson in Colfax—he went the limit openly. I thought it best to walk around the conventions. I hit upon a disguise to protect me when I went on gambling sprees. When the fever gets you, it's worse than the thirst for drink.

"It took me ten years to use up my fortune. I've never been lucky—besides, it cost me a pretty penny to keep Mrs. Smith in the proper style. She was known on every race track and in every fashionable gambling resort in the country. Then I planned to steal a fortune. I knew Mrs. Brant-Olwin and her house, every house here on the north shore, and numbers of houses in town. As Mrs. Smith I bought that strip from Colfax's agent and built my house with its opening into the cottage. Mrs. Smith's house was my real home—I loathed the stiff grandeur of Kent House. I had my pictures and my books and my servants.

"Then Breck came home, and you turned the cottage over to him, and I had to give up the use of this entrance. It was while he lived here that he got the impression that I visited Mrs. Smith secretly—Breck can see in the dark. Well, Bella asked for the use of the cottage in the mornings—she wanted to be near Colfax, of course. Then I asked to set up my table here. That drove Breck out of the place; Bella, too—Bella was afraid I would discover her affair, and Breck, like all converts to a religion in which they haven't been reared, detested what he called my 'loose living'; he thought I wanted to be near Mrs. Smith. He talked of 'the danger of such a woman as Mrs. Smith,' and I told him to mind his own business. I knew he was too much of a Dunbarton-Kent ever to tattle to you, and, as he was clear off the track, it didn't worry me particularly. We had a thorough detestation of each other, though. I'd always hated him.

"I didn't lie about my inventing. I've always wanted to be an inventor, but the gambling fever got me too often. I had the cottage back then, and I did try to work, but I was down to my last cent. Then came the chance for your hundred thousand as well as the pearls. You were, all of you, determined to think Breck the thief—with his record, what use was there of his denying it? I had counted on that; for, you see, it was I who had relieved Breck's partner at the college party of her pendant. The hue and cry scared me, and I put it in his room, then let the college authorities worm Breck's history out of me. It was effective—'once a thief, always a thief.'

"You are—" The woman struck at Marie's mouth before her lips had formed the third word.

"I WANTED Breck to clear from Kent House. But he stuck. You didn't want him to decamp with the jewels, try to raise money on them, and get himself jailed and the family disgraced, but certainly you made it a hell for him, with your detectives, and your safeguards; and your offers of a competence and forgiveness if only he would confess and turn the jewels over to you. He simply set his face and waited. It annoyed me, but I wasn't afraid of him, for I knew that he had the outcast's respect for the man who holds an assured position. He might not approve of my morals, but he could no more conceive of my being a burglar than of your being one.

"What worried me was my need of money. Nearly all of your hundred thousand was gone. I'd never played in such bad luck—I lost and lost. I was actually in need of the small sum I got for the tires and tools in your garage; besides, it served my purpose—you would lay the theft to Breck. I had the jewels, but I didn't dare to dispose of them or attempt another burglary. It was on my return from my last disastrous spree that I encountered Marie Angouleme on the train. For a few minutes I thought a Brent-Olwin detective had me. Then I knew my mistake and cleared from the train as soon as I could.

"Then, by a queer chance, she came to Kent House. I guessed who she was and why she stared at Breck; either she had seen Mrs. Smith on the train, or she had seen her elsewhere. I knew she was no detective, but exactly what she said she was—house myself. You see, I was born there. I'm one of the Deeping boys. Father sold it last year, I heard, when I got home, and I had a sneaking feeling I wanted to get it back in the family."

"I'm real sorry," I says. "That must be kind of a shock." I couldn't help but think how I'd feel if I was to come back to Waymarsh and find strange folks on my floor. Like ma always said, there's no place like home.

"ALL the way back from China and the world over, thinking of the peace of that place, and it's gone," the young man says, like he was talking to himself.

Well, sir, the whole thing come to me like a flash. 'Twas like an angel with a flaming sword had up and showed me the way. Now I knew why Mrs. Chesterton had come up to this out of the way place to stay. I couldn't figure out that afternoon what on earth she had come there for, if she was waiting for him to come back. Like ma always said, chickens come home to roost. She had known that, probably.

I was scared to say a word for fear of putting my foot in it. I don't know what I should've done if the black girl up to Chesterton's hadn't come crashing through the raspberry bushes. She was all out of breath from running, but it didn't take me a minute to make out something was wrong.

"The lady down at the Deeping house is real sick," I says, running on ahead, without even stopping to put Cinders inside the door. "If you want to come along maybe you could help. There ain't no men folks there."

He run alongside of me quiet and quick, and I was real glad to have his arm in them bad places by the road. The hired girl was coming up behind us, with quick little gasps, like she couldn't take another step.

"Look here," I says, when we got to the door and I saw the light in her fancy brass lamp streaming out the side porch. "Look here, young man, you'd better wait outside till I see what's to be done."

"I'll be awfully glad to serve," he says, making a funny bow, with that light hat of his crost his chest.

So I went in. It was just like I'd thought it would be. The medicine she'd taken for pain, the girl said, was all gone. She was lying there on the big couch, looking like she was really gone this time.

I was so scared I thought my heart'd stop

"I need some one to talk to—I shall go mad unless I do."

beating. There wasn't no time to stop to think, though. I went right out to the stoop and called him.

"I wish you'd come in," I says, quiet and stern. "I want you to see some one."

HE stepped in, like he was used to the house, and come on through. But all the kind of debonair look dropped sudden when he saw her.

"It isn't—it can't be," he says.

"It is, and it can," I tells him, real stern. "And if you ever had a heart in your body you'll run for the doctor. Dr. Miles' house, maybe you remember."

"I do," he says, still staring, fascinated. And like a streak he was gone. I could hear his quick, light footstep down the road as far as my house.

When Dr. Miles come the girl and I were tuckered out. I had done pretty nearly everything I could think of and we hadn't got a sign of life out of her. I was ready to give up. But the doctor is a real quiet man, and he turned us out after he give one look at her.

"I'll tend to this myself," he says. "Mr. Deeping will stay, perhaps. He may be able to help."

Pretty soon the young man come out to the kitchen, where the girl was heating water, and I was sitting, kind of wringing my hands, aimless.

"She's going to live," he says, hushed like. And then, so sudden I was taken all of a piece, he starts to sob. Well, sir, I never had seen a man go on like that before. And it was terrible. Not a sound did he make, just those fierce, awful shakings like he was being wrenched to pieces. I felt like a woman old enough to be his mother might properly step in, so I went over and touched him on the shoulder. "'Tain't going to be no good to her, if you carry on like that," I said, sharp. "What d'you s'pose she did it for, anyway, 'cept for thinking you weren't coming back? Why, she told me as late as this afternoon——"

I didn't get no further.

"Do you mean to say——?" he says, looking at me real wild. "Do you mean to say she forgives—remembers?"

Well, sir, I almost laughed in his face. I guess it must have been a kind of hysteria. I never been that way before nor since.

"Forgives? Remembers?" I says after him, for all the world like a parrot. "Seems to me you two young people needed to have your heads knocked together long ago. One goes all over the world to forget, and the other comes back to a little town in Michigan to see if the other one won't be there."

But he didn't wait to hear what I was saying. He had gone back into the living room, and pretty soon I heard Dr. Miles' automobile chug away, and then just voices.

They didn't need me no more, and the girl was kind of dozing off by the window Cinders was mewing at the door. First time in my life I'd forgotten to lock him in.

MRS. PETER LYONS was at my front door when I come along, with just a fichu thrown over her head, 'count of the night air. She said Mr. Lyons had heard Dr. Miles go by and they figured like I must have had a spell or something, so she run over.

"'Tain't nothing the matter with me," I says, real chipper. "Cinders got out into the road, and I had to go down a piece to look for him."

"Yon ain't heard 'a sound?" she says, suspicious.

I lied like a trooper, but I couldn't help mumbling something real low as I followed her into the house. I hope she didn't hear me remark that, like ma always said, truth was stranger than fiction.

THE ROMANCE OF A MILLION DOLLARS

a decided danger to me, nevertheless. I tried to persuade you to turn her off, but you wouldn't. I went away myself, thinking that she would have enough of Kent House in a day or two and leave of her own accord. But when I came back she was still there, and, after talking with her, I knew that she was staying because she had fallen in love with Breck.

"After that I played against heavy odds. I was in danger not only because I might remind Marie of Mrs. Smith but because of Breck. He had acquired the suspicion that Mrs. Smith might have some connection with the thefts. He was watching the cottage and Mrs. Smith's house, doing some detective work of his own. He was certain that Marie was in Mrs. Brent-Olwin's employ, and was afraid that she would try to fix the thefts on him, and as certain that she meant to marry me, so he tried to frighten her away from Kent House in any safe way he could. He decided that the most effective way of scaring her was to act as if he were going to knife me, and also by intimating that my intentions toward her were not of the best, that she was in the utmost danger of some sort.

"That was the way I sized up the situation when I came back, and I thought it would be as well for Mrs. Smith to show herself in her house quite openly, as if afraid of nothing. But I had not calculated on Marie's being abroad that evening. You know what followed: Breck was watching Mrs. Smith, Marie Angouleme was hurt, and you learned of her experience on the train, and, of course, deduced that Mrs. Smith was Breck's confederate. So far I was safe, but I had to get Marie Angouleme away from Kent House, and by some means that would not injure me. I have never had the least desire to marry any woman, least of all Marie Angouleme. A wife would be unendurable. I astounded you by my sudden passion for your little chauffeur—I thought that, if anything, would remove her tactfully from Kent House; a Dunbarton-Kent bent upon a mesalliance such as that would do the trick! But I forgot that you sometimes do unexpected things—you deceived me by a pretended opposition, then actually brought Marie Angouleme into Kent House! I had to keep up the deceit."

Again West laughed shortly. "Then I got interested, not in Marie Angouleme, but in the game I was playing—it's the gamester in me, I suppose—I wanted to win out. She was breaking her heart over Breck, knowing that he was ostracized for some good reason, she didn't know what, yet determined to believe in him. A woman will get a man, if she is determined enough—I meant that she shouldn't get Breck. She began to suspect that Breck was entangled with Mrs. Smith, and that Mrs. Smith was a desperate character and a wholly evil woman was Marie Angouleme's conviction; she was sick with jealousy and disgust, and coming inch by inch to me. I even took her to the cottage here to prove to her what a convenient meeting place Breck and Mrs. Smith had had. Her finding a hair from Mrs. Smith's sable stole and presenting it to Breck, who was in the habit of following us around, was a dénouement for which I had not planned, however—so greatly do the plans of men and mice go astray. Breck is a cautious man, else he would have given his explanation of Marie's find. Instead, he asserted Marie's undying faith in him, which served to bring her nearer to me." He shrugged. "Breck cared no more for Marie Angouleme than I did—he wanted her to clear from Kent House, and hurting her was one way of accomplishing his purpose. He thought that 'the little detective' was trying to fasten something on him, and he taunted her—he thought he was taunting me as well. Undoubtedly I had set up an establishment for Mrs. Smith; nevertheless I was determined to marry Marie Angouleme, she being a later infatuation—such was Breck's judgment of me."

WEST'S look and tone showed scornful amusement. "The situation had its comic side—you, Aunt Bulah, doing all you could to forward a match; Marie Augouleme hanging fire and altogether at sea about everything and every one, and with the best of intentions all around; Bella convinced that Marie Angouleme, Breck, and Mrs. Smith were responsible for the thefts, and that Marie Angouleme had engaged the sympathy and, she was afraid, the affections of Allen Colfax; Breck certain that Marie Angouleme was a spy acting for Mrs. Brant-Olwin and a vital danger to him, and as certain that she was going to marry me; and all three of us, Breck, Bella, and I, bent upon the difficult task of driving Marie Angouleme away from Kent House without danger to ourselves. Funny!"

His lips had twisted in a smile. Then he grew grave. "Meantime I was desperate for money. It was a big relief to me when I knew that you were headed in the right direction. The pearls ransomed, I would be safe. Mrs. Smith could disappear forever and some other disguise serve me. Breck could not prove his innocence, you would be absolutely certain that his confederate had double-crossed him and had made off with the money—he would take the sum you would give him and clear from Kent House—he would never jeopardise his heirship by making a public row. And Marie Angouleme would have no hold on me—I could discredit her. I had spent a few hours over her trunk. The cellar of my house is damp and I had had the pearls hidden there for weeks, wrapped in chamois skin and cotton wool. I put the wrappings and one ring into her trunk. You might lay the thing to Breck, but Haslett would not: he never had any faith in Marie Angouleme. With five hundred thousand in my pocket, I, too, could lose faith in my fiancée. I would be done with Marie Angouleme—I would have won."

Throughout he had addressed himself to Mrs. Dunbarton-Kent, had looked only at her. Now he turned to Marie, who still clung to the table, silent and motionless as were the others. His bow and his smile were ironical. "As it has turned out, I have lost and you have won, Marie Angouleme. All the detectives and all the thieves in the world, rolled into one, are not the equal of one perfectly well intentioned and blundering young woman."

THERE was as complete a silence after West's brazen confession as there had been after their recognition of him. His utterly callous, perfectly assured recital was almost as astounding a revelation as the metamorphosis of Mrs. Smith into West Dunbarton-Kent.

paneling which draped black like the entrance to an underground passage, then at the fortune which lay scattered on the floor beyond the table, and at West's pistol, which lay near the secretary, where Breck's upward blow had sent it. Then he moved closer to Breck, for Breck looked like a man who was ready to kill.

Among those present at the rail when the boat moves from the slip are the Crosby twins (in the center of the group). They look alike to most people, although at home in Racine one is known as the pretty twin and the other as the not-so-pretty twin. Even with that to go by people sometimes confuse the two. The twins are being taken abroad by their parents to make a tour of the battlefields of France and, oh, what a jolly time they will have, for at home or abroad Delight and Lydia Crosby are regular little romps! The young lady with the flag and the dressed up Kewpie doll is Miss Maybelle Diamond of Rollins, Ohio, and she, too, is bound for France. Maybelle will know every man on the boat after the first six hours. Maybelle's mamma, Mrs. Roscoe Diamond, stands just to the left of Maybelle. The two young men to the left of the pretty—or is it the other way round?—Crosby twin, are hurling heavy pleasantries at friends on the pier. "Herb, here, will be feeding the fishes pretty soon," chortles Herb's friend, Bud. "Herb's going to be one sick boy!"

"Bon voyage from the boys in the office."

The friends who arrived too late to board the boat. "I told you," Mrs. Wray is saying frigidly, "we'd never be on time if we took a street car! Now you see."

"All visitors ashore" has sounded in the panic stricken ears of Cousin Lou Stollwerck, and here she is completely lost in a maze of corridors below decks, with no one to save her from being carried straight off to Europe.

"Now, Carrie, if you will only give up to it and nibble cracked ice and ship's biscuit the very moment you feel squeamish, you'll be all right, no matter how rough it is."

What do you think The Tribune's new building will be like?

AS you know, awards amounting to $100,000.00 will be made by The Tribune for designs of the most beautiful building in the world. This offer has aroused much comment, which is not confined to the architects. "The subjects you reproduce," writes F. T. W., "are fine, but I foretell that The Tribune monument will easily surpass them all." Another Tribune reader, T. C. C., suggests the Cathedral of Antwerp as a model, so we reproduce it—at the right. What's your opinion? Do you think a perfect expression of journalistic achievement can be made architecturally? Write to the Architectural Editor. Give him your ideas on The Tribune's proposed new home!

The Cathedral of Antwerp

This building, one of the most beautiful in the world, is not presented as something to be imitated or copied, but for "inspiration by comparison." We review all the fine buildings in the world, and we say, "We shall endeavor to make ours more beautiful than any of them!" That is the spirit which inspired Jan Amel, when he began work on the Antwerp Cathedral in 1352, and thus was beauty achieved —in the sheer sweep of the tower as it fairly sings its way upward, in the exquisite handling of the decoration, in the superb mastery manifested in the design as a whole.

Our Escape from the Bolshevists

by Beulah Artsimovitch

Being the True Account of the Flight from Red Russia of a Russian Noble, His American Wife, and Their Daughter

BEULAH HOBBS ARTSIMOVITCH, the author and heroine of this adventure, is a native of California. In 1910 she was married to Vladimir Artsimovitch, then Russian consul in San Francisco. After his appointment expired they went first to Berlin and afterwards to St. Petersburg, taking with them their daughter Miriam.

Vladimir Artsimovitch rose rapidly in the Russian diplomatic service. He was principal assistant secretary for foreign affairs at the outbreak of the war, and held his post until the Russian revolution.

The story of this battle against the power of soviet terrorism is an epic of American womanhood.

Thrown Into Prison.

THE blow struck us on the 2d of June, 1919. The English were shelling Krasnaiagorka—a fort near Petrograd—and the distant thunder of the guns sounded like delicious music in our ears. Every gunshot seemed to make a breach in the barriers between us and the free world beyond. Freedom!

In the morning Miriam, as usual, came to say good-by to me, dressed to go to the Danish Red Cross, on whose behalf she distributed small portions of white flour, butter, and sugar several times a month to the old women of Petrograd, who formerly lived in one part of the famous Smolny, now the abode of the most vicious bolsheviks. There, during the reign of the emperors, a permanent home had been given to old gentlewomen, widows of officials, or those who had spent their lives in the service of the state—teachers, etc.

When the bolsheviks chose to make their headquarters at Smolny all these old ladies—some of them very old—were turned out, not allowed to take any of their belongings, and put into almshouses with absolutely no comforts. Most of them finally died of starvation.

The day passed. Miriam did not return for luncheon or for dinner. In the afternoon I received a message warning me not to go near the Red Cross, as the bolsheviks were making a search there. I was not especially worried by this news. I thought they would confiscate money and provisions, but I could never admit the possibility of their arresting the Red Cross staff.

As the evening came on and my daughter did not return—it was already 9 o'clock, but still beautiful and sunny with the midnight sun, which remains light all night—I decided to take a walk in front of the house and took my little dog, Krassavitza, with me.

Just as I was leaving the house I received a second telephone message, telling me on no account to go near the Red Cross, as every one who went near it had been arrested. Something very serious was going on that night in Petrograd. The bolsheviks had decided to lay hands on all the "bourgeois" and foreigners they could find in foreign consulates and organisations like the Red Cross.

Next door to where we lived was a mansion belonging to a wealthy Greek subject, an old lady and a friend of ours to whom Miriam used occasionally to take white flour. Part of this house was occupied by the Greek consulate. Passing the door of this house, my impulse was to stop and inquire about the old Greek lady, as she had lately been seriously ill.

I rang the bell and was greeted by two soldiers, who led me in quite politely and asked me to wait. I sat down on a bench in the hall, where several other ladies whom I knew by sight were waiting like myself. I suspected that something was wrong and tried to persuade the soldiers to allow me to go home and get my passport. They only laughed and told me to keep silent. They themselves lounged around, smoking cigarets, jeering at our distressed looks, but otherwise left us in peace.

A handsome white marble staircase led up from the hall. At the top was a gallery and there I suddenly saw my daughter dressed as she was in the morning in a thin white skirt and a silk jumper, standing in a crowd of people, all talking excitedly.

Mme. Artsimovitch in court costume.

It was a puzzle to me. I could not understand how or why she was there, instead of at the Red Cross. Finally two other soldiers took us upstairs and then my daughter told me how she had been arrested in the morning. As she was passing the house of the old Greek lady she thought she would stop to tell her that she could not bring any flour for some time, as none had arrived from Denmark. Soldiers who opened the door took her by the arms and dragged her into the house. There were already many other persons arrested in the same way and they had all been locked up in a small room since 9 o'clock in the morning with nothing to eat.

Our passports and papers were taken from us and there was no question of letting us go. We were to be taken before the extraordinary commission on the Gorokhovaia street. Trusting that the misunderstanding which had caused our arrest would there be cleared up and we should be set free, my one great worry was that my husband, seeing that I did not return, would search for me and also fall into the same trap. Discovering who he was, the commission would certainly keep him.

IT was already late. It must have been after 1 when they told us to prepare to leave for the prison.

Some of the arrested had dogs with them. The order was given for the dogs to be put on the street. Miriam held Krassavitza fast under her arm, half hiding her. We were put into a large motor lorry, which was waiting for us at the door, guarded by soldiers with guns pointed at us. There were so many arrested that we could not sit down and we all stood up in the lorry. Just at the moment we were ready to start my husband, seeing us from his windows, came rushing toward us and was at once seised and dragged into the house. We then started off, not knowing what his fate would be.

The automobile made for the quay; our first thought was that we were to be taken over the bridge to the fortress of Peter and Paul. This thought made me turn cold, as people who crossed that bridge seldom or never returned. But we passed it and went on and on (it seemed an eternity) and finally reached a prison in the Shpalernaia street. The gates opened, then closed on us, and we knew that we were state prisoners.

We were taken into a large room. One candle was burning. At a desk a man was sitting whom Miriam recognized as a former soldier in one of the crack Guards regiments, and she had the courage to ask him if he were not that man. He answered, "Yes."

He took down our names and I was the first to be searched. I handed him the money and small bits of jewelry I had with me. Miriam was the next to be examined. She had on a small string of pearls and some gold bangles. I felt sorry that she should lose them, but to my surprise I suddenly saw she had nothing.

Presently while they were searching her I found all her trinkets in my pocket. With all those men standing around she had had the presence of mind to put everything into my pocket directly I had been searched.

Then came a terrible moment when our fates were to be decided. Were we to be separated from each other? What would they do to us?

THE commandant of the prison strode in. We recognized him as a sailor who had once been on the emperor's yacht, Standard. Tall, big, with a face like stone, he was dressed in a black leather coat and leather trousers—costume worn by all the smart commissaires of the bolsheviks.

He shouted at us, "What are you doing here?"

Miriam answered, "It is for you to tell me."

"If you will visit palaces you must expect to end here," was his retort. Then seeing the dog under M[illegible] arm he exclaimed in derision, "What am I going to do with that?"

"You are to do nothing with that," Miriam answered.

"All right. Take it upstairs."

Through long, dark, underground passages where air and light had never penetrated we were led on and on up and downstairs until finally we stopped before a heavy iron door with a small opening in it. The guard who took us there put us into the cell and locked the door. We were in a prison cell.

We were shut off from the world. Our cell was small, seemingly intended for one person, with a wooden frame for a bed, and on it a sack of straw, on which we both had to sleep. Stunned, I sat on the bed and told Miriam that I could not breathe. "You can breathe," she said. "Other people have breathed and lived here in this same cell for years."

Years! I thought I could not bear it even a day.

There was no sleep for us. We could not close our eyes. Miriam besides was very hungry. She had had nothing to eat since her breakfast in the morning.

At 7 o'clock in the morning the guard rapped on the little window and passed in a bucket containing yellowish colored water which they called coffee and a small piece of black bread. We ate and drank, feeling quite starved, but it was neither nourishing nor palatable.

Then we rested. Miriam tried to read to me, but we were too nervous either to talk or take any interest in what we read. So the hours dragged until 6 o'clock, when the food was brought. It consisted of warmish water with something floating in it, either bad smelling dried fish or cabbage and potato peelings. On such food we should have soon died of starvation if we had not been able to receive measured food from home.

We were allowed every day to take a little walk in a courtyard, but when the moment came for us to return to our cell the horror of it was so great that I would have rather remained there than take the monotonous exercise. Besides, one met in that courtyard women with such pallid, intense, suffering faces that it was more than I could endure to look at them.

THIS continued for ten days. And all this time I had no idea of my husband's fate.

On the tenth day at 8 o'clock in the eve-

STRANGER THAN FICTION

by Mabel McElliott

There Was a Buzz of Gossip About the Neighborhood When the Beautiful and Mysterious Mrs. Chesterton Made Her Appearance

WHEN I first come to know her I thought her face was like a mask—not like them there Benda masks a girl danced with up to Detroit last fall, but more like something made of white paper, with starey eyes and black lines in it. That was what I thought when she first come to our town.

I was never one to mind my neighbors' business, I will say. I always held a person had enough to do to bother with his own troubles, and Lord knows I had had enough. That may be why I kept kind of quiet when the other women in the town was worrying about why she didn't talk about herself and where did she come from, and all that.

I recollected a time when I had sorrows of my own to hide from folks that were more curious than kind, although they were that, too, and I kept a quiet tongue in my head. Like ma always said, I tended to my own. And I expected others to do the same.

But, as I say, I couldn't help, no more than the others, remarking to myself how kind of tragic like she looked, for all the world like a dog that had been kicked. You don't get such an expression in your eyes for nothing, I says to myself.

But when we was down to Ag Merritt's for the sewing society, and they all started clacking, along with their needles, about Mrs. Chesterton, and what she wore, and the way she lived, off to herself, like a nun or something, with only that fat black woman to talk to, day in and day out, I just sewed real hard on a flannel shirt and kept a looking like I was interested but not devoured by my curiosity. Like ma always said, the wise one is the still one.

Besides, I was probably sorrier for the poor thing than any of the others, though they was awful good women, with clean, decent homes and a hand out for the friendless, as you might suspect, from the sewing society and all. It was just that this here Mrs. Chesterton "hadn't responded," as Mrs. Peter Lyons said, when they come to call.

"WHO'S she think she is, anyways?" Mrs. Lyons says to Ag Merritt. "I put off my baking just so's to go down there and call, and the girl come to the door and says she's out. 'Sif I didn't know she wasn't! My Eveleen was laid up with the grip that week, and she was on the back parlor sofa all morning. Guess we knew Mrs. Chesterton couldn't have come out of the door without us seeing her."

I knew something about that thing myself, considering I'd been in Mrs. Chesterton's living room at the identical moment, holding one of them weentsy bottles of smelling salts like they have in Bodd & Armistead's windows to her nose. I'd been passing by, on my way to market, when the hired girl run out the side gate—black as the ace of spades, she was, and her eyes rolling in her head, and grabbed my arm. Her lady was awful sick, she said, and the poor creature was scared out of her wits, so't there was nothing for me to do but folly her in, though dear knows I didn't want to be no intruder.

But fools rush in, like ma always said!

Anyways, I went. Ag Merritt, I ain't got the least doubt, would have stopped to admire the handsome rugs and things the poor thing had around her hallways. It made me think for all the world of one of them apartments in the picture shows, it was so grand. But, of course, you can imagine I didn't have time for nothing but what you might call a passing glance.

Mrs. Chesterton was laying on one of them big velvet davenports in the setting room. That wasn't the first time I thought her face was like a mask cut out of white paper, but maybe with her eyes closed she was more like that than ever. Anyways, she looked like she was dying.

"Get me some water," I says, real sharp, to that black girl. "Have you got some spirits of ammonia?" I says. Then I saw the poor thing's heart was fluttering like it would burst right out of her body, and I was real scared.

Well, the girl brought me the things, and between us we got her back. Seems like she often had them spells, the girl says, but this was worse than usual.

She set up after a while and looked at me real hard. I was glad she didn't smile, like I've seen so many women do when coming to out of a faint, 'sif they thought it was the thing to do, like saying "Where am I?" Just her not doing that kind of convinced me she was real, and no pose[illegible] my niece Amantha says her English teacher is.

"Very kind—very, very kind," she says, so't I could hardly hear it. "Sorry to be so much bother."

"'Tain't no bother at all," I told her, real hearty, like I meant it, and not just to be polite. "I'm kind of used to seeing folks in spells like that." Like ma always said, 'taint so much what you say as the way you say it.

The poor thing looked like she wanted to cry but didn't dare. She was so kind of pitiful, like a draggy gray kitten you've made up your mind to drown, that I just leaned over and patted her on the shoulder. Most days I should've been mortified to death, with my old gingham house dress, and all, and the hat I wear in the back yard, and her in gray crêpe de chine, but somehow that didn't seem to make no difference. Like ma always said, handsome is as handsome does.

"Maybe I could make you a cup of tea," I says, thinking to myself that probably that hired girl didn't know no more than a baby how white people liked their meals fixed. But she just kind of shook her head and made as if she would like to lie down again, so I got up to go.

"If there's anything I can do," I says, "I'll be awful glad to stay round. Dr. McGeegan is a fine man. Ma never would have nobody else," I told her. But she said she didn't need no doctor, that she'd be all right just as soon's she rested a while. And she was "eternally grateful."

So it wasn't much wonder I kept my mouth shut down to Merritt's that day. What they didn't know wouldn't hurt them, like ma always said. And if Mrs. Peter Lyons, and Ag, and the rest of them had the least idea I'd ever set foot inside that house I'd 'a been mobbed with questions. And I didn't feel like I wanted to gossip about the poor thing.

AFTER that I saw her once or twice down on Main street. She didn't go out often, but it just happened I bumped into her in Bodd & Armistead's when I was buying some writing paper for my niece Amantha's birthday. Pink, she wanted. I never did see such a girl for putting on style, but, like ma always said, youth will have its fling.

Anyways, this day she stopped me by the soap counter and made as if she wanted to talk. I was real surprised, and kind of pleased about it, too, seeing she had always kept to herself and all. I could see Mrs. Lije Armistead, who was waiting on the silks, just a-popping with curiosity behind the counter.

"I thought you'd be stopping in to see me one of these days," she says, in that real pretty voice. It was kind of like the leading lady in that stock company down to Detroit last winter that my niece Amantha was so crazy about. Something like that, only different.

"Why, I been real busy," I says to her, hoping she wouldn't notice the spot on my nun's veiling shirtwaist that I'd just slipped on to come down to the store and wishing I'd changed to my black taffeta like Amantha wanted me to. As ma always said, you never know who you'll meet.

"I do wish you'd drop in," she says to me, looking like she meant it and smiling, "for tea some afternoon—won't you?"

Well, I tell you, I was as excited as I could be when Mrs. Lije came round to the stationery. I couldn't hardly have told you whether Amantha liked pink or lavender, and I wound up by getting pale blue, which did just as well in the end, anyways, as it happened. It seemed like I was living in an English novel, or something, going out to tea in the afternoon and all. Even people up to Detroit last winter never did that, although some of the ladies around where my niece Amantha boarded did have kaffee klatches now and then. People in Waymarsh ain't so great for tea, I've noticed, except maybe for dinner, although the men folks like a strong cup of coffee every time.

Anyways, I went around the next Tuesday at 4 exactly, like she said. I got the black taffeta out for that, and I was kind of glad I had ordered them new heavy black shoes from Mears & Slowduck. It seemed like I ought to be all dressed up, like I was going to a party or something.

She made off as if she was awful glad to see me when I come in. She was setting there on the velvet davenport, with a lot of books and papers around her, and she put them all away kind of hurried. It was good of me, she says, to come and cheer her up, and when she rung the little funny bell on the table the black girl come in and she said we'd have some tea, please, and would I have tea or lemon?

Well, sir, we might have been in one of them there plays of the stock company's from the way they carried on. The girl come in, wheeling one of them little carts, with a silver pot, and one of them glass dishes with divisions in it, like ma's, full of store cherries, and cloves, and lemons, and things, and a silver pot, and a silver jug with hot water, and a little wooden basket with cakes, and dear knows what all.

I felt like I was living in a play myself, when she dished up the tea, and put a little of everything in it, and dropped in some lump sugar with one of them cute little tong things. It tasted kind of funny, without no condensed milk in it, like I was used to, but I drunk it up anyway, and it was real nice with the little cakes.

I WAS just wondering if it would be polite to fish up my cherry when she leans over to me on the sofa and says: "Miss Murrin, I'm awfully glad you came today. I need some one to talk to. I think I shall go mad unless I do."

Well, I just turned around and looked at her, sympathetic, and the poor thing burst right out crying. If ever a person was the picture of woe, it was her that day. She had circles under her eyes as if she hadn't slept in a week and her pretty hair was kind of piled up any which way, like she didn't care.

"It's my husband," she says to me, breathless. "My husband. I've got to tell you about him. You seem so kind."

You could have knocked me over with a feather. We'd all kind of figured he was dead, leastways I had, and to hear her talk about him that way was real surprising.

"Nobody knows," she says. "Nobody knows a thing about it but me. That's why it's so hard to bear. Like a sore—that festers. You see, he is alive. Somewhere. I don't know."

Her words just kept tumbling out, like she couldn't keep it to herself no longer. They had been married just ten days, she says, when some one come to her with a terrible story about him. It was some one she knew real well—one of her woman friends. She was real proud and high strung, and she didn't even give him a chance to explain, just went off and left the house without leaving a note or anything. She had to think, she said, and she couldn't face him then.

After a while he found out where she was and begged to come—tried to call her up on the phone, and things like that. She just kind of turned to stone and told the hired girl not to let anybody in—not to let him talk to her.

FINALLY, one day, he managed to see her. They were both real young, she says, and awful nervous and mad. The upshot of it was he went off in a temper, without explaining, and, though she wanted to, she didn't call him back. He was in a tea business, or something like that, and first thing she knew he'd gone off bound for some outlandish place in China.

Well, sir, she just up and after him with this hired girl. In San Francisco she was taken with a terrible fever (she had been pretty sick right along) and all her hair come out. That sickness lasted six or seven weeks, and when she got over it she was too weak to do anything but lay still and let things kind of drift. She'd lost all track of him.

"Sometimes I think I shall just go mad, sitting here going over it all," she says to me, tragic like. "We went out to Shanghai three months later, when I was able to travel. He was not there. The business had been sold, his manager said. He did not know where Noel had gone. He had ordered all mail to be sent back to his father's house in New York."

The worst of it all was, she says, that now she knew it didn't matter the least bit whether the story the woman come and told was true or not. Whatever he done was past, she said, and if she hadn't been so spoiled and young she would have realized it.

After I'd kind of murmured here and there, telling her how sorry I was and how I was sure everything'd be all right in time, we got around to talking calmer, about the neighbors and so on.

"They don't like me, do they?" she says, pouring me my third cup of tea. "Why is it, Miss Murrin? Not one of them has been disinterested and kind, like you. Why? Do they think I'm a woman with a past?" And when she smiled I saw real sudden what kind of a pretty girl she must've been, with them big gray eyes and everything.

Well, of course, I couldn't tell her that was just what they did say! Poor thing, she had enough to worry about without any of the Waymarsh talk bothering her.

SOMEHOW I couldn't get her and her story out of my mind that night. I set up, reading the weekly paper, long after supper, and it must've been half past nine at the least when I thought I'd go up to bed. Cinders, my gray cat, was arching his back real angry out in the summer kitchen when I put the butter out, and I just had a sort of scared feeling for a minute. 'Taint like me a bit to be scared. Like ma always said, I didn't know what nerves was.

I went to the door of the summer kitchen and looked out. It was real black. You couldn't see your hand before you. But I says, real brave, "Who's there?"

I liked to dropped when a man's voice come back at me, real deep and quiet like. "I'm looking for the old Deeping place," it says, and before I had time to get over the trembling feeling a man come out of the shadows and looked at me.

Well, you could have told right off he was somebody, as ma would say. He was a tall fellow, with them queer kind of light clothes the summer boarder down to Amantha's house wore. Palm Beach, they call them. And he was a-holding one of them light hats in his hand. "I'm sorry if I frightened you," he says, taking another step. "I got in on the nine o'clock train, you see, and there wasn't a taxi at the station—not one. I used to know the way long ago, so I tried it this time. Hope you didn't think it was a second story man."

I had to take two real long breaths before I answered him. "The Deeping place is just down the road a small piece," I says between gasps. "Yes, sir, you did give me a scare. I ain't used to people round this yard at night, and it gives a person a queer feeling."

"The Deeping place," he went on quick, as if I hadn't said nothing. "It's empty, I suppose."

"Why, no, it ain't," I says. "There's a lady been living there since early spring. A lady come up from Chicago, with her hired girl."

"O," he says, and looked like he was disappointed. "I'd been hoping to take that

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE FAT PEOPLES REDUCING CLUB.

BY Wm. DONAHEY.

THE Doctor's office was located on the first floor of the old cigar box, which had been made into a hospital by the Teenie Weenies. Here the little Doctor kept office hours three afternoons a week and prescribed for Teenie Weenies who were in need of his help. The Teenie Weenies were most healthy, so the Doctor had an easy time taking care of them, for most of their troubles were merely stubbed toes, a cut or scratch, and an occasional toothache. The Dunce was considered the Doctor's main patient, and his trouble was most always the tummy ache from eating too much.

One afternoon Mrs. Lover called at the office. She was gowned in a pretty wash dress with spotlessly clean collar and cuffs, a tiny handkerchief so clean it fairly hurt the eyes to look at it, and a bit of powder on her round little nose.

"Well, madam, what can I do for you?" said the Doctor, setting out a tiny chair for the little lady. "Are the twins well?"

"O, yes, quite pert," answered Mrs. Lover.

"Mr. Lover is in good health?" questioned the Doctor anxiously.

"Quite," smiled the little woman.

"You are looking well," said the Doctor.

"Yes, I'm looking well and I'm feeling pretty well, b-b-b-but, Doctor, I'm too fat," cried the visitor. "I'm as fat as a toad and I want to reduce. I weigh five and a half ounces. O, Doctor, what can I do to lose some of this flesh?"

"Well," answered the Doctor, twiddling his tiny watch chain, "you can get some thinner by dieting and exercising. You'll have to leave off eating potatoes and sweets, white bread, beans, and frog ham. You will have to take long walks every day and not drink water with your meals, and above everything else you must not eat puddings, pies, and cakes."

Poor Mrs. Lover felt bad over what the Doctor told her, for she dearly loved all the most fattening food, but she made up her mind that she would follow his advice, for she wanted to be thin and fashionable like the Lady of Fashion.

For several days the little woman never touched a bite of fattening food. She took long walks and it seemed that she was really losing flesh.

Several other Teenie Weenies who were quite fat took a great interest in Mrs. Lover's attempt to grow thin, and soon Sally Guff, the Policeman, and the General were dieting and joining in on the long walks.

They called themselves the Fat People's Reducing club, and they tried to get Gogo, the colored Teenie Weenie, who was quite plump, to join, but that little chap would have nothing to do with them.

"No, sah!" Gogo told them when they asked him to join the club. "De Lord done make me fat and I's not gwine to trifle wid his doin's."

Every day the four little folks would take long walks, and they generally made their way through a certain yard that lay near the rose bush, for there was a great pile of sand in that yard, and the Doctor told them that climbing hills was good for reducing.

This sand pile belonged to a little boy and girl, and if they had looked carefully they might have seen the tiny footprints of the four fat Teenie Weenies.

After three or four weeks of dieting and walking the General and the Policeman decided to stop, but Mrs. Lover and Sally Guff kept on. At the end of another week Sally Guff stopped, and poor Mrs. Lover was all that was left of the Fat People's Reducing club.

After a few days of walking all by herself the little lady made up her mind that she would get weighed and see how much she had reduced.

In one of the big houses near the rose bush there was a tiny pair of letter scales, and to this place Mrs. Lover set out with Sally Guff as companion, for it was quite impossible to stand on the scales and read one's own weight.

The scales stood on a desk, to the top of which the little women soon climbed, and Mrs. Lover promptly mounted the scales.

"H-h-h-how much have I lost?" cried Mrs. Lover anxiously. "I—I—I weighed five and a half ounces before I started to reduce. How much do I weigh now?"

"S-s-six ounces," said Sally Guff, squinting at the scales. "Just six ounces."

"O, dear me!" wailed Mrs. Lover, and the tears rolled down her plump little cheeks. "I believe Gogo was right. You can't trifle with nature."

NEVER WERE SPORTS CLOTHES SO VARIED

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THAT we may now be labeled as frankly as our limousine or our luggage is indicated by the figure at the left, who shows on her sports frock of white flannel with its side plaited skirt the new conceit of a monogram, here worked out in blue and red silk. Next, the vogue of the smart little jacket is recognized by a coat of tan pongee in natural color bound with black cire ribbon and allied with frock and hat of the pongee. The smart motor coat and hat are of tan suede, and the cretonne wrap, which has scored such a notable success this summer, is represented by a long coat of tan cretonne with design of red and blue. This is bound with black cire braid. The figure in the foreground wears a knicker costume of oyster white linen combined with black and white striped silk shirtwaist, black and white plaid golf hose and shoes in the same tones.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Parodying a certain well remembered magazine contribution entitled "I Hate Men," most of us sing as follows:

I hate black crepe capes trimmed with monkey fur or fringe or with braided or stuffed collars, or with spirals or roses—in fact, with anything.

I hate those everlasting draped turbans. The chic of the sheik no longer gives my consciousness any pleasant stimulus.

I hate all hats with streamers dangling from the side. Particularly do they inspire repugnance when worn on a mere slip of a girl of a hundred and eighty pounds.

We have, in fact, taken up so many modes of dress with such passionate fervor that the luncheon hour at any fashionable restaurant makes us thirst for some brand new manifestation of the mode. And it is only the country club which convinces us that modern woman has any mind of her own about clothes. Here we do find a greater variety than has ever before been vouchsafed us, and it needs only a glance at this page to show us that we are not committed to the totem-pole slip-on and the turned back hat of which I have spoken.

First of all, we find at the left a white flannel frock with a monogram on the bodice. The monogram, which is here carried out in red and blue silk, is one of the ideas borrowed from Paris, where this insignia is affirmed on blouses, sports frocks, and what not. The monogram may be worked out either in the center of the bodice, as it is here, or it may occur at the upper right of the front. At all events, it is a smart touch. And for those who do not care to go abroad in the land marked as plain as a limousine or a trunk we add that some floral emblem, particularly the rose, may take the place of the initials. This frock may be worked out in white serge or éponge with equal propriety. With it is worn a white felt hat draped with a man sized handkerchief of white and red.

As we have often affirmed, white rules the waves of the smart seaside place. Your white frock may be of silk or serge or flannel or eponge, and it is nearly always cheered up by some vivid touch of trimming. For example, the white éponge sports dresses are set off with red suede and patent leather and sometimes a touch of brilliant cretonne is applied in motif or binding. Red and white have formed, in fact, a sort of sports trust, and with the white flannel or silk skirt consorts often the red sweater and hat.

Cretonne is certainly one of the most insistent notes of summer sports wear. First of all, there are the smart little dresses belted in black patent leather or set off with a touch of black ribbon. These are eminently smart. But they are not so spectacular or so new as the troop of cretonne wraps. We may have these in jaunty little box coats or we may choose to envelop ourselves as thoroughly as the sofa. Thus at the right of the page you see a model of tan cretonne patterned in French blue and red, which was suggested by one of our fashionable New York women at an outdoor festivity. This is smartly bound with black ciré ribbon, and a hat of white felt repeats the glossy black note.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the little jacket of this season. So powerful is its influence that many a woman has almost renounced the sweater in favor of one of these little box affairs of printed silk, cretonne, printed cotton, or one of the many novelty fabrics. I have already referred to the vogue of the matelassé or gauffré jacket of this description, but in view of the tremendous success scored by the combination of either white matelassé jacket with black skirt or vice versa at the Paris races one cannot go amiss by reiterating that here we come upon one of the smartest notes of summer dressing. In fact, many women just returning from abroad are sunning this style at Newport and Bar Harbor.

On the page we illustrate the little jacket in a natural colored pongee, the cachet of which is estabished by broad bands of black ciré ribbon. Revers of the pongee link more completely the association of this wrap with the frock of the same pongee worn beneath. A hat of the dress fabric is the final touch.

For the purposeful sports woman who wants to golf, hike, play tennis, etc., with the minimum effort we suggest the smart oyster white knicker suit with its sleeveless jacket worn by the lady whose sportsmanlike instincts are here sublimated in cutting the cake. With this is worn a black and white striped silk shirtwaist with four-in-hand of the same tones and with checked black and white golf hose terminated by black and white shoes.

The last model is a stunning tan suede motoring coat from one of the French designers with hat to match.

Fashions Beauty Contests

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

NICE GOWNS FOR NICE DAYS.

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—Among the big catastrophies of history, along with Pompeii and the rest, I put down the drag day race, which started out in sunshine and ended in sudden storm. The destruction was something terrible among the lovely costumes that were mown down. They dissolved, they wrinkled up. They warped and spotted and "ran." They wilted and gently curled up and died. Women's faces were covered with the lavenders and the reds that dripped from off their hat crowns; their necks were printed with the startling patterns from the materials. The mortality list among the dresses will never be known. "In the midst of life we are in death," so the bell seemed to say that tolled the end of the races—the bell that had so gayly proclaimed them ever so few hours before.

Charming women on tallyhoes crawled to the cover of the under seats, and the men, scarcely less expensively dressed, as in all the great crises of life, gave the women the places, while they stood out in the rain. The gentlemen drivers didn't budge, but were like the captains going down with their ships. The lackeys in pink topped boots, dripped desolation and despair, but they moved not.

Among the well known costumes that now belong with the ages were those shown above. They had come so jauntily to the merry making, over the brilliant Boulevard des Champs-Elysees, which had been carefully sanded for them, so that they might not even experience the hazard of a slight skidding in case a few light drops of rainfall made their course slippery. They flaunted so insolently through the tree lined roads of the Bois and through the lanes of gaudily uniformed policemen! And now they are mostly numbered among the unrecognizable. Imagine, for instance, what a sudden cloudburst would do to costume number three. The whole thing made itself into thin air into which it vanished like Hamlet's father's ghost. It had been so charming in its freshness! A skirt round and full and pulsating with life, and trembling nervously with each soft breath of breeze; ornamented in a huge, round design of the most delicate of hand made laces and surmounted by one of those moderately tight bodices that have been knocking at the door of fashion for a very long time. At last it has gained admission.

It appeared in this costume, bounded across its 1830 neck line with rows of ecru lace, two little rows of which round the waistline served also as girdle. That useful article which the lady holds in her right hand uplifted as a protection against the elements was numbered among the first casualties. It was a parasol of the same lavender organdie, made to represent a doll, with its head as the pinnacle of the parasol. Its full skirts, much in the same silhouette of the dress beneath, represented the protective part of the sunshade. The mauve velvet hat under it, which was trimmed in canterbury bells made out of feathers, now also is laid to rest—but not before carrying its message to a waiting world that feathers would be used broadcast as trimming under all conceivable disguises, even to flowers. The doll surmounting that plaything of an umbrella had—before its death—red hair. But, like most of the other hair in Paris, it must have been doctored, for with the rainfall it "ran."

The second costume also carried its valuable message. You have seen something akin to the outline it displays before. I was telling you that Cheruit was sticking ruffles round the bottom of skirts, the way they used to be worn out in Indiana. Her little conception, launched a few months ago, is "catching on." With the skirts getting fuller this winter—and longer—I shouldn't be surprised if this ruffle might not afford one of the popular devices for getting them fuller still. They are so awfully gauche when full up around the hips, and so uniform—as well as so awfully homely, I think—when they all slope like the one of organdie. The ruffle at least permits that long pillow slip of an outline that everybody loves to wear. The costume before its death was valuable for the other messages it carried. It was made of black lace in chenille over white crepe.

Chenille is very smart indeed. I have a friend who wears a blouse in it made in the line of the "basque" shown in the organdie, and scalloped round the bottom, which falls below the waistline, the scallops and the V neck being outlined in a line of jet. Chenille is rich and softly becoming to the face, like velvet. The skirt ruffle of this dress is of black taffeta. The hat is cloche shaped and lined on the under side of the crown in white crepe. Isn't it wonderful that the French are once more allowing us these soft, light colors next the skin? It is trimmed in a flare of coque feathers and white crepe on the left side.

The first dress carries almost all that is uppermost in the world of fashion today. It is of the crepe de chine imprime, or printed, that is so very much admired. The design is a big black pattern on a white ground. Across the back of the shoulders a little cape is stitched in dead black crepe, hemstitched round the edge. The ceinture is of this same dead blackness. It ties in a puff on the left hip, and falls into long ends down the length of the skirt.

The fourth lady was so very smart! Don't you think her silhouette attractive? She made a striking ensemble with her slender grace, her red parasol, her yellow hat with its long, low lying windmill of a bow, her black crepe de chine gown, and her wonderful cape, an end of which she has thrown over her knee. You observe her holding it there. This cape is of white crepe with a monkey collar, and as a border to the mantle it is sewed in strips of black velvet ribbon. Those rows of stuffs—sometimes fur on a light material of a contrasting color are very smart.

Printed crepe in black and white with a cape of dead black crepe across the back and sash of same.

Dress with long straight silhouette finished with deep full ruffles. Costume is of white crepe under black chenille flowers.

Lavender organdie with full skirt and tight 1830 bodice. Parasol made from doll whose skirt is of same silhouette as the one of the costume.

Black crepe de chine dress with cape of white crepe bordered in bands of black velvet and topped with monkey collar.

Announcing OUR AUGUST FUR SALE

BEGINNING MONDAY MORNING

Our new Furs for fall are ready, rich, luxurious, authentic. During August—and August only—we are offering these superb pieces at attractive discounts which make them wonderful values.

Everything points to a great interest in furs. Those who are considering the purchase of a fur should inspect this collection at once. Certainly an opportunity to buy furs at these prices will not occur again this year. We will have quality furs all season, as this is our business—but the discount applies only in August.

Buy quality! A cheap fur is expensive and unsatisfactory. In preparing this collection we have placed the greatest possible emphasis on quality, style and workmanship. In fact, there are but few places where you can find quality, style and workmanship so combined.

Fashion's latest mode in furs shows both the wrap silhouette and the smart straight line, but in nearly every case the coats are longer—some, following the trend in dresses, very much longer. There are Hudson Seal Coats, Black Caracul Coats, Natural Raccoon Coats. Natural Squirrel and Minks—some with collars of the same material and others with contrasting collars of Kolinsky, Marten, Beaver and Squirrel.

Buy furs now! While the assortment is at its best and prices, due to the August discount, lower than they will be again this season.

How I Transformed Ruth Into a Beauty

by Antoinette Donnelly

Note the easy grace with which she now sits.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

FIVE weeks from the beginning of this series on the transformation of Ruth, the young woman pictured here, she could not have assumed the graceful, easy pose she is now wearing. In a previous story I showed her as she appeared when first introduced to me sitting with her shoulders hunched and her hands clutched together in a death grip, a woebegone expression, tense muscled, nervous, awkward and generally morose about life and its neglect of her.

How come this attractive young miss of today?

Step by Step She Improved.

How she added fifteen pounds in five weeks by swimming and deep breathing exercises, by a diet I prescribed for her and by regular sleeping hours I have already told you. How, by developing a pride in her finger nails, she found a more graceful way of holding her hands, since it was no longer necessary now to attempt to hide uncared for nails. How necessary it is to get a good line of coiffure to make a pretty head. How, with the figure new born from the most excellent swimming exercises and deep breathing, gone was the bedraggled frame with rounded shoulders and protruding stomach. How much better she walked and stood and sat with the total disappearance of "nerves," which her unfortunate mental state had plunged her into. All this has already been revealed to you, and her before and after photographs must have been sufficiently convincing.

My experiment with Miss Ruth well proves my theory that women need not be unhappy because of so-called homeliness: that intelligent treatment of one's liabilities in the beauty line added to the assets one is naturally endowed with, the latter played up to their nth degree, cannot but result in an attractive creature.

Beauty Is Based on Health.

If there is anything wrong with the health, that must be remedied first.

Early in her training with me I taught her how to relax by the very simple process of mentally commanding herself to relax. Not even an osteopath can make you do that. He may order you to, but then it is your own command that has to be followed. She practiced seating herself on the mental command: "Relax. Relax every muscle in the body. Relax the mind!" After a couple of lessons she could do it with an ironed out mind and hands falling into an easy position in her lap. So with her walk. She had the ungainly habit of walking with her toes at a distinct outward angle. I made her practice toeing almost straight ahead, which, as well as being the correct method of placing the feet, gives a much more pleasing picture.

Learning a Graceful Walk.

That learned, the relax order was applied to the walk; arms and hands relaxed, hanging easily at the sides, body held up straight, but not rigid; shoulders not forced back, but held with an easy straightness, chest out. She walked the length of the room and back a few times each day to acquire this free and easy motion. Every awkward movement of the body is caused by tight, rigid nerve control. The cure naturally then is to relax the nerves. Handing a book, say, to another person cannot be done gracefully if the hand and arm muscles are taut. Stage stars, of whom grace of movement is required above all other assets, are taught this relaxation principle until it becomes a second nature. It is the secret of grace.

The clothes item Ruth and I left until the last, believing that clothes will not make the woman beautiful unless the basic elements of health and hygiene provide a pleasing background. O, no, not that we underestimate the importance of dress. But what does it avail a woman if she dons fine feathers over an ill nurtured, badly groomed person? Given the opposite, a healthy, wholesome complexion, a fine graceful carriage and the buoyant expression of health—then the fine feathers are what the great artists planned they should be.

Cultivating Proper Taste In Clothes.

Ruth confided to me in the beginning she had some money to spend on dress, but she had the unnappy faculty of always choosing the wrong thing, apparently. The dull black taffeta with most unbecoming neck line and tightened in waist supported her remark.

Together we went on a shopping tour, not a debauch, mind you. Miss Ruth volunteered that she had $100 she could afford to spend for a good outfit. She had a chance to sell her black taffeta to her aunt, which I quickly urged her to do. She was invited to a wedding and needed a dress and hat for that.

In the first place we went there hung a charming pink georgette with rounded neck and low bloused waistline with a large flower at the waist [the dress pictured above] made of the same colored satin petals, a sort of full skirt gathered at the waistline. A model frock it proved to be, marked down to $25. For it we found for $8 a charming hat with drooping brim of pink georgette and trimmed with a big rose made of the goods. A pair of white silk stockings we got for $1.35 and patent leather sandal pumps for $3.95, which were a size longer than her former ones and A width, and what a slender, shapely difference they made in her feet! In this outfit she looked perfectly adorable.

Coming Back to Earth.

To continue our shopping expedition. We bought at a bargain counter the best looking wide blue sailor with drooping brim trimmed with a neat grosgrain band and made of fine, flexible straw, for $1. It was most becoming, youthful and quite smart. This for everyday wear with a two piece navy suit, cape of Poiret twill, and the dress a combination of the twill skirt and embroidered linen blouse, the blouse detachable, so that changes of blouses might be made, if desirable. This dress had the round neck, wide, flowing sleeves and long waist to allow for slight blousing; the cape a full and graceful thing. This was a bargain model, too—$25. Two pairs of black silk stockings at $1 a pair were allowed for this outfit, and as smart a looking young miss as she appeared in it you would have difficulty in finding.

The Budget.

Our total dress expenditure so far was this:

Party dress	$25.00
Party hat	6.00
White silk stockings	1.35
Patent leather shoes	3.95
Blue sailor hat	1.00
Street suit	25.00
Black silk stockings, two pairs	2.00
Total	$64.30

This left Miss Ruth with $35.70. Later she told me she bought a sport skirt to go with the sweater she made herself for $3.50. She had a pretty dotted swiss dress left over from last year, and altogether owned a wardrobe that would carry her anywhere and everywhere for some time to come.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Master Russell felt extremely sympathetic toward his friend, whose father had died when he was a baby.

"Do you ever take flowers to your father's grave?" he asked.

"No," said his friend.

"Well, we take flowers out to my grandfather's cemetery every Sunday," said Russell, "and we have a statue of liberty on my grandfather's grave, too."

Jackie was taking a bath. As she was taken from the tub and rubbed vigorously between the towels she gasped, "Mother, don't rub me so mad."

Martha Anne, a darling 4 year old, is the only child in our building, and we are all exceedingly fond of her and are eager to have her come and spend an hour or two with us. One morning I asked her if she couldn't stop with me awhile, to which she replied:

"I'd like to, but I promised myself to another lady this morning."

We had always owned our home, so when we rented our first house, Bobby caught the idea that when we rented anything we had full possession of it.

One baking day, he and his little sister were quarreling over the frosting dish.

Bobby, wishing to compromise, said, "I'll tell you, Betty, you own it and I'll rent it."

My brother was visiting in the country, and, seeing some feathers scattered in the poultry yard, he asked: "Say, Aunt Stella, can't you do something to keep your hens from unraveling?"

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful."

"Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question, Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

It Can Be Done.

Marriage needn't be a failure. Two people who have chosen each other from the hosts they have known should, if they be wise, be able to make a go of it.

Not that it is always a simple matter. After the first thrills have worn off little traits that have been hidden before are likely to pop up. It is the exceptionally wise man or woman who can love better because of instead of in spite of them.

It takes a lot of unselfishness, a lot of forbearance, a lot of tact. Quarrels that end in kisses, sweeter than those that have been given even a few hours before, are as healthy as good, soaking rains. They clear the air, make the atmosphere cleaner and fresher. But those that end in stony glances and tight lips are unwholesome. One or the other, the wife or the husband, must be the avoider of fights. The clever one just laughs.

Love is something like a delicate white flower. Pull it to pieces and analyze it if you wish. At the end you may know all about it, but you won't have any of it left. Give it freely, accept it unquestioningly, and cherish it tenderly. Then it will live and grow sweeter every day.

Keeps Hair in Curl on Hot or Windy Days

Here's a hair curling secret that is decidedly "worth while." Just apply a little liquid Silmerine before curling the hair, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose, drawing this down the hair from crown to tip. In a jiffy your hair will have as beautiful a curl or wave as you could wish for. The curl or wave will look so natural to one and all that it was evidently acquired. And it will last ever so long, regardless of heat, wind or dampness.

You can obtain liquid Silmerine at any drug store and a few ounces will last a long time. It is neither sticky nor greasy and is pleasant to use. It is economical because of also serving as a splendid facial dressing, keeping the skin soft, silky and lustrous. It's fine for bobbed and long hair.

1438.—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material.

1419.—Woman's one piece dress Sizes 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 inch or 3½ yards of 44 inch material.

1405.—Girl's slipon dress. Sizes 4, 6, 9, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch or 1⅞ yards of 44 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

THE manner of joining the upper and lower parts of this one piece frock makes it most attractive looking, and the narrow sash worn at a low waist line is another pretty feature. This sort of dress is particularly well adapted to two materials, although, of course, it should be prettily made up with only one.

Cotton voile, cotton crepe, chambray, gingham, mercerized poplin—indeed, almost any of the wash materials will make up well. Apply your own measures to the pattern before using it, and when you have made sure that the length and width measures correspond nearly enough with your own so that you will have no trouble, you may place the pattern on the material. If you found the skirt, for instance, would not be long enough to allow for the kind of hem you wish, it would be an easy matter to allow for it in cutting. And this would apply to any of the other measures.

In joining the skirt to the waist, lay the front out flat on a table and pin the middle of the waist to the middle of the skirt; then pin the pieces carefully together, working from the middle towards the ends. The edge of the skirt should be carefully turned in across the top before laying it in place on the waist, and then, after it is pinned all along, baste together; then stitch twice on the machine—once close to the edge and again one-quarter inch below. Do this same work on the back next, and, after removing the bastings, put the seams together.

The dress is intended to be slipped on over the head, and the left shoulder seam is left open for the purpose. Of course, the seam is joined at the armhole for a short distance, then the balance is left open and finished for closing. The front shoulder edge is turned back and makes the faced neck, and the back edge is used as an extension hem. The snaps must be put on so that when closed the seam lines will come exactly together. And in order to have the closing as invisible as possible, the snaps on the faced edge should be set back about one-eighth inch from the edge.

The long waisted dress for a girl, pattern No. 1405, is made as her mother's would be. It is a long waisted, one piece, slip-on dress that will lend itself beautifully to two materials. And by making the skirt of one and the blouse of another material, there will be but little trimming necessary. Figured and plain silk crepe would make a lovely dress.

The neck may be finished with a binding of the skirt material. Be sure to set a piece of the blouse material underneath the opening at the neck, tacking it to the right side of the opening and fastening it with a tiny snap to the left side, and at the neck a pretty pin or a narrow tie made of the dress material would be a good finish.

Pattern No. 1419 is a one piece dress with a front opening, and is intended to be slipped on over the head. Trimming bands are furnished with the pattern, and make it look a little different.

The dress should be cut from some plain material and the trimming from something figured—or the bands might be made of a solid but contrasting color from the dress and the effect would be most pleasing. One should take time to see that the bands are an even width everywhere; this is the part of making that will take time. Then, too, the stitching must be done perfectly—not running it in or off the edges. Taking time for such work makes a garment look well.

Loops and buttons are used for the closing and are both decorative and pretty.

HOW TO MAKE REAL PEACH JAM

Ripe Peach Flavor Easily Preserved

By Ann Proctor

The finest peach jam you ever tasted—chock full of the natural flavor and color—can be made at home within ten minutes after the peaches are sliced or crushed. I like the "Certo Process" as I can use ripe peaches and because it takes only one minute's boiling, thus saving flavor and color; it never fails, and is cheaper because I get two-thirds more jam from the same amount of peaches.

Certo Recipe for Peach Jam: —Use fully ripened fruit for finest flavor; peel, remove pits and thoroughly crush about 2¼ qts. or 3 lbs. Measure 4 level cups (2 lbs.) crushed fruit into large kettle. Add 8 leveled cups (3½ lbs.) sugar and mix well. Stir hard and constantly and bring to a vigorous boil over the hottest fire. Boil hard for one minute with constant stirring. Then take from fire, add 1 bottle (scant cup) Certo and stir it in well. Skim and pour quickly. This makes 11 half-pound glasses of jam.

By this short "Certo Process" you save all the color and flavor that is boiled away by the old method. Time and worry are also saved and you have 6 pounds of jam from 3 pounds of peaches as compared to 3½ pounds of jam by the old method.

The above recipe and nearly 100 others for making delicious jellies, jams and marmalades by the "Certo Process" are found in the Certo Book of Recipes, a copy of which will be given to you by your grocer or druggist when you get Certo. Extra copies will be sent free if you write to the Pectin Sales Company, Rochester, N. Y. In the book are directions for making delicious peach jelly.

Use Certo this year in making all your jams and jellies. It saves time, worry and boiling. The "Certo Process" never fails and saves money, because you make two-thirds more jam from the same amount of fruit. Certo-made jams and jellies keep perfectly.

If your grocer or druggist does not have Certo, please telephone Leeds Brokerage Co., Dearborn 3346, to learn where to obtain it.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR STATE FLOWER?

YOU might turn the following bit of information about the state flowers into a summer porch guessing game, and at the same time perhaps discover a few pleasant surprises in the connection between flower and state. In some instances the flower was adopted by vote of the public school pupils of the respective states. In others the state legislature adopted the flower.

Alabama—Goldenrod.
Alaska—Forget-me-not.
Arkansas—Apple blossom.
California—Golden poppy.
Colorado—Columbine.
Connecticut—Mountain laurel.
Delaware—Peach blossom.
Florida—Orange blossom.
Georgia—Cherokee rose.

The United States has no national flower. You might conclude your game with a vote on the most logical candidate among flowers for the distinction

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Pleased with His Choice.

Returning from a party one evening where we had met many other married couples, I asked my husband how he had enjoyed himself and liked the people.

"Well," he said, "I'll tell you; it was nice, but the more I see of other men's wives the better I like my own."

J. H.

She Didn't Look the Part.

When I was visiting my daughter in the suburbs my little grandson, Richard, informed his little pals that his grandma was at his house. Later in the day when Richard was taking his nap his little chum came calling him. I told him I was Richard's grandma from Chicago. He looked into my face in a studious way, and said, "I thought grandmas were old ladies!" M. H.

Straight from the Heart.

My compliment may seem simple and ordinary, but nevertheless it has always been my wish to hear it said straight from the heart.

I had some misunderstanding with my chum, and for several weeks she steadfastly kept away from me.

Finally she came over one evening, took me by the hand, and said, "Nell, if there was any one I ever missed so much in my life it was you." N. M.

What was the most thrilling moment in your vacation? Was it on a boat or motor ride on a lovely night with the only one? Was it at a dance? Was it a kiss in the moonlight? Or was it a tug at the hook by a big fish? Or a close call when your canoe upset? Write your most thrilling experience and send it to Vacation Editor, The Sunday Tribune. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Rothschild's Greatest August Furniture Sale!

The FURNITURE DEPARTMENT falls in line with the General ROTHSCHILD'S Ad Tomorrow for a ONE DAY CLEARANCE of 1,870 pieces of furniture not shown in this advertisement.

400 Gate Leg Tables seems like a large quantity, but they will be sold in less than 3 hours. 34x48 inch solid mahogany top, positively the most sensational item advertised in the furniture business. While 400 last, $15

THE MOST REMARKABLE OPENING DAY of any August FURNITURE SALE ever held in Chicago took place at our 6th Floor last Monday. From the opening bell to 5:30 it was difficult to get a salesman. Many of the same remarkable values will be repeated tomorrow. As a whole the offerings are just as good. As explained in our General Editorial, tomorrow will be devoted to making a CLEAN SWEEP of such merchandise as we will not duplicate. Just to illustrate, there are ten $60.00 Wing Chairs to be sold at $19.75. All through the Furniture Department are odd pieces to be greatly sacrificed tomorrow. Easy payments.

Complete furniture outfits may be held until October 1st, but single suites and odd clearance pieces must be delivered promptly.

$75 Revolving Double Day Bed—large enough for two people to sleep upon—complete as shown with pillow; velour or tapestry. One Day Only $44.50

$150.00 Solid Walnut Dining Room Set, with oblong table, chairs upholstered in blue leather; 7 pieces, one day, $110

A Table 48x66 inches when closed! Large enough for a family of six people

Just think of it! without using a leaf. With the chairs illustrated, making a 7-piece suite, worth $225, for this one Day of Our August Furniture Sale, $145

During the present year this Suite has sold for $350.00, and our customers were happy to own it at that price. We challenge the world to duplicate or equal this suite in walnut, consisting of seven pieces, at our price tomorrow of $195

This beautiful 7-piece Italian two-tone walnut Dining Room Suite; chair seats and backs upholstered in beautiful tapestry; one of the heaviest and finest suites ever made; a regular $300 suite; for this one day, 7 pieces, $225

A beautiful Bedroom Suite within the reach of the most modest home. Many people will call this the most remarkable value on this entire page.

Now comes the surprise! You may buy this Bow End Bed, large Vanity Dresser, regular Dresser and Chiffonrobe—if you paid $300 for it it would not be too much—as illustrated, in walnut, $199.50

Walnut throughout! Not a stick of gumwood. A beautiful suite. A wonderful bargain. 50-inch dresser. 50-inch Vanity Case. Other pieces very large and heavy.

Just Look at the Prices!

WHY WE DO NOT NEED PICKLES

I AM an enemy of pickles. I believe that vinegar soaked foods are slyly, slowly, insidiously, surely harmful. It stands to reason they are. Nevertheless I shall try here to give as long a list as I can of the sources of reliable pickle recipes for those who would like such information and then present some reasons why we can easily get on without them. Letters have already come in asking how to make dill pickles and so forth.

Cleanliness First Need.

As an absolute requisite in all pickle making I would place first cleanliness. When pickles spoil, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred some form of bacteria has got in its work, while that bacteria would have been destroyed if all the ways of making the materials clean had been employed. Salt kills all small life usually, but cleanliness is still necessary.

Often the spices used in making pickles are dirty. They are as dirty as possible in certain humble markets where they are most in demand, being sold on the street in open bags holding a bushel or two with hideously coarse open barrels of pickles near. All spices except ground ones can be washed and should be washed with great care. Because of the delightful odors of spices cooking in vinegar I love pickle making time, and for that shallow reason, too, would have every one beware of the dirt that may be hidden by these. I can detect it through the odors, but not many people notice it.

What Vinegar Is.

Vinegar is not a food but is a great preservative, although dirty vinegar can do a number of things besides preserve. Vinegar is one of the strongest of flavoring agents or condiments, but dirty vinegar can ruin the flavor of oil or anything else. If you want to guess how strong vinegar is try a little on a cut in your flesh. If your digestive tract is somewhat worn it may have bruises and thin places. Vinegar is not good for them, but perhaps they cannot report the fact at once. Mother of vinegar will take the hide off almost anything. I once saw the gelatin-like disk which had formed on raspberry shrub eat the enamel right off the space it covered in a fine sink. I believe a small portion of it might have eaten up the enamel called a digestive lining unless it was rapidly pushed on.

Pure vinegar is rather indispensable for flavoring salad dressings, but if alcohol is bad, so is soured alcohol, which is vinegar. If people wish to titillate their tongues, a vinegar sponge, which a cucumber pickle is, since its 95 per cent of water to 5 per cent of solid matter has been replaced by vinegar; let them chew a pickle but never swallow it. It will not harm them so much.

The governments of state and nation have put the makers of cheap and terrible vinegars out of business, but in many household vinegars are made which are as unsafe as any slow poison.

Why We Do Not Need Pickles.

Our modern American menus have many an excellent substitute for the pickle used as an appetizer. Raw celery is today eaten by tons, and many people have learned to eat it without salt, but those who require the salt take enough of this nonfood at one meal to answer all dietetic requirements, for a day or perhaps a week. Too much salt is destructive to some of the most needed of our tissues of elimination, those of the kidneys.

When celery is not in full season we have the radishes, and the year through we have all the green salads. The green leaves when dressed with oil and vinegar, and the seasonings, give a fresher, brighter piquancy of taste than any pickle ever made.

In the old days of American origins a green salad was practically unknown, but as polite table ways learned through travel were introduced the salad got a wider and wider introduction, though an astonishing number of people yet prefer the pickle without a vestige of vitamine to the leafy salad which has so much, though constant eating of pickles brings an insidiously increasing debility.

A Chutney Sauce.

I do not recommend the following, which I know to be good as far as vinegar soaked things can be. The woman who gave it to me had some years of serious ill-health varying from helplessness to periods of near death but crediting nothing to faulty diet: Twelve sour apples, six green tomatoes, two onions, one cup of raisins, two green sweet peppers. Chop the tomatoes and drain; then chop the other ingredients, and add two cups of sugar, two tablespoons of salt, one quart of vinegar, and cook all until tender. Put into sterile containers.

Red Cabbage Relish.

Cabbage can be so deliciously cooked, though it usually is not, that it has relish value enough without the addition of spices and vinegar, but the following quick cabbage pickle, which I tested out from a French recipe, has a color value that makes for interest, and it can be cooked to get another color effect.

Take off the outer and imperfect leaves of a red cabbage, wash cabbage, and cut it as for cold slaw. Put the cut cabbage into an earthen vessel, powder with fine salt, and leave in a cool place for two days, stirring several times during that period in order that the salt may thoroughly penetrate the cabbage. By using more salt one may shorten the time. If only a small quantity of salt is used there will not be any liquid to drain off when but one small cabbage is used, but the whole will be sticky. To finish the relish slice one or several onions into the bottom of a crock, tie up some whole peppers, a clove or two, and whatever other spices you choose in a bit of cheesecloth, and cover the whole with either cold or boiling vinegar, then leave for twenty-four hours. A bit of garlic may be used with the onion, or garlic and no onion. The sliced onion, which will be as red as the cabbage, can be used separately as a relish.

Cooked Red Relish.

For a hot hors d'oeuvre put two or three tablespoons of bacon fat in the frying pan, add two cups of the red cabbage relish—more or less—and for each cup used one-half cup of cold water. Cook or gently simmer after the water is hot until the cabbage is tender.

Uncooked Chili Sauce.

When a mixture like chili sauce is wanted for seasoning mayonaise or combining with it for Thousand Island dressing, the following is much safer than those chili sauces in bottles, which stand around in open bottles in doubtful eating places, catching much activating dust but without activating. Twelve ripe tomatoes, six onions, six small green sweet peppers, one-third of a cup of salt or less if the sauce is to be used up promptly, and the less the safer the sauce is dietetically, one cup of sugar, and two cups of the best genuine cider vinegar. Peel and chop fine the tomatoes, onions and peppers, and add to them the seasonings, mixed well. Sterilize sauce bottles and when cold fill them with the sauce. If the filled bottles are tightly stopped and kept in a cold place, this will keep well but look out for mold after a time, especially if paraffin has not been over the corks. This makes an agreeable sauce or may be used in tiny quantities as a relish.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh

keeps the doctor away. If people walked more they'd be sick less. Walking is the most healthful exercise—and the cheapest. But to get the full benefit of walking you must wear the proper shoes. If your feet are uncomfortable there is no joy in walking.

Start the walking habit. Buy a pair of Cantilever Shoes. They are the shoes for work or play, for standing or walking. There is plenty of toe room, yet they fit with snug smoothness and hold the foot easily—comfortably.

The under-arch sole is drawn up by lacing the shoes, so that it fits close to the foot and supports the arch.

The Cantilever Shoe has a shank that is flexible, yielding with the play of the muscles. Instead of binding, as a rigid sole or a metal appliance does, the Cantilever Shoe encourages the foot muscles to exercise and grow strong. In this sane and comfortable way Cantilever Shoes prevent and correct fallen arches.

In Cantilever Shoes you will acquire an easy, graceful carriage. Your health will be better, your efficiency will increase. There is comfort for you in every pair.

They're good looking, too. Of fine leathers and white canvas. Widths from AAAA to D.

Genuine Cantilever Shoes have the name "CANTILEVER" stamped on the shank. Avoid substitutes.

Pompeian Beauty Powder

The Lure of Beauty

NO wonder he finds it hard to say good night. With the warm coloring of her cheeks, her lustrous skin and radiant eyes, her beauty fascinates him. You will share the secret of her beauty instantly—when you, too, use the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly. Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance. Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty? Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant! (Above 3 preparations may be used separately or together. At all druggists, 60c each.)

TRY NEW POWDER SHADES. The correct powder shade is more important than the color of dress you wear. Our new NATURELLE shade is a more delicate tone than our Flesh shade, and blends exquisitely with a medium complexion. Our new RACHEL shade is a rich cream tone for brunettes.

BEAUTY Powder (60c).....stays on unusually long
BLOOM (60c).....a rouge that won't break; light, dark, medium
DAY Cream (60c).....vanishing; holds the powder
MASSAGE Cream (60c).....clears up the complexion
NIGHT Cream (50c).....the cold cream for beauty
FRAGRANCE (30c).....a talcum with a real perfume odor
VANITY Case ($1.00).....powder and rouge compact
LIP Stick (25c).....makes lips beautiful

GOV'T NEW KHAKI BREECHES

Almost every trouser manufacturer in the country is making khaki breeches, but none of them can make breeches of the same quality as sturdy as those made for our Government. Why, breeches such as these are only sold by the highest type of sporting goods houses and sold at a price probably two and three times as high as we are asking for them. They could hardly afford to sell them for less and make their legitimate profit. Sizes to fit little and big men and women, as well as younger people. $2.45

NEW FULL SIZED ROLLED EDGE MATTRESS

We doubt if a new Mattress big enough for a double bed was or could be sold under $10.00, especially a mattress of this sort. Weight about 45 pounds; rolled edge; fancy ticking; an all around honestly made mattress. $4.95

U. S. GOVERNMENT
SUMMER DRAWERS FOR MEN

We bought somewhere around 250,000 of these garments. Balbriggan and ribbed styles. Sizes to fit most any man. They're presumed to be reclaimed garments, but in such a large lot you're bound to find the garments you want. These are exceptional bargains..... 9c

U. S. GOVERNMENT
AUSTRALIAN JAM
2-LB. CAN

There is no Jam ever manufactured that's any better—couldn't really be, as it's nothing more than sugar and fruit without any adulterants. It's a full TWO-POUND CAN, and we're under the impression that this can of jam cost our government about 75c to $1. Can, 12c

ARMY TARPAULINS

When we first advertised these tarpaulins we had on hand and had bought from the United States Government 900,000 yards of this duck, we thought at the time that we'd probably have enough tarpaulins to last us for years, but evidently our price was so low that the business simply swamped us and today we're selling the last lot of these paulins—all the 900,000 yards from which these paulins were made is sold—so we advise you, if you need any paulins in the near future, and you feel our price is right to place your order now. Of 20 oz. Government waterproof duck—khaki color—brand new:

Size 8x10, price, each, $5.60	Size 12x15, price, each, $12.00
Size 10x12, price, each, 8.40	Size 14x15, price, each, 14.70
Size 10x15, price, each, 10.50	Size 16x20, price, each, 22.40
	Size 20x20, price, each, 36.00

U. S. Gov't Escort Wagons

Brand new; a really wonderful wagon for coal, ice or general hauling. They do not make wagons like this for general use — the Government used extra precautions to get the sturdiest, best wagon procurable, regardless of the cost. Two or Four Horse drawn vehicle. We've been told the Government cost was around $400.00. This wagon is for either Two or Four Horses. The Body is hardwood, 10 ft. long, 3½ ft. wide and 21½ in. high. Rear wheels are 4 ft. 7 in., front 3 ft. 9 in. Tires are 3 in. wide. $60

GOVERNMENT LIBERTY STEEL COTS NEW, $1.95

Gray or Black—Here's one of those rare cases where, as the sale goes on the price rises. They're getting scarcer and scarcer with the Government and as time goes on we'll charge you more for them. Recently we sold them as low as $1.50, but it's our plan to raise the price to $2.45 some day this week. And they're easily worth that, as they couldn't be produced, we believe, under about $7.00. They're collapsible, tubular and have the best woven wire springs. Size 2 feet 6 inches by 6 feet 4 inches.

U. S. Military Police Shoes

$5.45 Pr.

There's probably no better shoe made for real, hard service. It's especially adaptable for our city police and men who are on their feet a great deal. Calf uppers. Big, broad, roomy toe. Heel of leather and rubber. We feel confident that this shoe could hardly be duplicated under $8.00 to $10.00 a pair.

U. S. GOVERNMENT
Carts or Trailers

Strongest ingenuity could produce. Every conceivable reinforcement. The box is 3 ft. long, 4 ft. wide, 21 in. deep, about 1¾ in. thick. Wheels iron covered and almost 3 in. thick. 60-in. diam. with 16 massive, solid spokes, 3 staves for canvas cover. Shafts, chain tugs, seat, footboard, tack chain and poles, etc. Best trailer money can buy. Cost to the Government, we understand, was a trifle under $300.00. Deliveries will be made from Gov't warehouse at Hawthorne. $25

U. S. GOVERNMENT CANVAS COTS
35,000 NEW ARMY CANVAS COTS for Only $2.85

And these cots are made of 30 oz. waterproof duck. We doubt if any other cot made for the Government was ever made of heavier than 16 oz. non-waterproof duck—and we feel sure this cot could not be sold everywhere under $7.00 to $8.00. In other words—we give you about $7.00 to $8.00 worth of pleasure for $2.85.

Now, these Cots left Louisville last Tuesday. If the railroad strike doesn't interfere, we'll have them in in plenty of time—if they're not in, we'll show you the sample and ship them out a day or two later.

Gov't Vacuum Marmites

$3.50

These Marmites have a heavy retinned inner container with a capacity of about 5 gallons and an outer galvanized container 22½ inches high and 12 inches in diameter. Locks hermetically air tight. We understand they will retain food hot or cold for about 40 hours. Have heavy iron handle. Government cost was around $25 apiece.

GOVERNMENT
BALLOON SILK

We're getting to the end of this Balloon Cloth. Those of you who have waited until this day to get your supply ought to get in now and buy it. We've probably sold a half-million yards and have found it one of the most popular articles of government merchandise. It's cream color, 38½ inches wide, and makes up in shirts for men, dresses and waists for women, draperies for the house or theater, and a lot of other useful articles. The government cost was around $2 a yard. 45c

No firm in America has a more liberal guarantee than we—we refund cheerfully if your purchase proves unsatisfactory.

ARMY GOODS HEADQUARTERS
25 W. VAN BUREN ST
½ Block West of State St.
GALLANT MERCANTILE COMPANY

We ship by Parcel Post, Express or Freight to any part of the United States, Canada or Mexico. Parcel Post Shipments must include sufficient postage to cover cost of shipment.

15,000 BED SHEETS

These are new Bed Sheets, made for single and double beds. Sizes 54x90, 63x90, 72x90 inches. Bleached, half bleached and unbleached. Good quality, medium quality and poor quality in the lot. They're brand new. Be your own judge and take your choice; each, 75c

MEN'S NEW
KHAKI COVERALLS

Real heavy quality and as well made as Coveralls can be—big, roomy and double stitched. We feel sure the price of $1.79 is the lowest they've been sold for in Chicago since long before the war. $1.79

GOVERNMENT
O. D. WOOL BLANKETS

This is another instance in which the price will go up as we proceed along the road of helping Uncle Sam reduce his Surplus Stock. But here's a Wool Blanket that we feel sure wouldn't be reproduced under $6.00 to $8.00. They're reclaimed, but in such a condition that unless we told you, you'd call them brand new. They're big enough for big beds; good enough for an Auto Robe; pliable enough for an Outing Blanket. The best all-round blanket on the market $2.29

Charge purchases Monday will, on request, be posted to August account, payable in September

Picture frames at 25% off

Made-up frames at 25% off. Frames made to order at 20% off. Mirrors priced $25 and up, at 20% off. August sale. Sixth floor.

MANDEL BROTHERS

Women's silk hose, 1.95

"Substandards" in a very good quality, and in white, black and a few colors. 1.95 is about half "regular." Hosiery department, first floor.

Commencing Monday, that eagerly awaited yearly event:

The 33rd August sale of furniture

priced lower than in several seasons

Important purchases from foremost furniture manufacturers in Grand Rapids and elsewhere—together with extremely close pricing—this August afford a choice of "specials" more extensive than in years—every special a money saving opportunity, be your selection a piece, a suite, or a complete furniture equipment for your home. Seventh floor.

Three furniture floors —a total of 70,000 sq. ft.

—are devoted to the display and sale of furniture of a character exceptionally high in finish, design and construction. Seventh floor.

$1,000,000 regular stock is also specially priced

In addition to the extensive special purchases for this widely noted "annual," we have cut the prices of most of the furniture in regular stock.

A variety of furniture for every room in the home

—simple patterns, period patterns, museum types—in favored woods and finishes—many of the new designs originated by and exclusive with us.

100 reading, table and floor lamps, shown on the furniture floor, at reductions of 25 to 50 per cent.

Specializing tuxedo coats of fiber silk 12.75

They are knitted in two smart patterns, have braided self girdle, and are in black, white and colors. Third floor.

Wrought iron reading lamps

A "purchase" accounts for the extremely low price.

19.50

—complete with 12-inch mica shade.

The standards are finished in gold leaf and polychrome, and have extension rod and adjustable light sockets and all-silk covered cord with all attachments. See sketch. Sixth floor.

39th August fur sale—far famed "annual"

Paris-sponsored modes and pelts—Mandel-sponsored values

Consistently placing principal emphasis on high quality in the furs themselves, over a period of nigh two-score years, this store has built up a supreme public confidence in its fur offerings and has acquired a highly discriminating clientele of patrons. Fur salon, fifth floor.

A B C

The furs pictured are eminent exponents of the Mandel fame for quality. They are fashioned even more skillfully, from skins even more carefully selected, than "in the season."

A—Hudson seal coat —of choice Hudson seal (dyed muskrat)—novel chin collar, umbrella sleeves. $495.

B—Persian lamb coat

—with the new mandarin sleeves, banded with kolinsky; the collar is of kolinsky. $465.

C—Scotch mole cape

—with unique coat front effect and with luxurious kolinsky chin collar. $390.

D—Black caracul coat

A distinctive style with collar and sleeves of viatka squirrel. $525. Fifth floor.

E—Scotch mole cape

A graceful garment fashioned with novel crush collar, edged with pointed fox. $595.

F—Hudson seal coat with kolinsky collar and cuff effect; see the "step" effect on sides and sleeves. $495.

D E F

Furs bought in the August sale stored free until November first

Patrons without charge account, by making a cash deposit, may reserve furs for delivery as late as November 1st. No deposit is required of charge patrons.

Furs will be remodeled during August at lower prices than in the fall

The season's styles are determined—they are decidedly different from last year's. Collar and sleeve effects are unique. Fur salon, fifth floor.

Step-in chemise of crepe de chine —liberally cut and artistically fashioned—

extra special 3.95

lace trimmed

Calais valenciennes lace adorns all of the chemise. One style is sketched.

PROLOGUE.

We left a rather perturbed Pa and Ma on their way to the police station to rescue Grandma, who, it transpired, endeavored to revise the taxicab rates by hammering the driver over the head with her umbrella . . . these smart city fellers aren't going to put anything over on her . . . imagine it: fifty cents to take her "across the square," when Jim Parker often drives her from Parker City to New Burnside for twenty-five cents . . . and the taxi driver called her "old lady" in the bargain . . . she'll old lady him . . . whack, whack . . . well, 'a finally squared it with the driver and the captain and, together with Ma, got Grandma home . . . talking to herself all the way . . .

Scene—The Potter Living Room.

It's been a long time since Grandma has seen the Potters, and never before in their "coop," as she calls their city apartment . . . they could never lure her to the city before, but here she is now, and she is determined to see the sights . . . let us hope they won't prove too much for her.

MA (bustling around):
Now, give me your things . . . take off your wrap. Aren't you tired from the trip? . . . don't you wanta take a nap?

GRANDMA (shuddering over recollection of sitting up all night in a day coach):
Tired traveling? . . . I should hope, Where you going with my telescope?

Jim Parker often drives her from Parker City to New Burnside for twenty-five cents.

GRANDMA (taking telescope from Pa and opening it on living room table):
Here's some things I put up I thought you'd like . . . (begins taking out glass jars and lining them up) that dark one there is blackberry jelly and these are plums . . . you can tell 'em by holding 'em up to the light . . . they're sour, but you could use the whole sugar barrel in 'em and it wouldn't sweeten 'em . . . like some people, all right when you get to know them, but downright cantankerous to get acquainted with.

MA (with a glad heart):
Did you bring any of that home-made ham?

GRANDMA (nodding her head sagely):
I did so. Salted it for six weeks myself and then hung it in the hickory smoke for four more weeks. You don't get any ham like that in your old city stores. I know because I got some in the city once that time I went to Peoria.

(And Grandma pauses to grieve silently for a minute on the trials of the poor Peorians who have to get along without home cured country ham.)

But you'll have to eat it fast or the skippers'll be taking it.

BILL (who is already sampling the blackberry jelly with his finger):
What's skippers, Grandma?

GRANDMA (sagely):
Skippers are little bugs that wait until you do all the work and get the meat all nicely cured for them, and then they ruin it . . . there's always some critters like that waiting around to get into things; sometimes they've got six legs, and sometimes four, and sometimes they've only got two, and then they stick their fingers into things. (Bill quickly takes his hand out of the jelly at this, and Grandma goes right on as if she hadn't noticed anything.) That's the world for you: all critters eating each other, everybody thinking about their stomachs and little else . . . armies of men killing each other just for something to put in their stomachs . . . they call it commercial warfare or something just as high-falutin', but it all amounts to the same thing . . . and when they're dead the worms eat 'em, and something else eats the worms, and what's it all about, anyway? I remember when I was a little girl we had a piece of poetry in the old blue-backed speller. I think it was:

There's not a bug on all the earth
But has other bugs to bite 'em,
And these small bugs bite other bugs,
And so eye-den fee-nite 'um.

And I brought you a dozen eggs fresh from the country (Grandma rattles on without a pause). I wonder if any of them are broke.

MA (pessimistically):
Of course they're broke. Eggs always break.

BILL (brightly):
Just like gum always sticks to your heel.

GRANDMA (pushing her fingers down into the telescope gingerly and fearing the worst . . . ah, a suspicious moisture . . . withdraws her hand and looks at it . . . alas, yes . . . unpacks down to the sad mess and pulls out the shoe box full of potential omelets):
Never mind; you can use the yelks for making a cake.

BILL (to Mamie):
You can rub them in your hair. Sweets to the sweet . . . eggs to the egg-heads.

MAMIE (with flashing eyes):
You don't think that's a head you've got, do you?

BILL (sarcastically):
What is it, then, Red's little sweetness?

MAMIE (coolly):
It's something between a carbuncle and a goiter.

MA (who has been trying to shush them behind Grandma's back):
Now, children, see if you can't stop scrapping while Grandma's here.

GRANDMA (interrupting):
Not at all. Let 'em scrap. I like to see spirit in the young people. Go to it, Mamie! Sic 'er, Bill!

MA (horrified):
Grandma!

GRANDMA (enjoying herself hugely):
Fiddlesticks! Many's the scraps you had with your brothers when you was little. You'd think now butter didn't melt in your mouth in those days. Let them scrap if they want to. I like it.

BILL (to himself):
I never thought the old girl was such a good sport.

MAMIE (to herself):
And I thought she was going to be such an old pill . . . some Grandma! . . . the tat's particulars, I'd say.

(Doorbell rings . . . Mamie gets there first . . . it might be Red, you know . . . well, well, it IS Red . . . will he come in a minute? . . . will a duck quack?)

MAMIE (to Grandma):
This is Red Miller, Grandma . . . he's my fiance, you know.

BILL: She means her police dog. (Mamie gives Bill a withering look.)

GRANDMA (studying him shrewdly through her keen light blue and somewhat twinkling eyes):
So you're the young feller that's going to marry Mamie, are you? What line of business are you in?

RED (embarrassed):
Well, I just graduated out of school, you see, and just how I'm a life saver.

GRANDMA (baffled):
A what?

RED (still more embarrassed):
A life saver. I save lives.

GRANDMA (practically):
Why?

(Well, you would wonder, sometimes, when you see them on the beach.)

RED (turning to Mamie for help):
Well, you see . . . they'd . . . well, they'd drown. (Desperately) Wouldn't they, Mamie?

MAMIE (adoringly):
I should just say they would. (To Grandma, spiritedly) Don't you know, he's just the best life saver on the whole beach. Everybody says so. He looks just grand, and all the girls are crazy about him.

RED (with a deprecating shrug that seems to say, "It is pretty hard on them, but after all you must admit they are sorely tempted"):
O, no, I wouldn't say crazy.

MAMIE (with the slightest suspicion of a steely glint in her eyes):
They'd better not be. That's all I've got to say.

GRANDMA (musingly):
So you're a life saver, are you? I never saw one before. I suppose you make a lot of money. People give you lots of money to save them, don't they?

RED (bitterly):
No, they usually promise you lots while you're dragging them in to shore, but you never see them after they get dressed.

GRANDMA (a trifle too innocently):
There's lots of prospects in it, I suppose. Good future and all that?

RED (uneasily):
No-o-oooh. It's just a summer job.

GRANDMA (whimsically):
What are you and Mamie going to do in the winter? Sleep through it like a couple of bears?

PA (who has been taking it all in):
Ha-ha, ha-ha, thass good!

MA (interrupting hurriedly and giving Pa a now-aren't-you-ashamed-of-yourself look):
O, by the time they're ready to get married Red will have a good job. They're in no hurry yet for a long, long time.

(Red and Mamie exchange meaning glances, as much as to say, "Maybe it isn't so long as you think.")

"You can tell 'em by holding 'em up to the light."

RED (to relieve the strained silence that follows):
I just dropped in to ask Mamie if she wanted to go to the Blue Mill Garden tonight.

GRANDMA:
What do you want to go to a garden at night for? You can't see anything. The time to see gardens is in the sunlight, when the colors come out and everything.

MAMIE (snuggling up to Grandma adorably):
You dear old thing! Did you think we were going to a truck garden or cabbage patch or something? This is a cabaret—dancing, singing, and all that.

GRANDMA (excited):
O, one of them summer gardens I've heard tell of, I'd like to see something like that while I'm in the city.

MAMIE (suddenly):
Great! A Great Idea! Let's take Grandma to her first cabaret. We'll all go . . . all except Bill.

BILL (crisply):
Ah, who'd want to go with you?

GRANDMA (decidedly):
No, we'll all go.

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

I. SHE WAITED TOO LONG.

Ten years ago a girl of 19 left Scotland to spend the winter with her brother in Chicago. Donald was one of the many to bid her good-by. He loved her devotedly, but, owing to the fact that he was just beginning to practice dentistry and dependent on his parents, he did not think it right to bind her to an actual engagement. However, they confessed their love for each other, and it was understood between them that they would one day marry.

Margaret was pretty, high spirited, and somewhat of a coquette, and her head became turned by all the attention she received from young men she met in Chicago.

She had a wonderful voice and was persuaded by her relatives here to take vocal lessons. She decided to take advantage of the opportunities here, and in entering upon a course of lessons found her visit would be considerably lengthened. Donald unselfishly approved of her desire to better herself, and urged her to study.

Each letter from him breathed of his undying love, and here and there would escape a hint of his loneliness for her. Margaret still loved him, but her studies and new friends seemed to fill her mind and heart more and more, until she hardly found time to write to Donald at all. He would send half a dozen letters to her one, always begging her not to forget him, which seemed to be his constant fear.

After she had been in America four years, resisting all his pleas to come home, she received a letter from him telling her of his large practice and that he was now able to care for her in comfort. He told her that the old Graham house was for sale and that if she would come home and marry him he would buy it.

As he had only a six weeks' option on it, he asked her to write at once, and, if favorable, he would buy. He sent a snapshot of the place, and she recognized it as one of the most beautiful homes in her town.

Whether it was real love for Donald, or the desire to be mistress of the lovely place, I don't know, but Margaret wrote that she would come, and that she was sailing in about two weeks.

Her boat was to sail on a Wednesday, and on the Sunday before she sang a solo in one of the churches in that city. The trustee of a large church was in the audience, and the next day Margaret was offered the position of soloist in his choir. New vistas opened up to her, and she yielded to the tempting offer.

On the day that Donald closed the deal for the purchase of the Graham house he received a letter from her saying that she was going to stay here at least another year. She never heard from him after that.

Being very popular and talented, she had several proposals of marriage in the years that followed, but refused them all, as she always expected sooner or later to marry Donald, although she had dropped out of his life entirely.

When she was here ten years a longing grew in her heart to see Donald and she realized that life would be incomplete without him. She severed all her connections in America, and intending to surprise him, set sail for home. Her sister had mentioned in a letter that he had moved to another town, and as his town lay between the seaport where she disembarked and her own home, she stopped there.

He was in his office, and as she entered and he saw who it was, he seemed turned to stone. He stared, but made no move to greet her. She thought he didn't know her, and in her excitement and joy she rushed up to him and flung her arms around his neck, saying, "Donald, don't you know me? It's your Margaret!"

For just a moment he held her tightly, then slowly putting her from him, he said, "Lassie, I was married yesterday." E. F. K.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Helping Her Neighbor.

"Won't you kindly ask the readers of your column to help me get some baby clothes? My neighbor expects a baby next month, and many reverses have made it impossible for her to prepare for her eleventh child. I will gladly call or pay postage for anything offered and as I am handy with the needle I can remodel anything, and will. Mrs. B."

"Mothers, please look over your things and see if you can't spare some of them for this little newcomer. Mrs. B. J. will be only too happy to remodel anything which may be contributed to her neighbor.

Husband Out of Work.

"I am the mother of four children, one girl 12, boys 7 and 5, and a baby 1 year. We have six rooms and no carpets. My living room is small; an 8x6 rug would just fit; the dining room is larger and needs 9x12. If anyone has old oilcloth and some dining chairs I would be grateful for them. My husband is out of work, and it is hard to get along. Mrs. J. S."

Who has these things to spare? Any pieces of oilcloth lying unused and which could be sent on to Mrs. J. S. would help make her work much easier.

To Lighten Her Burden.

"I wonder if some one has an oil stove or electric plate. It is so hot to use a cook stove. My husband had no steady work until last month, and we have five children. I am expecting a baby in a month and have no clothes for it. Mrs. M. G."

Will some mother, who has lately been visited by the stork, give Mrs. M. G. what she does not need for her own babe? Also, any one who has an oil stove or electric piste to give would lighten this prospective mother's burden considerably.

Deserves Some Help.

"I am a widow with five small children and a mother to take care of and have been ill since December. Has some one an ice box, a range and some household furniture? I would appreciate anything you can do for us. "Mrs. E. S. C."

To be ill and to have the added worry of caring for a mother and five children is indeed a serious problem. This widow needs assistance, and I hope she will not have long to wait for it.

Offers Medical Battery.

"I have a medical battery to pass along to some one who needs one. It needs a new battery, but otherwise is in good condition. Mrs. L. C."

The address of the doner will be given to the person interested.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscript returned.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Brought Back to the Present.

When 16 I read "The Last Days of Pompeii." The following Sunday on the way to church with my chum who had not read the book, I attempted to relate the story to her.

Arriving at church early and the story not yet completed, we sought seats in the gallery. I continued with my narration. We were soon so lost to our surroundings that we did not even hear the services begin.

Suddenly there was a vast stillness and the preacher's voice was heard saying, "When the whispering in the gallery ceases I will continue." J. W.

Her Patience Exhausted.

Just as my little daughter had been promised the fulfillment of a request, a distinguished woman, whose call I had been anticipating for several days, was announced.

The child was told to run along and play; that the caller would not stay long. During the next ten minutes the youngster passed quietly through the hall several times, but her patience did not last.

She finally stepped inside the door and said, "Well, are you still here?"

There was not much for an embarrassed mother to say, and I fear the guest cut her formal call short. H. V. N.

Knowing Her Own.

I was married recently for the second time and my little daughter, Virginia, came to the hotel where we were staying to spend Christmas with us.

One morning Virginia and I came down to get our mail as a number of the other guests came for theirs. She spied a box on the counter addressed to Virginia Barton.

She was much excited and exclaimed, "O, that's a Christmas present for me, mother."

The mail clerk looked at it and said, "No, that's for Barton."

Then, to the general amusement of the guests, Virginia replied, "Well, that's for me all right, isn't it, mother? He was our first husband." L. W.

Of Course You Will Buy Some Malt Extract

THE only question is which malt extract will you buy? Good malt extract is made out of choice No. 1 malt barley. It is filled with sugar, rich with malt and almost free from moisture.

A cheap malt extract, on the other hand, is low in sugar content and flat in malt value, because it is filled with moisture and adulterated with cheap corn.

Such a malt extract is of no earthly value even after you have bought it.

There is no reason for experimenting in buying malt extract because Puritan Malt extract sets the standard all over the world both as to quality and as to price.

You can't pay more and get as good a quality as you get in Puritan and you can't pay less and get anything worth taking home.

Puritan is the richest malt extract made anywhere in the world, and, because of the enormous quantity produced, it is as cheap in price as you can afford to pay.

Contrast in Building Materials Aids in Beautifying the Home

[Richard Bummell Jr., architect, Courtenay, Fla.]

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

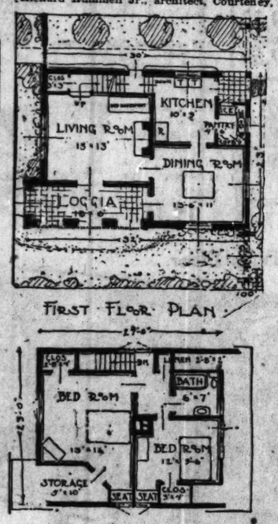
DIFFERENT from the unadorned, boxlike structures which so many call home is the one pictured here, with its gracefully arched loggia, the unusual roof with its dormer and casement windows, central chimney, and lovely landscape gardening.

Mingled shades of rough textured red brick with wide mortar joints, filled flush and left rough, is the scheme used for the walls. In contrast is the roof with mottled green and purple slate. The wood trim around doors and windows has been given an old ivory eand finish.

Poplar trees are planted at the rear of the house, which is placed across the lot, forming a screen from the neighboring building. This type of tree is advantageously used in the narrow space available, as it grows tall and slim. In southern climate Australian pines or silk oaks would probably be used.

A notable feature of this design is the landscape arrangement, which calls for a pergola and trellis to completely inclose the vegetable garden. This effect produces delightful privacy and is something which might be used advantageously in a city or suburban back yard. The pergola might also be used for training grapes, beans, or other vines and thus be practical as well as esthetic. Pergolas of this kind may be purchased piecemeal at almost any lumber mill. The home owner may buy as much as he cares to and add to it from time to time, doing the actual construction work in his spare moments, thus beautifying and adding to the value of his property and getting wholesome and elevating stimulation at the same time. This is truly the essence of home ownership.

As has been explained in a previous article, the advent of new colors and textures in brick has made it possible to secure an unlimited number of combinations, so that every taste may be gratified. In any material sales yard one may see full sized samples of walls in which the various colors of brick have been laid up in different styles and colors of mortar joints, and thus choose the combination most pleasing.



From the delightful loggia a double French door leads to a spacious living room with a real fireplace. From this room one enters the dining room, which also has French doors opening from the loggia.

The kitchen is well equipped with built in details. Two tables are drop-leafed from the window sills. The large pantry, which is used after the manner of an English cottage scullery, has the kitchen sink vis-à-vis with the door. At the right hand side a cupboard is built in, and at the left hand side an icebox, which can be filled from outside. This concentration of working space allows greater order to be kept in the kitchen proper. From the brick floored back porch stairs lead down to a pathway of large square flagstones reaching to the vegetable garden.

While we glance about, observing the clever arrangement which the architect has devised, it is well to consider the permanence of the interior decorations. For modest homes of this type architects are laying greater stress than ever on permanence and lasting qualities for the plaster. They specify metal lath as the material on which the plaster should be applied for the ceilings of the prominent rooms, such as the living and dining rooms, and in the corners of the rooms, where plaster cracks are most disfiguring. The steel mesh of the lath is said to be very tough and durable and to act as a reinforcement for the plaster as well as a base or groundwork, thus offering resistance to the small settlement and shrinkage of the lumber.

One vital element which plays a vital part in setting the value of a home is the type and character of the plumbing fixtures, and probably no other feature entering into the construction of the home determines so largely its up to dateness and its resale value. The bathroom in this house is equipped with the very latest improvements in plumbing and is conveniently accessible to both bedrooms.

Quaint and attractive are the bedrooms, with their casement windows snuggled close up under the roof. Ample closet space is provided for each room, and in addition there is a good sized storage room.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

THE MAN WHO CAN'T FORGET.

DEAR ONE: Thank you for the card I have so anxiously awaited, showing I was the first to be given news of your safe arrival overseas.

You ask if I remember that last boat trip on that moonlight night and afterwards climbing Grandfather's mountain? That evening I shall never forget. Why, O, my dear one, do we have to be parted? You had become more dear to me and the others here than we knew then. And that evening you left—I felt so lonesome and so sad. I went up to the highest place around. I had to be alone.

I watched the ship glide out of the fjord in that beautiful, dreamy blue. You were on it. I felt sorrowful and heavy laden. I cried—I, big, strong John, you used to call me. I thought I heard you cry—the ship passed a point and you were gone.

With tears in your eyes and a smile on your lips, your voice stirring from the sorrow of your heart—this is the picture I keep of you in my heart, when last we parted and said farewell, that memorable evening coming down the mountain.

It has been quiet here since you left. We have had a few mountain trips. How am I? I have become quieter, but when I am blue I take my knapsack and gun and go alone to the mountains. There I can lie on the high places—

BATH AND BEACH ROBES.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Just about the time you lay your pencil down with a sigh of relief and contemplate your list of going away things, under the delusion that at last it is complete, there flashes through your head the terrible thought that you had forgotten all about a bathrobe. What to do? Obviously you cannot take your heavy winter one without sacrificing half of your trunk. You think you will need one on the beach. You know you will need one when on the boat or the train or at the hotel you parade to the bathroom. To you, then, and to others is this article dedicated.

The lightweight summer bathrobe or dressing gown is something that today should not be missing from the wardrobe of the man who dresses well, even though his means be modest, whether he remains in the city in the summer or goes off to a resort for a vacation.

In the first place, a lightweight summer bathrobe becomes automatically what is today known as the beach robe. More and more men wear their bathrobes on the beach and also to and from the beach. A bathrobe worn over a bathing suit in the city or village street on the way to the beach is no longer frowned upon. Futhermore, enlightened medicine has all but blasted the old theory that a sunburn was a healthy thing. After the swim the proper thing to do is to throw a light bathrobe over your shoulders, instead of sitting uncovered and allowing the drops of water on your body to act as a burning glass for the sun's rays.

All of us are not so fortunate as to be able to afford a room with bath at a hotel, and so a light robe would be necessary in such a contingency. In your home, if you remain in the city during the summer, your dressing gown becomes a cool and comfortable lounging robe.

Lightweight summer bathrobes and dressing gowns are made of terry cloth, mohair, ratine, oxford cloth woven, lightweight flannel, and silk, if desired.

The first mentioned, terry cloth, has advantages and disadvantages which are of interest to consider. As a beach robe the terry cloth is, perhaps, the most successful. If you are not familiar with that name, it is the rough, towel-like material. Due to this resembling a towel, the terry cloth bathrobe acts as a drier as well as a covering, absorbing the water on your body immediately and drying you while you wait, as it were. However, terry cloth is at the same time the heaviest and bulkiest of all the materials named, and this you must consider if you are going to move from place to place and your packing space is limited. However, if you plan to stay at a beach resort for any length of time I should recommend the terry cloth robe, even if you have to send it on ahead of you. You can wear it with perfect propriety going from your home to the beach and back.

However, some will prefer the lighter, cooler materials such as mohair, ratine, or flannel, and while these do not absorb water, they are so light and thin that they immediately solve the packing problem, and take up but little space in your trunk or bag.

As far as taking up small space goes, the mohair is, perhaps, the best. It is the smooth, shiny, silk-looking material such as your summer suits are made of. They come made up in pretty pastel shades and are neat and dressy looking. As it is a sort of wiry material, it does not crush easily when stuffed into a bag for a length of time. This, perhaps, is one of the disadvantages of the woven oxford as a bathrobe material. While it is delightfully cool and pleasant to wear, it crushes easily.

Ratine is another material which lends itself well to the making of bathrobes. It is a light, loose woven, rather tough material, differing from the smooth mohair in that respect, and is cool, as the weave lets through plenty of air. Ratine is today cheaper than it used to be, and should be within the reach of all. At one time the material was used a great deal in women's dressing. This year women seem to have turned to gingham. At any rate, much more of the ratine has been put at man's disposal, and hence it is cheaper.

The light weight flannels make up into some stunning looking dressing gowns, but as a great many of these are made of flannel of French importation, they come rather high. I should, however, recommend these where lightness in weight, small packing space, and yet a certain amount of warmth are desired.

Silk is used in summer dressing gowns, but many men do not like to wear robes made of this material. There is not much to be said for the practical side of silk. For one thing, it does not wash, and all of the other cloths mentioned do, which is an important item to be taken into consideration. They do well enough for the house, but I imagine that most men would hesitate to be seen on the beach in one. Anyway, it wouldn't be comfortable once it got a little wet.

All of the robes are made up with a shawl collar, and girdle to match, and are ankle length. It should be remembered that, while especially good for the summer, all the robes and dressing gowns mentioned may be used in the winter as well, and thus serve a double purpose.

THE LADY AND THE GLOVE.

THE lady was my little golden haired, pug nosed sweetheart of thirty years ago, and the glove a wee torn red mitten with a black cord sewed carefully to one end. Her name was Joyce, the most beautiful sounding name in the world, I thought, while I, her humble suitor, was in all an ugly duckling, with flaming red hair and more than his share of freckles.

But in spite of my many drawbacks Joyce remained my sweetheart, loftily entrusting her first grade reader into my care alone and walking to the little red schoolhouse, day by day, at my side.

Then the tragedy happened. Percy Durnam came to school. How well I remember that much envied green suit and his bold dark eyes as they smiled into the blue ones of my lady love! From then on I was merely tolerated, but the day of reckoning soon came.

An evil, vicious bulldog was kept in the pasture leading to the creek. I had shared Joyce with Percy that day, and the feeling between us rose high.

Joyce seated herself on an old stump, and both of us were boasting of what we would do for her. Suddenly she took off one of her little red mittens and flung it over the fence and into the pasture.

"Go get it," she lisped softly, and without hesitating I swung myself over the fence and into the yard that housed the bulldog. I secured it and was half way over the fence when I heard a short growl and felt a portion of my overalls part company with the rest. In this sad predicament I returned to my queen, only to have her laugh merrily and tell me that she could never walk home with any one in such a condition.

This was the blasting of all my youthful dreams, and though Joyce today has probably forgotten that incident I shall always remember the little red mitten that so brought me down to earth from the midst of childhood's love clouds.

TABLE COVER TO LAY IN PLACE.

A CARD table cover that looked as though it would stay perfectly in place, was seen a short time ago. This particular one was made of one of the heavy art linens in the natural linen color. Of course the top was, when finished, the exact size of the top of the table, and to this was attached a straight strip about five or six inches in depth. This was set onto the top in a wide French seam, the fold or tuck standing up around the table exactly at the edge. This could be set onto the top in the same way as was suggested in the article about the chair covers.

The lower edge of this cover was finished with an inch wide fringe, matching the linen in color.

With this way of making the covers, one could, of course, use different materials and finish in any number of ways.

One often sees these covers made with a fitted piece about two inches deep, but this really deep piece is decidedly good, because there should be no chance of its slipping.

Black surf satin has been a deservedly popular material for these covers, and it is possible to get cross stitch designs appropriate for a card table, and do the embroidery in bright colors—perhaps having something in each corner. Then the bottom of the cover could be finished with a trimming braid or a narrow, right side facing of the same or some contrasting color and material.

Many women prefer white to any color, and if one could make several covers, decorating each one differently, they would no doubt be very useful and good looking besides.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MRS. A. N.: You ask why we use blue for baby boys and pink for girls? Simply because it is the custom, like many another thing. Or if there is any real reason, I have never happened to have heard of it.

* *

MRS. E. W. J.: If one doesn't like the fullness across the front of these straight, gathered skirts, it is possible to adjust the fullness so that the skirt can be almost plain directly in the front.

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

He "Always Gets His Man"—How 'Bout His Girl?

"Trooper O'Neill."

Produced by Fox. Directed by C. R. Wallace and Scott Dunlap.

Trooper O'Neill ..... Charles Jones
Marie ..... Beatrice Burnham
Pierre ..... Francis McDonald
Black Flood ..... Claude Payton
Brad ..... Sidney Jordan
Paul ..... Jack Rollens
Jules Lestrange ..... Carl Formes

By Mae Tinee.

IT is, without doubt, the day of the Royal Northwest Mounted policeman. He's the pursuer who, fact and fable agree in asserting, "always gets his man." There's a halo of romance about his soft-brimmed hat; a thrill in the way he sits his softly stepping horse; something fearsome in the steady, clear gaze of him. Perhaps he can't vie with the cowboy in throwing a rope, but the cowboy could learn about jiu-jitsu from him. Yes, without a doubt, judging from many pictures, the Canadian redcoat is the thriller of the hour.

The Thriller of the Hour.

Mr. Jones, who has evidently remonstrated, and with success, against the nickname "Buck," isn't the kind of idol who will set the matinée girl gulping at his first appearance and carry her gasping through the five reels of the picture till the grand finale. He isn't the kind of idol any reviewer will describe as a finished actor. In fact, I believe he's rather amateurish.

Just the same, there's something real about him, convincing you in his worst moments that, if actually called upon to face a difficult situation, he might surprise the world and carry his victims helpless and screeching to a well earned vat of oil.

In the story Trooper O'Neill has only two months to go before his time with the Royal Mounted is up. His superior officer wishes him to sign up again (or whatever they do every so often), but Mr. O'Neill is adamant. He wants to go home to see his mother. I reckon from the name she lives in Ireland.

"Before you go, then," says the captain, "there's been a murder committed. Man by the name of Dell. Get the murderer."

Trooper O'Neill, accompanied by his rookie, starts forth. He does a bit of Sherlocking which convinces him the murderer will have a wound in the right side.

Shortly after he meets the one girl. He loves her. She loves him. He holds her in his arms. As he releases her she sinks to the ground, writhing in pain.

"It is nothing," she says, "nothing. Only the wound in my side hurts so when you touch it."

And Trooper O'Neill, believing her the murderess——?

"It's nothing," she says.

See the picture for the solution. It's not a great picture; but, in many ways it's a pleasing picture. The great fault, I should say, lies in the linking together of the various sections of the story. Perhaps, too, Trooper O'Neill becomes rather mygawdish and melodramatic at times. Just the same you feel he's doing THAT for the camera; that in real life he'd be different.

ANSWERS

C. B. A.: That was a nice letter. Thanks! Carlyle Blackwell was born in Troy, Pa., in 1888. He was educated in Syracuse, N. Y. He was on the stage for some years and on the screen for some more. He's five feet, eleven inches tall, weighs 155 pounds, and has dark eyes and hair. If there is anything more you want to ask about him—ask us. We may not know—but ask us just the same.

J. H. C.: No, the Joseph Schenck who sang in the follies last year is not Norma Talmadge's husband. The latter has never been heard to sing that we know of.

RITA DE PARIS: Admire Monte Blue, do you? Not that I know of. Well, he was born in Indianapolis in 1890. Educated at Purdue. Grew so tall his mother was worried about him for awhile. Then he stopped—so that was

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

Thirty-fourth paper—"Canterbury Tales," or Fourteenth Century Boterisms.

CHAUCER.

An old man in a lodge within a park;
The chamber walls depicted all around
With portraitures of huntsman, hawk, and hound,
And the hurt deer. He listeneth to the lark,
Whose song comes with the sunshine through the dark
Of painted glass in leaden lattice bound;
He listeneth and he laugheth at the sound,
Then writeth in a book like any clerk.
He is the poet of the dawn, who wrote
The Canterbury Tales, and his old age
Made beautiful with song; and as I read
I hear the crowing cock, I hear the note
Of lark and linnet, and from every page
Rise odors of ploughed field or flowery mead.
HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW.

After 500 years ["its 500 now] have closed over the sightful postures which formed the living originals of the poet's descriptions, his pages impress the fancy with the momentary credence that they are still alive; as if Time had rebuilt his ruins, and were enacting the lost scenes of existence.
THOMAS CAMPBELL (the poet).

THE way to read Chaucer is to plunge in. This approaching him through "modernizations," and "renderings" into the speech of our time, is a roundabout and purblind (using that word in Tennyson's, not Shakespeare's, sense) business that blurs—when it does not destroy—nine-tenths of the beauty and charm of the dear man. Of all the books that give a man who hath any gusto for words what Chaucer himself would have called a "peyne" such an inutile thing as a "modern reader's Chaucer" is the premier. It is a lazy man's way to—nothing. From the time of Dryden to the time of Percy MacKaye such an experiment—well-meant but essentially impertinent—has never been successful. When Aubrey de Vere asked Norton of Harvard to repeat the experiment, "for the sake of rendering Chaucer more popular among the careless and indolent," the great Dantean refused to do it, saying that to him "much of the essential charm of Chaucer lies in his very words," and that "the best modernizations of the 'Tales' have lost that morning freshness of idiom, that clear, springlike tone which makes his verse the simplest and gladdest that ever was written."

There are, as a matter of fact, only from four to five hundred wholly obsolete words in Chaucer—only so many as would make some thirty-five lines (four inches) in this article.

Chaucer's English is not to be thought of as dead and dusty. It is as living and as savory as the English of Synge's peasants is. The men who spoke it were the men who marched under Edward III. and conquered kingdoms; the men who, sickening of Richard II.'s philanderings, put a real man on the throne; the men who were your fathers some twelve to fifteen times removed. The lives of six men, each 90 years of age, would span the centuries that separate us from Caucer's heyday. (That is a trick of computation I learned out of Thoreau. How neatly it knits up the ages and how closely makes us kin with antiquity.)

Reading Chaucer as Chaucer wrote is the finest game in all the pleasant fields of literature. A child can enjoy it; an old man, even if he have not a collegiate background, can by means of it make himself a scholar in our language. Tackle a passage! Be not dismayed by long disused word-endings, nor by "such" when it is spelled "swich," and "then" when it presents itself to you as "thanne." Employ a little Yankee contriving, and, when you read in the "general prologue" to "The Canterbury Tales" of Geoffrey Chaucer that the pretty prioress, Madame Eglentyne, was "so charitable and so pitous" that she would weep if men smote one of her little hounds with a "yerde," you might mind you of the word yardstick, and, so minding, leap to the conclusion that "yerde" means stick. You would leap to some purpose, for "yerde" does mean rod or stick. Likewise keep current mispronunciations and distortions of words in mind when you are reading Chaucer, and jokes and plays on words that the small boys and the buffoons on the stage make. Then coming on "wif" in Chaucer you will smile and say "Some time lately it was good for a laugh to pronounce the word 'wife' as if it were spelled 'wif.'" And you thus will have the right translation of Chaucer's "wif" or "wyf," though the word sometimes, I think, also means "betrothed" in his text.

The important matter is to read Chaucer not alone with the eye but with the lips. Read him valiantly aloud, not in a murmur, but with full bodied stress. If the meaning of one of his words eludes you, experiment with it. Broaden or shorten the vowels in it. "Techying" becomes instantly obvious if we pronounce the first syllable as if there were two e's in it. Drop, when balled, final syllables, or turn two syllables into one, or substitute an a for a final "en." Speak out some of the words precisely as Chaucer's spelling makes them sound and you will find that they make precisely the sound some illiterate persons give them today. That will give you a humbling pause, for you will wonder whether those persons are so much illiterate as merely belated. Per-

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"Glimpses of the Moon," by Edith Wharton.
"Robin," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett.
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Simon Called Peter," by the Rev. Robert Keable. (Censorship dildos in Boston have renewed the demand for this good book.)
"The Vehement Flame," by Margaret Deland.
"Gentle Julia," by Booth Tarkington.

NONFICTION.

"The Outline of Science" [Vol. II.], by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson.
"Where the Strange Trails Go Down," by E. Alexander Powell.
"Behind the Mirrors," anonymous.
"Books and Characters," by Lytton Strachey.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:
"Memoirs of a Midget," by Walter de la Mare.
"Peter Whiffle," by Carl Van Vechten.
"The Vehement Flame," by Margaret Deland.
"Upstream: An American Chronicle," by Ludwig Lewisohn.
"The Story of Mankind," by H. W. Van Loon.
"The Outline of Science," by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson.

By Fanny Butcher.

"ROBIN," the sequel to "The Head of the House of Coombe," has finally arrived to slake the grievous thirst of those who drank deep of Mrs. Burnett's first cup and have, these months, cried piteously for more.

It is a book for those who, upon being questioned as to the play they want to see, say: "Let's go to something where I can have a good cry. I just love a good cry." It will probably give the tear glands more exercise than anything since "The Wide Wide World." It ought to make Laura Jean Libbey, Bertha M. Clay, Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, and Augusta May Evans shed celestial tears of envy.

MRS. FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

It is, in a word, the apotheosis of a "love story."

It concerns the wooing and winning of Robin Gareth-Lawless, daughter of the woman whom the Head of the House of Coombe has been providing with a smart little house in a smart little street. That she is wooed and won by the young god who is destined to be the future Head of the House is only the beginning of a string of circumstances which would add fame even to the great melodramatists of history.

You remember that she had seen him as a child—for a week—until his mother snatched him away lest he be contaminated? You remember also that "The Head of the House of Coombe" ended with their meeting at a large party—Robin's first party? As the indulgers in the American language have it, "You don't know the half of it, dearie."

War is heavy over England. Donal enlists. He and Robin meet—through a hundred pages or so of the most—shall we say—idyllic lovemaking that ever made one grateful that one's own young man is an honest American citizen and not a potential marquis. Their secret is never to be told. The inexorable hand lifts Donal from London and throws him down in France. Because their love has been so beautiful, they cannot defile it by writing letters to each other. Keeping their secret is so much more beautiful to them than knowing whether the other is alive or dead that, although they love one another beyond all former loves of the classics, they send no word one to the other. Until word comes that Donal has been killed—"blown to atoms"—Robin is so happy that people turn around on the street to get a glimpse of her unearthly beauty.

What They'll Do: Some Projects of the Players

By Sheppard Butler.

MRS. A. C. V. writes: "What will be given this fall? I thought you could certainly furnish me with the latest."

Well, lady, yours is a large order, and filling it will involve the compilation of reading matter perhaps more statistical than sprightly. Still, no doubt something can be done. Not all the players have made up their minds, and not all who have made them up will refrain from changing them, but there are some certainties and a number of probabilities that may be of interest. Glancing hurriedly through the Who's Who of people that seem to count in the theater, one encounters these high lights of information:

MISS ETHEL BARRYMORE. [Fairchild photo.]

George Arliss will devote the season to touring the country in "The Green Goddess," the highly effective melodrama with which William Archer, the veteran English journalist, has proved to an astonished world that a critic can write a play. . . . Miss Fay Bainter will abandon "East Is West" for something new, as yet unidentified. . . . Miss Ethel Barrymore will take the Longacre theater in New York for two years of repertory, appearing in plays by Shakespeare, Ibsen, Hauptmann, O'Neill, and others. . . . Nobody knows what John Barrymore will do, least of all, I suspect, John Barrymore himself. . . . Lionel Barrymore will act in "The Fountain," something about the Ponce de Leon legend by the rising and amazingly prolific Eugene O'Neill. . . . Jacob Ben-Ami probably will participate in "The Mysterious Affair," a curious trick play to be imported from Berlin. . . . Richard Bennett will have Channing Pollock's serious and sociological drama, "The Fool." . . . Harry Beresford, late of "Shavings," will appear in an adaptation of Don Marquis' story, "The Old Soak."

Leo Carillo will submit "Mike Angelo," a new comedy by Edward Locke. . . . Mrs. Leslie Carter will come to Chicago with John Drew in Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," and plans later to stage a revival of "Du Barry." . . . Miss Ruth Chatterton will act with Henry Miller in Henri Bataille's "La Tendresse," which, they say, contains a fine part for Miss Chatterton. . . . Miss Ina Claire is considering a venture with Bruce McRae in "The Awful Truth," by Arthur Richman. . . . Miss Patricia Collinge, recently a nonacting resident of Chicago, will return to the stage in "The Romantic Age," by A. A. Milne, author of the delightful "Mr. Pim Passes By." . . . Miss Jane Cowl will have a new play, but has not told what it is to be.

MISS PATRICIA COLLINGE. [Copyright: Mollett.]

Lee Ditrichstein will act in "The Mountebank of Emotions," an ironic comedy by Ben Hecht of Chicago. . . . The Duncan Sisters will step forth in "The Heavenly Twins," which they wrote themselves while they were cavorting with Fred Stone in "Tip-Top." . . . Julian Eltinge will emerge from vaudeville to appear in "The Vanishing Lady," by Glen MacDonough and Raymond Hubbell. . . . Miss Geraldine Farrar, 'tis said, may desert grand opera and become a Belasco star in "Ballerina des Königs," a gay comedy about Frederick the Great and a dancer which Leopoldin Konstantine, whom we saw once in "Sumurun," is now playing in Berlin. . . . William Faversham probably will appear in "The Star Sapphire," a new comedy by Robert Housum, who wrote "The Gypsy Trail." . . . Miss Elsie Ferguson will subdue her desire to become a filmeuse again and act in something called "The Wheel," by James Bernard Fagan. . . . Miss Pauline Frederick, absent from the spoken drama since 1914, will be seen in "The Guilty One," which bears the signatures of Michael Morton, author of "The Yellow Ticket," and Peter Traill, about whom I know nothing.

Walter Hampden will vary his fine Shakespearean performances (among

Some twenty-five thousand people dine at the North American every week. And these men and women like our food so well, and so heartily approve of our Common Sense plan of doing business, that on Sundays and Holidays many of them bring their entire families here to dine. So, while many dining places close up on Sundays and Holidays, both of these are very busy days here at the North American.

Our location is convenient—right on the corner of State and Monroe Streets—easily reached by all surface and L lines and with ample parking space for automobiles. The Children are always welcome (about 3000 eat here every week) and we have plenty of special high-chairs for them. The restaurant is a big, beautiful room with high "airy" ceilings and pleasing decorations. The air is always fresh and pure and cool no matter how hot it is outside. And another delightful feature is the fact that here there are no waiters to hurry you away after you have finished dining. You are welcome to stay just as long as you like.

Furthermore, Chicago people have learned that our extremely big portions—with no extra charge when they are shared by two people—and the fact that they serve themselves and pay only for the food they eat, makes the cost of dining here no greater than dining at home.

which he will give prominence to his recent production of "Othello") with some acting in "The Black Flag," a new and fantastic comedy by A. E. Thomas. . . . Miss Elsie Janis is mentioned as the possible star of a Dillingham musical comedy called "The Bunch and Judy." . . . Miss Doris Keane will act another season in "The Czarina," a humorous treatment of certain episodes in the career of Catherine II. of Russia. . . . Miss Madge Kennedy will have the leading rôle in Frank Craven's new comedy, "Spite Corner." . . . Wilton Lackaye will go in for baffiement, with Crane Wilbur's mystery melodrama, "The Monster." . . . Miss Francine Larrimore names "Nancy Stair" as her play for the new season—perhaps a dramatization of Elinor Macartney Lane's pseudo-historical romance about a young Scotchwoman which appeared eighteen years ago. Miss Larrimore tells nothing about it, nor does she mention "Another Scandal," which Cosmo Hamilton started writing for her. . . . Miss Pauline Lord will go on tour with O'Neill's "Anna Christie." . . . Alfred Lunt, seen here with Miss Burke in "The Intimate Strangers," will be the central figure in a new Tarkington comedy, "Cunnel Blake," designed originally for Lionel Barrymore.

Miss Marjorie Rambeau will play a while longer in "The Goldfish," an adaptation of something European by Gladys Unger, and may appear thereafter in Bayard Veiller's "The Divine Crook," impersonating a lady of crime who disguises herself by submitting to an operation in plastic surgery. . . . Miss May Robson will have a comedy called "Mother's Millions," by one Howard McKent Barnes. . . . Joseph Schildkraut will appear in a Theater Guild production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," and later, with Miss Eva Le Gallienne, in "Romeo and Juliet." . . . Otis Skinner will revive Booth Tarkington's "Mister Antonio," with some revisions by the playwright on the moot topic of personal liberty. . . . Sothern and Marlowe will not act at all, carrying out their announced intention of devoting every other year to leisure. . . . Miss Frances Starr will have "Shore Leave," a seagoing comedy by Hubert Osborne. . . . Miss Laurette Taylor speaks of appearing in a dramatic version of Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque." . . . Miss Lenore Ulric will continue her performances of "Kiki," a Parisian romance of no great consequences, wherein she acts flamingly and submits a pathologically interesting portrayal of catalepsy. . . . David Warfield will realize at last his ancient ambition to play the Jew in "The Merchant of Venice," with settings by Mr. Belasco.

"To the Ladies!" Soon.

"To the Ladies!" the gay comedy by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, the authors of "Dulcy," is now appointed as one of the new season's earliest offerings in Chicago. It will arrive at Cohan's Grand on the night of Sunday, Aug. 20. Since last March the piece has had tentative bookings at the Blackstone, but the amazing prosperity of "Lightnin'" makes it unlikely that Frank Bacon and his associates will make way soon for anything else at that playhouse, and the switch to Cohan's Grand accordingly was effected last week.

Miss Helen Hayes will be the star of the proceedings, and the principal man's rôle will be acted by Allen Kerns, a "juvenile" of the period's fashion who has been vis-a-vis for a year with Miss Julia Sanderson in the tuned matter called "Tangerine." Otto Kruger, who had the part in the New York run of the comedy, was, it is explained, impressed into service for the rôle because young Mr. Kerns was unavailable, while the former was amply so through the failure of the "Alias Jimmy Valentine" revival, in which he was employed.

As to the authors of "To the Ladies!" their herald in Chicago submits this no doubt authentic reminder:

"They are, by the way, the intendants, régisseurs, play-readers, impresarii, entrepreneurs, directors, and committee of appeals for The Forty-Niners, George C. Tyler's contribution to the 'little theater' idea. As has been explained in THE TRIBUNE, a small house, the Punch-and-Judy, seating the conventional 299 persons, has been taken in New York, and will be devoted to the staging of plays on all topics and themes, and of all lengths. Chicago's dramaturgic talent has already responded to the appeal of the Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly with plays on the subject of (1) a Swiss riding teacher and an American heiress, (2) a Gold Coast bud who forgets to show up at the church to be married, (3) a flaneur of the Union Loop who issues rate cards and other devices explaining the terms on which he will marry wealthy widows, pecunious actresses, etc., and (4) a Gold Coast matron who, on debt-paying day, entertains her tradesmen in the drawing room."

More Plays in Prospect.

The Olympic, after its forthcoming two weeks of Fiske O'Hara in "Land o' Romance," will give shelter on Aug. 27 to "The Rubicon," a palpitant and plain spoken drama, which, in New York, abashed even the critics. Something of its nature may be gleaned from the interested prediction of a manager concerned in its arrival here that he will "probably be pinched." Miss Violet Heming has had the play's principal rôle hitherto, but she will be succeeded in Chicago by Miss Estelle Winwood, a fine actress, who was prominent in the New York performances of Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," coming to the new Selwyn with somebody else in the Winwood rôle.

Further tidings concerning the Olympic are that "The Rubicon" will be followed there in October by Fritz Leiber in Shakespearean répertory, that Fannie Hurst's "Back Pay" will come in November, and that Mr. Mantell will arrive for his annual engagement in December.

Mme. Olga Petrova's trip to Italy, it seems, will not interfere with her promised appearance in Chicago in September. "She's gone," writes one who knows, "to get atmosphere for her new play, 'The Harlot's House,' which she intends to act next season. It's really big stuff—sordid but powerful. Real Slavic touch. The scene she is after is laid in Naples. . . . She is an ex-newspaper woman, you know." [I didn't.] Meanwhile, Mme. Petrova's appointment for Chicago is for Sept. 3, at the Playhouse, in something Spanish and feministic which she wrote herself, called "The White Peacock."

The beauteous Miss Edna Goodrich has been added to the revised cast of Samuel Shipman's "Lawful Larceny," other important figures therein being Miss Belle Bennett and Lowell Sherman, late of "The Tavern" and the Arbuckle affair. It is not unlikely that the play will be sent to the Woods to fill the time intervening before Frank Craven's arrival in "The First Year."

Concerning "Sally."

Perfervid, not to say impassioned, words are at hand from the general manager of Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld Jr.'s New York office. Since "Sally" is coming to Chicago soon, they should, perhaps, be made a matter of record. Thus:

"It is high time that the flood of vague and conflicting rumors, innuendoes, falsehoods, and wild misstatements concerning the cast of 'Sally' for the coming season should be officially checked. The personnel of this original and only company will remain unchanged, with the exception of three or four members of the chorus. Miss Marilyn Miller will resume the title rôle, which she has played for nearly two years. Her contract has a long time to run. Miss Miller has repeatedly affirmed her intention to keep it. Mr. Ziegfeld has never had any intention of replacing her.

"Rumors and insinuations that Miss Dorothy Dickson or Miss Mary Eaton will replace Miss Miller have not the slightest basis of truth. Miss Eaton is a principal in the 'Ziegfeld Follies,' and will so remain the coming season. Miss Dickson, who created the rôle of Sally in the London production, is to be seen in the early fall, in the British capital, in a new work by P. G. Wodehouse, George Grossmith, and Jerome Kern. The latter has just gone to Europe to complete the music. Mr. Ziegfeld has never considered, or negotiated with, Miss Dickson or Miss Eaton to succeed Miss Miller.

"So much for that. The public should not be confused by mischievous gossip or mistaken newspaper rumors. Mr. Ziegfeld, as the sole owner of the most unique and successful of musical plays, is certainly entitled to the privilege of determining who shall be its interpreters."

On the other hand, an important member of the "Sally" company, visiting in Chicago last week, reported that the play's affairs are "all up in the air," that nobody knows what its future will be, and that everybody concerned will be at the dock when Mr. Ziegfeld arrives from Europe, timorously awaiting developments.

And Marilyn three thousand miles away!

Theater Notes.

John Golden, announcing his plans for the season, submits an impressive list of plays, including, in addition to those already announced, a new one by Winchell Smith; two by Frank Craven, in one of which, "Early to Bed," the vaudeville mimic, Chic Sale, will appear; "Easy Come, Easy Go," by Montague Glass; "Happy New Year," by Viola Brothers Shore, and "Thrills," by Vincent Lawrence.

Miss Elizabeth Risdon, present for many months at the Playhouse in "The Nightcap," will be George Arliss' leading woman in his future performances of "The Green Goddess." The play is still hopefully headed for Chicago and may arrive, they say, in September.

Frank A. P. Gazzolo's ventures in resident stock at the Victoria and Imperial theaters will not be resumed this season. The Victoria, on the north side, has been leased to Conrad Seidemann, former director of the German stock company at the Bush temple, who will inaugurate a season of repertory in German on Sept. 9. The Imperial, on the west side, will become a home of burlesque.

Mr. Gazzolo takes over the Studebaker on Oct. 1, but the change of management, it appears, will not greatly affect the scheme of things at that playhouse. An arrangement has been made whereby the Shuberts will supply the entertainment, as before, with Mr. Gazzolo and his associates attending only to the internal (and, of course, financial) affairs of the theater.

MISS ESTELLE WINWOOD.
[Campbell Photo.]

She comes to the Olympic on Aug. 27 as the central figure in "The Rubicon," a daring and outspoken importation from Europe. Chicago has seen her in a number of things, among them Jesse Lynch Williams' "Why Marry?" and Somerset Maugham's "Too Many Husbands."

Thomas to Iron Out Varied Ills of the Theaters

The New York Times.

NEW YORK, July 29.—[Special.]—Quite the biggest news from Broadway in recent months is that of the appointment of Augustus Thomas, dean of American playwrights, this week, to head the Producing Managers' association. The news might come under the head of technical show business, and therefore be of slight interest to the public, were it not for the personality selected by the managers to help them pull together toward a better theater and the possible relation of the public to that theater.

There are three points of contact between Mr. Thomas and the various elements that compose the theater, these elements being the managers themselves, the actors, musicians and others who work in the theater, and the public. The adjustments that Mr. Thomas may help to make among the managers will savor more or less of the shop and will be of no particular moment to the public except as they affect certain broad policies. They will be theater adjustments that come from differences that are apt to arise between half a hundred men engaged in an intensely competitive and highly strung business.

But two important aspects of Mr. Thomas' appointment, so far as the public is concerned, have to do with how he may act as a buffer between the actors and managers, and the latter and the public. When the actors went on strike three years ago Mr. Thomas was one of the arbiters principally responsible for bringing the warring factions together. In fact, he probably did more than any other person to settle the strike. The settlement embraced a basic agreement between actors and managers to last for five years. This will expire a year from next June, and if in the meantime a common ground for continued relations has not been found a similar debacle may result.

Undoubtedly behind the appointment of Mr. Thomas lies the hope that in the intervening time a solution of the Equity shop, which Equity is working for and which the managers are opposing, may be found.

One of the greatest benefits to the public that can come from the new order is the correction of the ticket speculation abuse. A majority of managers are said to be in favor of curbing the brokers and giving the public a chance to buy seats at box office prices, or, if through brokers, at a reasonable advance, but to date no plan has been suggested by the producing managers that has met with the approval of those other producing managers who also control theaters.

The position of the latter has been that, until some plan approved by them has been suggested, they will continue to run their theaters as they see fit, selling tickets being, in their opinion, a part of their business. The producers who do not control the theaters, on the other hand, contend that when they book a play inn a theater they become partners in the enterprise and should have a voice in saying how it is to be run.

If the new executive chairman is able to reconcile the two camps the public will benefit greatly, and it is violating no confidence to state that this is one of the things the men who conceived the plan of his election hope to accomplish.

Starting the Season.

Now is the time when producers' promises begin to look like theatrical facts—or fade away. The news is of out-of-town openings, as it has been for several weeks, and, more to the point, of productions going into rehearsal. For instance, in the last few days it has been reported that A. H. Woods' production of "Lonely Wives," an adaptation from the German by Walter De Leon and Mark Swan, is now being rehearsed, as is also "Lights Out," by Paul Dickey and Mann Paige, which Mrs. Henry B. Harris will present at the Vanderbilt theater on Aug. 14. The new "Greenwich Village Follies" is also under way with John Murray Anderson directing, as usual. And there are others.

This, of course, means that the actors are returning to town from vacations and work at home and abroad. This week, for example, brought Miss Edith Day from Europe to begin rehearsals in the musical version of "The Marriage of Kitty," a new Victor Herbert piece which Edward Royce will put on at the Fulton theater in September. Miss Margaret Lawrence also came in from abroad and will begin rehearsals at once in James Forbes' "The Endless Chain," which A. L. Erlanger will produce. Miss Madge Saunders was another who landed, her destination being "Tons of Money," the English farce which Charles Dillingham will sponsor.

Chiefly interesting among next week's out of town openings is that of "A Serpent's Tooth," with Miss Marie Tempest in the principal part, at Asbury Park, Monday night. Miss Tempest has not been seen here since the season of 1914-1915, just before she began her recently completed tour of the world, or most of it. Her plays of that remote season, it may be remembered, were "Art and Opportunity," "Mary Goes First," "At the Barn," "The Marriage of Kitty," "The Duke of Killicrankie," and "Rosalind." Her present comedy is the work of Arthur Richman and John Golden is its producer.

The mention of out of town offerings brings Atlantic City to mind, of course, and there are two there Monday night—"The Monster," by Crane Wilbur, which Joseph M. Gaites is producing, with Wilton Lackaye in the leading rôle, which had its first presentation at Stamford last week, and David Belasco's production, "Shore Leave," by Hubert Osborne, with Miss Frances Starr as the head of the cast. The latter play will come straight to New York, after its tryout, arriving at the Lyceum on Tuesday, Aug. 8. It will be preceded in the same week by "Whispering Wires," which the Shuberts will bring to the Forty-ninth Street theater on Monday, the 7th, following a tryout in Asbury Park.

According to a report from London, Gilbert Miller, son of Henry Miller, has engaged Miss Ina Claire to play in Arthur Richman's "The Awful Truth," which his father recently tried out on the Pacific coast, with Miss Ruth Chatterton in the leading rôle. This is in apparent conflict with a previous announcement from Charles Dillingham, which stated that Miss Claire would appear in the new Anne Caldwell-Jerome Kern musical comedy, "The Bunch and Judy." But it does not leave Miss Chatterton unaccounted for, the report concerning her being to the effect that she will appear in Henri Bataille's "La Tendresse," which Mr. Miller Sr. has also produced on the coast.

"The Valley of Content," a novel by Mrs. Blanche Upright, is being dramatised by Miss Marjorie Rambeau and the author.

Calle Carlton has engaged Bernard Granville to appear in "Paradise Alley," which is scheduled to open at the Casino theater in September.

The injuries suffered by David Belasco from a fall in the Lyceum theater did not prevent him from witnessing last Monday night the Asbury Park performance of "Shore Leave."

Miss Florence Eldridge has been engaged for the leading rôle in Somerset Maugham's new play, "East of Suez," which opens at Atlantic City a week from Monday night.

"Mon Homme," by Andre Picard, the author of "Kiki," will be presented in New York in September by Henry Le Baron.

MISS HELEN HAYES.
[Sarony Photo.]

She will open the new season at Cohan's Grand on Aug. 20 as the star of "To the Ladies!" another comedy by the authors of "Dulcy." The play tells the story of an everyday little bride who, beginning married life by looking up to her self-reliant husband, is soon brought to the realization that he can go a long way—only if she push him ahead. Miss Hayes caught the admiration of this public when she acted in "Bab," at the Blackstone, in 1921.

He "Always Gets His Man"—How 'Bout His Girl?

all right. His height is six feet two inches, he weighs 185 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. You girls are beginning to sit up and take notice of other actors than Rodolf, aren't you?

SOME ONE: How can a desert picture be a desert picture without Mr. Valentino? Doesn't he "handle his cigaret wonderfully?" Do I know what brand he smokes?" Whew, and again whew. You say you have seen "The Sheik" for the sixth time. Why don't you see it seven and make the charm complete? Your letter has wrecked the corner, so please excuse answer to "how can a desert picture be a desert picture without Rodolf?"

DEVOUT READER: It has been some time since Ann Little was featured in pictures. Did you see her in "The Blue Fox"? No, Mr. Patrick has not played for the screen, I believe. Thanks— and you're welcome.

A. J. H.: Is Mr. Hays "the modern Hercules cleaning the Augean stables." Ah, time will show. I wonder if you're really right about the other things you say in your letter? I'd give a lot to think so. It was wonderful of you to write so!

Y. M. S.: You stop letting your blood "boil." Whassa use! Ninety-nine years from now—whassa difference? You're nice, Y. M. S., and we're all cheered up.

VIRGINIA A.: Americans.

KICK KORNER

It's Abject Objection.

Dear Mae Tinée: Is it possible there is more than one poor deluded organist in the city who played "Sweet Adelaine" or "The Man from Home"? Or is Loomie Lou a patron of the Jackson Park theater? I dare him to catch me asleep again! THE ORGANIST.

[Editor's Note: Here's an honest woman! No, you were far from being alone.]

Dear Miss Tinee: I profess to be a theater bug, and I confess to be a movie patron. Furthermore, I too, as a kick korner contributor of last Sunday, am interested in the relation and effect of one on the other.

The general conclusion I drew from last week's relation column was that that writer preferred the screen productions to those of the stage. I admit in cases this will hold, as his example proved, but yesterday, after viewing the "The Storm," I realize that the movie, although elaborate with its water and snow, which were beautiful, failed to put over "The Storm" anything like as well as Mr. Belasco.

I saw the Belasco production twice and I considered it superb. It sold me a ticket to the movie yesterday. Now as to the casts of the legit and movie, I believe the movie cast was higher in the scale of public acquaintance than were those players who acted the play. Furthermore, the play was without those spectacular snowslides of the picture, and yet I feel the play far excelled the picture, due to the fact that the movie producer slipped in a few of the vital details that always please the stage audience.

Some of the best lines of the play, which in part were transferred to screen titles, were mashed to pieces and failed to carry the snap of the play.

Why, can you tell me, did not the producer of the picture show those aces to the audience—as did Belasco? Most of us can read cards. And how could any producer overlook that alibi of the city man: "I do not believe in gambling, anyway," after he lost the toss to Burr and was to go for supplies? And for the first time ever I saw in the legit far better fire by electrical effects and the falling of the tree across the cabin than the movie offered. If "The Storm" is an example of the improvement of the movie over the stage productions by elaborateness, kindly help forestall a screen production of "Lightnin'." You know how 'tis. E. A. F.

My Dear Madam: Every time I go to see a picture made from a story I have read I vow it is the last time, but curiosity gets the better of me and once more I fall. Why do they insist on hashing up the story until it is fairly spoiled? I was saved the disappointment of seeing this done to "Sisters," as, fortunately, your review gave me the warning that the plot had been altered, and therefore I stayed away that time.

Last Saturday I went to see "The Dust Flower" and found it mutilated almost beyond recognition and made into a cheap melodrama. The ending was particularly ruined by the namby-pamby, prosaic way it was shown. The ending of the story was clever, I think. If I were Basil King, I would be tempted to tear my hair at being obliged to see my story made into such a mess.

Well, now I have relieved myself of a grievance which I have nursed for some time—ever since I saw "A Girl of Two Worlds." Probably when "Manslaughter" comes around I will fall again and with the same result. Why don't they try putting on the story just as it is written, for once, and see how it comes out?

DISGUSTED.

[Editor's Note: You little old pessimist you!]

BONNY BITS

Dear Miss Tinée: If I may I'll tell you what bonny bit I have seen and enjoyed. First in my mind is the superb acting of Lillian and Dorothy Gish and Monte Blue in "Orphans of the Storm." I have seen that twice and intend to see it again so that I may watch those three act.

Also didn't you love Mary Pickford as "Dearest" in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and Doug as D'Artagnan? Another born actor is Jackie Coogan. His performances in "The Kid" and "My Boy" are, to my mind, above comparison. He is above affectation and his acting, though childlike, shows ability few grownups possess.

My last bonny bit is in reference to "One Clear Call." To my mind, that picture, though practically unadvertised [as most pictures are nowadays], contains the best acting I have ever seen, namely, Irene Rich as Maggie.

BETTY.

Dear Miss Tinée: I read the bonny bits column just begun and imagine my gratefulness when I found I could get this bonny bit off my chest.

"The Woman Who Walked Alone" was the most recent picture I saw and enjoyed.

Let me say that Miss Dalton's personality is magnificent, her acting inimitable. She is lovely. Ah! those dimples—that smile!

Milton Sills was O. K., but Maurice Flynn! Mae Tinée, Rodolfo is beat a million miles. ANNE C. K.

They Laugh at This in Vaudeville

MAJESTIC.

Jed Dooley: O, look at the scenery blowing! The actors are back there telling each other their salaries. My wife and I took our son Bill to church the other day, just so he would know what it was like. His mother nudged Bill and said, "Look, there is the choir." They had those long robes on. My wife said to Bill: "Do you know what they are going to do?" He said: "Sure. Have their hair cut." He went into a store the other day and asked if they had a boys' magazine he likes. The man said yes. Bill said: "Would you mind putting it in the window?" You see, he wanted to read it. Bill came home with a golf ball the other day. His mother asked him where he got it. He said: "Somebody lost it." She said: "Are you sure it was lost?" He said: "Yes, because I saw the man looking for it." I will now sing you a little ditty entitled "No matter how hungry a horse may be, he can't eat a bit." They say these short skirts prevent accidents. I was looking at one today and I knocked a policeman down. He was so mad he blew his whistle for a week. This is the only town I ever saw where they let policemen have toys. I've found out something I can use in my income tax next year. For every bootlegger who's dependent upon you you can deduct $400. Did you know I married one of those Hula Hula dancers? She sure shook a mean piece of seaweed.

Strange Advice on Keeping Cool These Warm Days

By Mme. X.

ARE you feeling the heat of midsummer too much? Does the season's fervid quality and its ardent wooing of the earth, sea, and sky oppress you? Are you irked by the serious responsibility of our complicated civilization, and do these long, languorous days make you want to shed it? If so take to the hammock which hangs on your porch or under the two trees in your backyard and read Lothrop Stoddard's latest contribution to literature, "The Revolt against Civilization."

It will make your overheated blood run cold. It will make your damp hair stand on end. It will make present woes and worries fade into nothingness beside the picture the author gives of what is coming to us.

You will meet for the first time a new and sinister creature, the "Under-Man." Beside him the Neanderthal man is a lovable and gentle animal. The Under-Man is in our midst, while the Neanderthal man died several thousand years ago, which adds to his charms. The Under-Man is the man who has not kept up with the procession. He is numerous and full of vengeance. He wants not only to delay the procession and make it go his gait; he wants to destroy it entirely.

The author makes us dimly apprehend "the vast host of the unadaptable, the incapable, the envious, the discontented, filled with instinctive hatred of civilization and progress, and ready on the instant to rise in revolt." If Mr. Stoddard is right most of us live in a fool's paradise.

Voices in the Wilderness.

It is not the first time that mankind has ignored the voice crying in the wilderness. Cassandra's warnings to the ancients went unheeded. The Israelites would not listen to Elijah or the other prophets. The English gave no heed to Lord Roberts of Kandahar when he went up and down the land warning his countrymen against the unmistakable plans of their neighbors across the North sea.

So it is possible that Mr. Stoddard's contemporaries will regard "The Revolt Against Civilization" as the vaporings of a misanthrope, a man whose sense of proportion is out of joint. If they do they will have to ignore the close connection he indicates as existing between socialism, anarchism, nihilism, syndicalism, and bolshevism.

Of the two last named he says: "The significance of syndicalism and its outgrowth, bolshevism, can hardly be overestimated. It is no exaggeration to say it is the most terrible social phenomenon that the world has ever seen. In syndicalism we have for the first time in human history a full fledged philosophy of the under man—the prologue of that vast revolt against civilization which, with Russian bolshevism, has actually begun."

Doesn't that bring the shivers on even the hottest afternoon? It ought to. He holds that we can form no prediction as to future developments from anything that has happened in the past, because, while the present state is an outcome of the past, it is also a complete departure from anything hitherto known and is infused with all the putrid gasses that are bred by degenerate, incapable, numerous, and unbalanced humanity.

Lenin, himself, said that: "Among 100 so called bolsheviki there is one real bolshevik, with thirty-nine criminals and sixty fools." And this is the army which is trying to overwhelm and destroy our present civilization.

This is the summer literature that this column advises its readers to undertake. You'll forget for the time heat, flies, mosquitoes, etc.

The Caravan of Motor Cars.

I wonder how the spectacle of the thousands of automobiles which in the late hours of a fair summer Sunday can be seen on every highroad entering Chicago would affect they swarm citywards, each car not more than ten or fifteen feet from its neighbors in front and behind. This is no parade of the domineering, oppressive rich. Except for a few shining cars, whose glitter bespeaks wealth, the tremendous procession is composed of dirty, travel worn autos of many makes and vintages, filled with a tightly packed in throng of happy, hot, dusty mortals, men in their shirt sleeves, women hatless and disheveled, children—lots of children! smiling and sticky, all the varied elements which go to make up the rank and file of this great republic.

Are these people going to support and make part of a movement which will certainly, as proved in Russia, destroy their cars, their phonographs, their player pianos, in short, all the material paraphernalia that goes to make this splendid, though material, civilization of ours?

If the statistics of automobile manufacturers and car salesmen are correct, there is in this country an auto for every nine of the inhabitants. Are these families going, in the name of revolution, to throw these household luxuries into the holocaust which the leaders of the revolt offer them?

Disagreeing with Utilitarians.

Speaking of destruction, it is not only bolsheviki who seem to delight in destruction. Those supposedly of the present order of things are not averse to it in this part of the land. Where else in the world would you find a people proposing to pull down and utterly annihilate a building which has been considered by the best authorities not only the most beautiful structure in the country, but in the whole of modern architecture from Greece to Mongolia.

Yet that is what is being urged upon Chicago by a group of men. The Fine Arts building in Jackson park was pronounced by Prof. Jay Bambige of Harvard in a lecture before the University of Chicago which he delivered last year as, next to the Parthenon at Athens, the most perfect example of Greek architecture to be found today. Yet here in our own city there are folk who would tear it down and wipe out all signs of it.

Fortunately there are champions of our choicest piece of architecture, who are rising to defend its existence. George W. Maher is the energetic head of a committee which is working to preserve it. To satisfy the utilitarians who would destroy what seems to have outlived its usefulness, this committee presents a table of statistics as to the cost of repair and renovation and makes suggestions as to the many uses to which the building could be put when set in order.

Possibilities of the Building.

One of these would connect it with the splendid work which is being done by the Art institute. After the world's fair of 1893 the French government presented the city of Chicago with a fine collection of architectural casts, some of which are now to be seen in Blackstone hall in the institute, but much of which, for lack of space, lie hidden in storerooms. It is suggested that this collection, together with such other material for which there is no space in our art gallery, should be installed in the Fine Arts building. It would be accessible to the students, as the latter is only a ten minutes' ride from the institute. This would give the institute more room for the many riches it is annually accumulating and provide a spacious asylum for the collections which are so invaluable to the art student.

Other suggestions as to possible uses for the restored Fine Arts building are to make it a great community recreational and art center, or a place for the exhibit of Chicago artists who have great difficulty in securing galleries in which to display their work. It is also a possible home for an industrial art school, an enterprise of much possible worth for Chicago. It would likewise make an ideal place to try out theater drop curtains, which would really come under the head of industrial art. These and other plans are offered by the report from Mr. Maher and his committee.

Whatever is the ultimate decision, it is devoutly to be hoped that it will be to preserve for all time the most beautiful building ever achieved by an American architect, and let us not forget that Charles Atwood was that architect. He died many years ago, but his name should be preserved high on the scroll of our great men.

In Faraway Biarritz.

Chicagoans do not, as a rule, let the grass grow under their feet even when their feet are treading foreign soil. In faraway Biarritz there is a Chicago colony which is setting a cheerful, if not rapid, pace. Of course, Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams lead the procession. They have a lovely villa at Bidart, which is within a short motoring distance of this well known French seaside resort.

They gave a great fête on the Fourth of July, to which a long string of titled folk went, such as the Count and Countess de Montesquieu-Fezensac, Count and Countess Jean d'Arcangues, and Princess Gortchakoff, names which mean a great deal in Paris society.

Names that mean as much in Chicago society as these do in Paris were not altogether wanting. Mrs. Robert H. McCormick, Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Heward, and Mrs. Barrett Wendell and family are all in Biarritz and were undoubtedly at the McWilliams' party.

The McWilliams villa, which is six miles out of Biarritz, is situated high on a cliff overlooking in one direction the Bay of Biscay and on the other the steep and cloud capped Pyrennees mountains. It has lately been enlarged and its gardens embellished and is now generally conceded to be the loveliest dwelling in that part of France. The entertainments given there are also the "talk of the town," and invitations are eagerly sought by all the nearby residents and the visitors to that fashionable seaside resort.

Winterbothams in France.

Mrs. Winterbotham is occupying a delicious little villa, the Villa Charles, which is set in a charming garden and looks out on the wide beach and the tumbling sea. She and her daughter, Miss Louise Winterbotham, are having a gay and delightful summer. They will stay in France another year probably before returning to make their home in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, who left Chicago at the same time that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham Jr. did to live in New York, are returning here this autumn. Mr. Baldwin is in town looking for a house to which to bring his family in October. We lament the departing and welcome the return with the same enthusiasm.

Earlier in the season we announced the destruction of the entire leisure class of the community when Edward T. Blair and Frank Cramer, its two exponents and only members, departed for foreign parts. News now comes of their whereabouts. They are both in France. Mr. Blair is in Dinard, looking after Brittany, while Mr. Cramer was, until lately, giving a careful scrutiny to the neighboring province, Normandy. There at Houlgat he was with other Chicagoans, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ryerson and Mrs. Arthur Cable. Now he has gone to "take the cure" at Vichy. Later he, too, will join the Chicago colony at Biarritz.

Thus passes our leisure class. When shall we see it or its like again?

Turning our eyes from the east to the west, we note others of our fellow citizens diverting themselves in southern California. At Santa Barbara, where there is quite a delegation of Chicagoites, they have lately been indulging in a new experience.

A big new "movie" is being evolved, "The Voice from the Minaret," in which Norma Talmadge is the heroine. The scene is laid in India and, for the great polo game which is feature of the story, the company went to Santa Barbara. There they set the Bombay polo field and peopled it with gorgeous crowds, 200 Santa Barbarians being among them as part of the governor general's party.

When you see the place, try if you can pick out Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dempster, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Isham, and others from the windy city seated in fine raiment at the tea tables watching the spirited polo which is being played by the two local teams, though the stage is set in India.

The charming Spanish house of the Edward L. Ryersons, where they usually spend the late winter and spring, is occupied for the summer by their daughter, Mrs. Donald Frost, of Boston, and her husband and three children. Other ex-Chicagoans who make their permanent home in the neighborhood of Santa Barbara are Mr. and Mrs. William Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coleman Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William P. Nelson (though the last named are in Europe for the moment), and Mrs. Craig Hebberton, who was Miss Mary Cooke of an old Chicago family, before she married.

Land of the Lotus Eater.

She and her husband have a delightful Spanish house set in a Spanish garden. It is a type of architecture peculiarly appropriate to and popular in Santa Barbara. The scenery and vegetation correspond to the setting usually associated with this style of building. The gay colors of the roofs and awnings, the charming iron balconies, the tinted plaster walls, and the occasionally ornate trimmings all suit that semi-tropic landscape, with its intensely blue skies and sea, its purple mountains, its dark foliaged trees and its brilliant flowers.

Southern California is essentially the land of the lotus eater, and those who settle there leave memory and ambitions with the past behind them. They talk chiefly of climate. They have little interest in literature, art or music. They are a happy, care-free race, preferring earthquakes to thunderstorms—the two are said not to grow on the same bush—and there is for the residents of that part of the world only one bugbear. The Japanese question haunts them a little, though the conference at Washington last winter soothed these fears almost to extinction.

A propos of flowers, the Lotus Festival flower and garden show is going on now, having opened yesterday there in the Gorton school. If today is like today it ought to see thousands visiting the exhibit and the four pleasure gardens open to the public for inspection. These are the estates of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] B. Clow, Mrs. Byron Smith, Jr., and Mrs. Charles Schweppe, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Day, all lovely examples of garden design and horticulture.

Chicago women are successful gardeners whether they cultivate the soil hereabouts or in distant localities. John A. Spoor, who has one of the famous places in the Berkshires, Blythewood, took four first prizes recently in the Lenox Garden club flower show. This was great triumph, as this is considered one of the centers of garden cultivation in the country. Mrs. Edith Wharton's villa [illegible]

Vandals in Leisure Hours.

All by themselves and with no assistance from earthly gardeners, the lovely lotus are blooming and seeding in Grass Lake, near Fox Lake. The seed pods are as fascinating in their way as the pink blossoms, big, flat topped pods with rattling, seeds inside. But do pass the word along that if the public continues to pull these lovely things up by the roots, there will soon be no more of this species of lotus in this hemisphere. This is said to be one of three places where this Egyptian lotus grows wild. The others are in Egypt and, I think, in China, though of this latter I am not quite sure.

It is to be deeply regretted that the holiday making American is such a vandal. His trail lies over the land after an outing, filthy debris and papers and along the roadways a sad litter of wild flowers torn up by their roots and left to wither in the dust. The extermination of our wild flowers is certain unless we mend our ways.

Do you know what they call those little mushroomlike protuberances bubbling up at street interpections which are set to guide but not destroy the too impetuous motorist, the one who used to delight to knock over the good looking lamp posts at such intersections? "Toadstools of Hell" is the polite name for them.

It seems a pity that we had to make such concessions to the inconsiderate drivers of speeding cars. The pedestrian now feels perfectly helpless if he or she have taken refuge on one of the islands in midstream of our mighty street traffic. In the olden times you could crouch behind a nice friendly lamp post if you saw a regular "rip snorter" coming your way. Now you simply have to face death with a calm smile and hope for the interposition of Providence. Those toadstools will never save you from destruction.

Entertain for Horse Show.

The last two days have been especially busy and gay ones for Lake Foresters owing to the horse show, the first one since the summer of 1917. Every one has either been giving or going to give a party. Among the hosts and hostesses have been Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Volney Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Linn, and Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon. It was certainly "one hot time in that old town."

Among this summer's temporary residents of Lake Forest is George H. Porter, who has recently come to occupy the C. M. Trowbridge house in Mayflower road for the season. Another of the summer colony who is taking an active part in the gayeties of the young is Miss Elizabeth Hanna, daughter of the late Daniel Hanna and niece of Mrs. Medill McCormick. Miss Hanna has taken the Leeds Mitchell house in Sheridan road for two months and is a leading spirit in the many entertainments for the younger set. Her aunt, Miss Mary Phelps, is chaperoning her.

Last evening Mitchell D. Follansbee entertained at dinner at the Saddle and Cycle club the distinguished Scotch and English jurist, Lord Shaw of Dunfermline, who is the guest of the American Bar association, and his daughter and M. Aubepin, the equally noted French jurist, who is also the guest of this association. The visitors were here only for a day and left the city soon after dinner for the west.

MRS. EMILY NEWELL BLAIR.
[Harris & Ewing Photo.]

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, recently appointed resident committeewoman of the Democratic national committee at headquarters in Washington, D. C., will be the guest of the Illinois Woman's Democratic club in Chicago next Wednesday. She will be the principal speaker at a rally to be held at the Hotel Sherman at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Thomas F. Donovan, chairman of the Democratic state committee, also will speak.

Mrs. Blair, who has the reputation of being an expert organizer, first in the ranks of the suffrage forces of her own state—Missouri—and later as vice chairman of the League of Women Voters of that state and organization chairman in the states of Mississippi and Florida, was appointed on March 1 to head a nation-wide organization of women in state Democratic clubs. This organization is designed not only to mobilize Democratic women for service to their party, but likewise to attract to the party women not now numbered within its ranks.

The Illinois Woman's Democratic club is one of this chain of state clubs. Its headquarters for the present are with the Iroquois club at 26 North Dearborn street.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

"Le Chemineau," a New Item, to Come to Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

NUMBER two in Ravinia's plan of adding four operas to the repertoire of that starlit haven of the muses is "Le Chemineau," now definitely dated for next Saturday night. This is likely to prove an enterprise as interesting as any other yet undertaken by Mr. Eckstein, who, so far, has done well at Ravinia with works which, ships-in-the-night-like, have been simply hailed in passing by other American opera houses.

Like them, he keeps near to hand the staples of the standard repertoire, from Donizetti and Verdi to Puccini and Massenet; but he has shown a keen news sense of what Ravinia-goers might like on inspection, in his taking up of works like "Fédora," "Zaza," and "La Navarraise," also "Lohengrin," which is by tradition a star's opera, and "The Secret of Suzanne," which, to revive an old locution, has been found to "belong" in the tree bordered pavilion on the high road to the northern woods.

As the Ravinia staging of "Le Chemineau" classifies as a première, and as the work is of special Chicago interest, and also as every member of the cast is new to Jean Richepin's play and Xavier Leroux's piquant modern setting thereof, the cast is adjoined:

A Wanderer [Le Chemineau]	Giuseppe Danise
Toinette	Alice Gentle
Toinet	Giordano Paltrinieri
Pierre	Louis d'Angelo
Francois	Léon Rothier
Aline	Anne Roselle
Catherine	Philine Falco
Thomas	Pompilio Malatesta
Martin	Graham Marr

Ready to Go.

Its perfervid adulant, Mr. Hasselmans, says it is "ready." Coming from him, that is high praise for the industry of the Ravinia cast, for Hasselmans is of the belief that no other opera yet written is so important in the matter of rehearsals as "Le Chemineau."

To conduct it was part of his contract when, in 1918, Campanini imported him to the Auditorium. "When," asked that hard working impresario, "when, do you think, we may give 'Le Chemineau'? First week, second week, third week—when?" "Maestro," protested Hasselmans, "it is so exacting. I must have time!" Campanini then inquired as to the outlook for the fourth, the fifth, or the sixth week. "But," pleaded Hasselmans, "Leroux asked me to be so careful—to take pains—to——"

"Take all the pains you can stand," replied Campanini, according to the Légendes Intimes of the Chicago Opera, 1918-19 edition, and added, with magisterial mien, "and take ten weeks, too! We shall do it on the final day of the final week of the season—if you can stand the pains!"

"Le Chemineau" was worth waiting for into late January of 1919; and there is no reason to believe it will not be worth waiting for at Ravinia, which, happily, has a company this summer that might have been engaged mainly with this opera in view.

ELSA KRESSMAN.
[Daguerre Photo.]

Elsa Kressman, dramatic soprano, has been chosen by the club women of Chicago as the principal soloist in the pageant to take place at the Municipal pier tomorrow. She has recently returned to Chicago after appearing at the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Chautauqua, N. Y.

New Voices in Old Parts.

But "Le Chemineau," interesting as it is to write about, is far from being the sole matter of the week at Ravinia. One could easily ignore this musical welding upon Richepin's tale of "L'Homme des Chemins," and still set forth a piquant catalogue for the guidance of those who wish to know what to do with their nights. Such a catalogue might, perhaps, read down the page thus:

Imprimis: A new Micaela, Queena Mario, in tonight's second "Carmen," with Bourskaya again in the title part.

Item: A new Juliet, also Miss Mario; a new Stephano, Miss Roselle; and a new Mercutio, Mr. Ballester, in the season's first "Romeo and Juliet." New Juliets are rare.

Item: A new Floria in Miss Gentle and a new Scarpia in Mr. Didur for the postponed "Tosca." New Toscas come with every season; good ones not so often. This new one's chances are good.

Item: A de facto star of three American opera houses, Miss Bourskaya, singing for the first time anywhere the part of Amneris in the second "Aida." This is the first rôle she has undertaken in any tongue outside of her April répertoire in the Olympic theater.

Item: A new Aïda, to keep Miss Bourskaya in sympathetic and decorative company—Miss Saroya, who is easy on the vision.

Item: The pairing of Mr. Chamlee with Miss Dux for the third "Madama Butterfly." They did so well together in "Manon" that this casting looks right.

Summary for the Week.

Here is the week's schedule complete in measurable detail:

Today at 3:15—Concert of "favorites."

Tonight at 8:15—"Carmen," with Bourskaya, Mario, Roselle, Falco, Harrold, Ballester, Rothier, et al., and Hasselmans.

Monday at 8:15—Artists' concert, under Hasselmans, with Peralta and Edward Llewellyn, soloists.

Tuesday at 8:15—"Romeo and Juliet," first time, with Roselle, Harrold, Ballester, Rothier, et al., and Hasselmans.

Wednesday at 8:15—"Tosca," first time, with Gentle, Didur, Chamlee, Malatesta, Falco, et al., and Papi.

Thursday at 3:15—Children's concert, with Mr. and Mrs. Oberndorfer, interpreters, and a play, "A Surprise on Grandmother," by pupils in acting from Kinzie Recreational center.

Thursday at 8:15—"Aïda," with Saroya, Bourskaya, Kingston, Danise, et al., and Papi.

Friday at 8:15—"Madama Butterfly," with Dux, Gentle, Chamlee, Marr, et al., and Papi.

Saturday at 3:15—Popular concert.

Saturday at 8:15—"Le Chemineau," Ravinia première, with Gentle, Roselle, Falco, Danise, Rothier, Paltrinieri, et al., and Hasselmans.

Organists to Hold Convention.

Beginning with a reception at the Auditorium hotel tomorrow night, the National Association of Organists will have the floor until Friday night. Business sessions will begin Tuesday morning, and there will be recitals each afternoon and evening.

Among the recitalists appearing will be Clarence Eddy, Lynnwood Farnam, Henry S. Fry, A. Gordon Mitchell, Rollo F. Maitland, Ernest MacMillan, Jesse Crawford, and C. Albert Tufts. Papers will be read by Felix Borowski, Peter C. Lutkin, Dr. Paul Sabine, and John Alden Carpenter.

One of the special features will be a recital in which the two consoles of the organ at Medinah temple will be used simultaneously. Pietro A. Yon has written the composition, which will be played by Mr. Fry and Mr. Maitland.

CESARE FORMICHI.

One of the new members of the Chicago Opera, enthusiastically commended by Director Giorgio Polacco, is Cesare Formichi, baritone, mention of whom was made in the music column last Sunday. His portrait has just arrived from Italy. It represents him as Amfortas in Wagner's "Parsifal," one of the roles for which he is famous abroad, and which he may do while he is in this country. It will be his first visit to the United States.

Opera Subscriptions Renewed.

Words of cheer are issuing from the Auditorium these days over the showing made in the campaign for subscriptions for the coming season of the Chicago opera. Books were opened Monday for former subscribers to renew their holdings, and when the doors were closed that evening it was declared to have been the biggest day in the history of the Auditorium theater. What is more to the point, the demand for seats by mail order and word of mouth continued through the week.

Arthur Kay has come here from the west to conduct the orchestra at the Tivoli theater, where, like the rest of the Balaban and Katz houses, the music is frequent and good. He succeeds Arthur Dunham, who has conducted there since the first of the year and has now resigned. Mr. Kay was assistant to Dr. Karl Muck in the Boston Symphony orchestra, and has wielded the baton much in various parts of the country over symphony opera, operetta and moving pictures.

The High Cost of Going to Opera.

Sir: Please print these few lines to enlighten the multitude of music lovers in general, and the patrons of the Chicago and North Shore Electric line in particular:

Last year the fare charged from Adams street to Ravinia was 49 cents a trip. This year it is 68 cents. Not only that, but when I returned home, buying a ticket only to Evanston, I paid 24 cents, and 13 cents from Evanston to any station on the L system in Chicago, totaling 37 cents, and thus making the same trip 31 cents less than if a through ticket is bought at Adams street. Is it worth 31 cents to any person not to change cars?

Has the Chicago and North Shore line the right to charge for the same trip any price it chooses as long as the public does not find out how to travel for the cheaper price to the same destination? Respectfully,

SIDNEY GLOSS.

The facts are apparently as Mr. Gloss states them, but the answer of the North Shore Electric line is that it charges a rate permitted and fixed by the state.

Here and There in Music.

A new fashion in musical plays seems to be rather firmly established. There was one about Schubert, accompanied by his own music, in which historical facts were not allowed to spoil a good story; another one about Rossini, not yet arrived in this country, also accompanied by his music. Now Robert Burns approaches the horizon as a dramatic hero. Nigel Playfair of London, who brought out the revival of "The Beggar's Opera," has commissioned John Drinkwater to write the play, and Frederic Austin, who arranged the score of "The Beggar's Opera," will write music to assist Burns through his dramatic career. It will be based upon the folk tunes of Scotland. Frederick Ranalow will play the title part.

Another dramatic production, that by Stuart Walker of "The Book of Job," will be given with music of authentic Hebrew melodies. Elliot Schenck has composed a score based upon two melodies a number of centuries old. One is "Hosh'ah Na," associated with the Feast of the Tabernacle and the chanting of the 118th Psalm. The other is "All Ellah," a lament over the capture of Jerusalem and the destruction of the city.

Eleanor Painter, the soprano, best known around here for her appearances in plays with music, has been engaged for some grand opera appearances at the Berlin Staatsoper. She will appear as guest artist in the leading rôles of "Madama Butterfly" and "Faust" during the month of September.

ASTRONOMY

Molten waves are tossing in the cauldron sea.

WALLED PLAINS ON THE MOON.

THERE is nothing on earth to compare with the great walled plains so abundant on the moon.

Our level land is usually near the sea or else is clearly the work of standing water. Broad, gently sloping stretches are unknown upon the moon. No water has ever existed there to form them. Astronomers seek in vain for evidences of even the smallest lake.

Some of our flat topped western table lands are capped with lava. In past times the region from Oregon to Arizona was excessively volcanic. The marks of fires are still plainly visible there. Hundreds of square miles were once inundated by molten rock. Hot lavas once poured over hill and valley, obliterating everything, and when they cooled they made high, level plateaus.

Walled plains on the moon resemble this geological feature of the earth in their formation; but they carry the process much farther.

Imagine that we were on the moon, millions of years ago, while it was still an active globe. The hard crust we walk on is dark, but bakingly hot. Hundreds of fumaroles are in sight about us, each blowing steam and acid like the mud valve of an engine. We must leap fissures at every few steps. The bottoms of the larger cracks glow dully red, revealing internal fires not many rods below.

Although there are steam vents around us, yet there is no air. The vapors come to the surface, explode themselves, and vanish in hot nothingness a few yards above their origin.

Rocks are falling here and there, stinging dust pelts us in the face; far off beyond the horizon we see the vapors of some gigantic volcano. We see steam come billowing up; we watch a red glare on the lower side of its clouds; we feel the pulse and jar of each mighty boom.

Walking along, we quit the level surface and enter a region of ropy lava. Before us, thirty miles away, a row of jagged crags project like teeth above the notched horizon. Struggling along over the gnarled beds, and keeping to the smoother channels as much as possible, we at length arrive at the crest of the peaks before us, and look over.

Beneath us is a lake of fire, two hundred miles wide. Great tossing rollers surge on it, like stormy water in an earthly sea. The waves are made of molten rock; the pit is a volcanic caldron. Lavas from deep below well up, forced to the surface by dynamic forces of the moon. The tossing, red-hot sea reaches farther than our eyes can see. It has a horizon of fire, a glowing furnace over which blue and yellow flames are dancing, a line where blazing moon and night black sky appear to meet.

There is no beach to this fiery sea, no slanting way down to the waves. Instead, the walls rise sheer. Crags jut abruptly from the lava, towering black shapes that glow with red reflections. Against these cliffs the lava dashes furiously. Great white hot breakers come rushing in, they meet the steeps, they dash themselves into a blazing shower, hurled high up.

This scene is still before astronomers, but death instead of life is master now. The sea is frozen solid, a gray green level plain surrounded by steep fire scarred precipices. The sun casts inky shadows from the peaks above upon the rocks below. Cracks cross what was once a sea of fire, and volcanic dust, never to move again, is strewn upon the hardened scoria.

ANSWERS.

B. D. T.: The three bright planets in the evening sky are Venus, lowest down; then Jupiter, and, lastly, Mars. Mars is red, Jupiter bluish, and Venus is white.

Botany

NATURE'S PERFUME IS BEST.

WEDDING clovers are in bloom everywhere. They bloom like rank, ungainly weeds, with racines of small white blossoms scattered over them.

The flowers, although small, are perfect replicas of the white sweet pea. The clover plant itself has a beany odor, but the flowers smell like honey locust blossoms.

Gather a dishpanful of bloom racines. This will not be a great task, for the plants are prolific bearers. Strip off the blossoms, dry them, and put them into little sacks for sachet. The perfume they give off is heavy and sweet.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

Whirled Off His Feet.

"I had a little balance in the bank, but I became engaged two months ago, and now——"

"O, love makes the world go round."

"Yes, but I didn't think it would go so fast that it would make me lose my balance."

All the Point of View.

"Don't you want to buy a bicycle to ride around your farm?" asked the hardware clerk, as he wrapped up the nails. "They're cheap now. I can sell you a first class one for $35."

"I'd rather put $35 in a cow," replied the farmer.

"But, think," persisted the clerk, "how foolish you'd look riding around on a cow."

"O, I don't know," said the farmer, stroking his chan, "no more foolish, I guess, than I would milkin' a bicycle."

M. A.

Still in Servitude.

A man traveling through Alabama was much interested in Uncle Ned.

"So you were once a slave, eh?"

"Yas, sah," said Uncle Ned.

"Well, well, and after the war you got your freedom?"

"No, sah," said Ned, gloomily. "I didn't get mah freedom, sah. After de war I done got married.'

STATE MADISON AND DEARBORN STS

The Corset Sensation of the Season!

Warner's 'Wrap-Around'—Entirely Different

Third Floor—Dearborn Street

Everywhere ears are buzzing with the latest fashion gossip—and with talk of the remarkable new corset that the new modes have brought: Warner's "Wrap-Around." Different from any corset you've ever seen—with elastic and fabric so manipulated that you can play or work in the "Wrap-Around," feel perfectly supported, yet never feel conscious of its presence.

A wonder corset! Made of fine, firm brocades and coutils and narrow sections of new firm elastic that extend from the top to the bottom of the corset and that stretch only enough to let you "wrap it and snap it." No laces, but unlike the all-elastic corset it does not lose its shape.

No wonder the modern woman is infatuated with the "Wrap-Around" for it gives to the figure the flowing contour of youth—reveals the figure's natural grace, controls it superbly and all without in any way interfering with her manifold activities, whether at home, in sports, or in business. You may have the "Wrap-Around" in a host of models for every type from the slight "deb" to the dowager. The staying qualities of both the specially selected fabrics and elastics used make this possible—and at the same time assure you of all the comforts of the all-elastic corset with none of its annoying features.

Demonstrated On a Living Model

See the "Wrap-Around" demonstrated on a living model. See how easily it controls the figure; how pliantly it clings to you, and yet that it is not even noticeable as you wear it. Let us show it to you tomorrow! The "Wrap-Around" in sizes up to 32, at

Hundreds of blouses, made of handkerchief linen, voile, batiste, English gingham and organdie—newest mid-summer models—many fashioned of voile and gingham combined, some hand made—just the blouse you want for vacation and outing wear—all sizes, 36 to 46, but not in every style—while they last, actual $3 values, your choice, Monday at 1.98

100,000 Prs. Mnfr's Surplus (From a Prominent Haverhill, Mass., Maker) Women's White Low Shoes at Less Than Half Price, 1.29

Had there been any doubt in our mind that the women of Chicago could not discriminate between values actual and fictitious, we would not have dared to undertake such a purchase—but after having seen the shoes, and inspected the fabrics, leathers, trimmings and workmanship, if there is any woman who would hesitate to spend $1.29 for a pair of these low shoes, we'll have the surprise of our career—for here are 100,000 pairs of women's splendidly styled seasonable white low shoes at a price almost unprecedented. Note that this sale will be held on the

11th Floor, Entire Dearborn Street Side

There will be throngs from the very opening minute of the sale, but the offerings will be so arranged that you'll not have to wait or lose time in finding your size. And now for the footwear itself!—you'll find each of the styles illustrated in EVERY size and EVERY width, for there are more than 100,000 pairs in all—including the newest, most wanted styles—

Sally Sandals, Flapper Sandals, One Strap, Two Strap, Three Strap

Pumps, Toddle Slippers, Oxfords and Sports Oxfords

—the entire surplus stock of white low shoes from a prominent Haverhill, Mass., manufacturer—made of the very best quality white Sea Island duck, every pair with flexible leather soles and flapper heels, walking heels, Cuban, baby Louis heels and full Louis heels. Included also are several thousand pairs of MISSES' AND CHILDREN'S LOW SHOES in one and two strap slipper and oxford styles, sizes 8½ to 2 in each style—the entire stupendous collection grouped at one price—the lowest price for footwear of like character in years—tomorrow on the Eleventh Floor—the values conservatively stated are up to $3.00—all tomorrow, choice.....

Dinnerware Sets Only 2.95

—Eighth Floor—State Street—

An extraordinary offering of dinnerware sets at savings that are seldom featured—the ever popular bluebird patterns as illustrated, comprising:

"Name Your Own Salary"

Employers don't care how big salaries they pay the men and women whose work is indispensable in the success of their business!

You can "name your own salary" after you have learned the business from the ground up. But you must build your career on a thorough, first class business training.

Many of the most successful business men and women today owe their start in life to Bryant & Stratton Business College.

You too, can succeed as they have. You too, can make use of the advantages of this institution's superior training, from which they benefited. Join one of our day or evening classes in shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, accountancy, C. P. A., secretarial work and every other branch of business training.

FALL TERM OPENS SEPTEMBER 5, 1922

WHAT A SHORTHAND COURSE WILL DO FOR YOU

Our shorthand course opens the door to Opportunity. It has done it for hundreds of men and women; it will do it for you.

There never has been a time in our experience as a high class business school that we did not have more positions open to our graduates than there were graduates to fill them.

That means that we give the kind of training the business man demands. You can test this question easily by asking business men of Chicago whether our students are good.

What will our shorthand course do for you? It will put you in a paying position, where your promotion is assured. It will make you a skilled instead of an unskilled business worker. It will enable you to render a service for which there is always a demand.

The difference between the trained worker and the untrained lies primarily in earnings. But there is a big difference is to be found in the chances for advancement.

Fall Term Opens September 5. Register During August. Day and Evening Sessions.

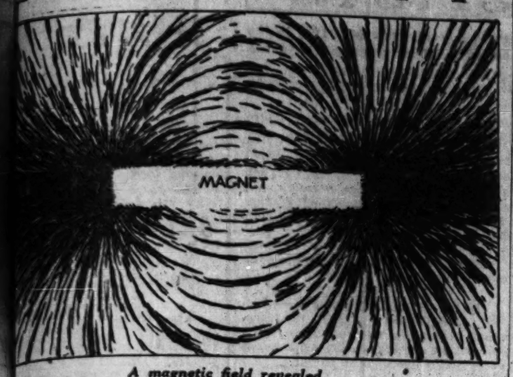
ELECTRICITY



A magnetic field revealed.

MAGNETISM POINTS TWO WAYS

MAGNETISM is a force that resides principally in iron, then in cobalt, nickel, and, to a lesser extent, in other metals. What how it is spread, and through medium it acts we are totally ant. Magnetism seems to be like gy in many of its properties; but, ich as we do not know what gy is, this comparison does not much. We can, however, tell of the peculiar things that mag- ism does, and in this way we lay undation for eventually finding out t it is.

netism differs from gravity in strongly polarized. If a bar, of stone, is suspended, and other objects, such as lead shot, are d near it, the stone bar deflects oof by minute but readily meas- amounts. The shape of the bar to have nothing to do with its attractive force. But if a steel bar is used in place of stone, and iron needles instead of shot, something quite different is observed. Magnetic force appears to come out of the ends of the bar. The needles do not point directly at the bar, as free pendulums point toward a source of gravity, but point toward it slantingly.

When iron filings are dusted over a bar magnet, a field of force is revealed. The filings arrange themselves in groups. The force starts from one pole, travels outward, curves around, and comes in at the opposite pole.

The field of force about a magnet is often referred to as "lines of force." It gets its name from the peculiar appearance of iron filings in the field, but it is needless to say there is nothing of the nature of lines about it. As the filings fall, each one becomes a little magnet. Where positive and negative ends of the filings fall together, union results; where like ends meet, there is repulsion, and the ensemble of such a pattern suggests lines.

CHEMISTRY

ISOLATE AMMONIUM.

AMMONIA is a gas that acts like a strong alkali. Its molecules consist of two groups of atoms, a family of nitrogen and hydrogen atoms, called ammonium, and a group of oxygen and hydrogen particlares known ah hydroxyl. Chemists believe that the ammonium group is a metal, although it is plainly composed of two gases.

Our ideas of a metal usually call to mind iron or copper or some kindred hard lustrous substance. Chemists, however, judge metals by their behavior. They believe that ammonium is metallic, like sodium or potassium, and call it NH4.

Metallic ammonium has never been seen. It breaks up on every attempt to extract it. An amalgam of ammonium and mercury has been discovered, however.

Dissolve some metallic sodium in mercury. The amalgam is highly alkaline. Pour over it a concentrated solution of sal ammoniac, or ammonium chloride. The sodium in the mercury at once seizes the chlorine gas in the sal ammoniac and is converted to sodium chloride, or common salt. Ammonium is left free and straightway takes the place of sodium in the amalgam. The mercury swells up to the consistency of bread.

Metallic mercury is a limpid, heavy liquid like melted lead, but ammonium amalgam is a stiff, brittle mass, like slag.

After the amalgam has stood a few minutes the ammonium decomposes. Bubbles of hydrogen gas escape, and then comes a strong odor of ammonia or NH3.

A new alloy revealed.

Birds

HE'S LITTLE AND LOUD.

THE English sparrow is a city bird. He is, of course, not averse to flying across the country, but he prefers town life because more food and better quarters can be found there. This sparrow is not half so black as he is painted. He is, first of all, a seed eater and, like all sparrows, he consumes large quantities of next year's weeds. He likes worms, too, and never hesitates to take one home should fortune favor him.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

PEEL OFF, WILD BELLES.

Peel off, wild belles, along the shore;
Peel off a few square yards or more
Of scoriated epiderm—
(A quasi scientific term).
Peel off the sadly blistered skin
From arm and shoulder, neck and shin.
O'er all the land the anthem swells:
Peel off, peel off, peel off, wild belles.

Peel off, wild belles; peel off I say.
Throw all your cuticle away;
Renew with soft and pinkish glow
The creamy white you used to know;
Peel off the old, peel on the new,
So delicate and tender—oooh!
Ah, what excruciating yells
From all the little summer gels
On sunny shores, in bosky dells.
Peel off, peel off, peel off, wild belles.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

When she overhears the news, she faints, and for days they despair of her life.

Then it is discovered that not only her own but another life is at stake.

"The Head of the House of Coombe," the supposed lover of her mother, guesses the secret, after the doctor has confided it to him, and when Robin knows that he knows, she confesses. She and Donal had, the day before he left, been married by a chaplain in Donal's regiment. She didn't remember the chaplain's name. She hadn't any certificate. She had borrowed the chaplain's wife's ring. She had no proof of her marriage. But the Head of the House of Coombe, being a thorough man about town, knew that she was telling the truth and, realizing that her child should be the future Head of the House of Coombe, persuaded her to allow him to marry her secretly for the sake of the child. Hidden away in a wild spot in Scotland, for months she failed and failed. Daily they expected her to die. Then suddenly she became cheerful, ate an egg for breakfast, and said that she had dreamed that Donal was there. Every night he came in dreams. She began to take an interest in fine laces and linens, and finally the future head of the house hailed his welcome to the world.

But does it end there?

It does not. It is a great temptation to tell the rest of the story. I'd like to enter the facts in a contest for a prize in melodrama. But to do that would spoil some of the tears which are destined to be shed.

Prepare to shed them.

On the Square.

"Baldy of Nome" is not a brand new book, but every one seems to think it is, and to want, suddenly, to know whether Baldy is a gentleman human or whatever.

He is a gentleman dog, a famous and real character in Alaskan annals. The story of his puppyhood, of his brilliant feats as a racing dog, of the sons and grandsons he waved a loyal tail to as they went off to the great war—many of them to be decorated with the Croix de Guerre—and of his last years of dignified old doghood, is a story which Esther Birdsall Darling has told with simplicity and without the usual sentimentality that makes most stories about animals so cloying.

Those Alluring Laurentians.

In "The Laurentians," T. Morris Longstreth's latest travel volume, there is a chapter about Maria Chapdelaine.

She is a real person, very much alive, "nearing middle age, whose tendency was toward portliness," and whose complexion still recalled the rose. Her name is Maria Bedard now, of Peribonka. M. Bedard is the big man of Peribonka. And he does not mind talking about his wife as the heroine of a novel that two continents have loved.

"Yes," said M. Bedard to Mr. Longstreth, "Louis Hemon spent the winter with us, a silent man, and frail. I don't think our winter agreed with him. He said that he was after health and wished to work in the fields. The work in the bush was too hard for him, so he worked with me here, and in the evenings wrote. We did not know that he was writing about us until one day after he had gone there came three copies of the book. I'm afraid they've all been taken. People will take things, you know."

"After he had gone" . . . That reminds us of the tragic story of Louis Hemon. He was not killed in the war, nor in a motor accident in New York, nor by an omnibus in London, as the rumors have had it. He was killed in 1913, unceremoniously, in a lonely spot on a curve of the Canadian Pacific railway, with a fellow farmhand as they were walking back from town. But that is not the tragedy. One must die, and who shall say that death disguised as a whizzing engine is any more tragic than death masquerading as a cloud of phosgene or as a stealthily hardening artery? The letter from Le Temps accepting "Maria Chapdelaine" was returned to Paris marked "dead." When the story appeared in the paper Louis Hemon's father saw it and wrote to explain the relationship. Every time Louis Hemon walked to town it had been with the hope that that letter would be waiting for him. The great tragedy of his life was that he never knew that the lovely thing he had made had found favor, as he had hoped—and undoubtedly prayed—it would.

"Maria Chapdelaine" appeared as a serial and was forgotten except by M. Halevy, who had clipped the story as it appeared. One day years later he took his clippings to a publisher with the assurance that it was the greatest unpublished manuscript in France. It was brought out in France, two translations were made into English, there was much bitter word warfare about their respective merits, and finally America was given the really beautiful story.

As for Mr. Longstreth's "In the Laurentians," it is a needed book, as travelers into that beautiful and unspoiled region well know. His text is vivid, his pictures interesting, and his maps clear and good.

It Does No Harm to Know Something, as Goethe Said.

"A Naturalist in the Great Lakes Region," by Elliott R. Downing, tells you, among other useful items, a great deal about the Dunes and their flora and fauna. Week after week the trains are seething with dune bugs. The conductors have a genial, cynical look of acceptance of their presence. Whenever a normal person from Hegewisch or East Chicago gets onto the train in a dressy palm beach suit and a straw hat with the local bowling club's green and yellow hatband proclaiming its distinction, the conductor lets him into the secret that the train is full of harmless idiots. Maybe he is right, because there is not one passenger out of fifty that guesses correctly about the growing things along the track. You hear them call timothy wheat with all of the assurance of those who eat vegetation but don't grow it. Or you hear "That's too far away for me to tell just what it is"—the world's best alibi. They are passionate lovers of the dunes, but most of them accept them, as most lovers do, blind. Mr. Downing opens their eyes.

Miss Atherton Raises a Question.

Some one said that Gertrude Atherton's "Sleeping Fires" decidedly raises the question as to whether the seventies were the age of innocence in San Francisco that they seem to have been in New York.

* *

There is one short tale—the story of the building of the Taj Mahal, which is as lovely a retelling of a legend as has ever been written. If L. Adams Beck weren't quite so esoteric, if her mysticism were a little less oriental and a little more easily assimilable by occidentals, the few might grow into the many.

But why should beauty number its worshippers?

Best Sellers of the Ages

haps they are nearer to the "well of English undefyled," as Spenser called Chaucer, than we literates are.

Aye, 'tis a fine game one may play in the pleasant fields of Chaucer!

And what is the prize of the game?

'Tis this: You wander freely in a sunny garden of language—an old fashioned garden where spring posies like these:

> The besy larke, the messenger of daye.
> Mar, that mother of moosthee glad.
> Nature, the vicar of Almightie Lord.

Or gnomic bits like this:

> It is nat good a sleping hound to wake.

In a week a reader who reads with any attentiveness can become not a proficient but a fairly easy-stepping Chaucerian. Get the hang of a few obsolete word-endings, con faithfully the glossary, be mindful of certain ancient meanings that have passed like ghosts out of our language, and a new world is yours, a new-old world that was busy and puissant even as ours, that was fighting great battles—both Crecy and Poitiers were fought when Geoffrey Chaucer was a boy—that was getting our language into order, that was marveling over our earliest book of English prose—the faked "Travels" of the nonexistent Sir John Mandeville, and that was reading Wycliffe's new translation of the Bible. Boccaccio's ladies and gentlemen were telling their highly unladylike tales when Chaucer was a boy, and Petrarch was singing when he was grown, and by the time he had told his last tale and been borne to his rest in that corner of the abbey which since has become a shrine of poets, the discovery of America was distant only by the life of a long-lived man.

The glory of a great dawn was streaming over the world and men were living gustily when Chaucer wrote.

Into that world you go intimately through the book of the Canterbury tales and from it you learn things singularly applicable to your daily comings and goings now. You learn what really mean the names of your friends Mr. Sumner, and Mr. Shipman, and Mr. Reeve or Reeves, and Mr. Franklin, and Mr. Coke, and Mr. Holt, Mr. Webb, Mr. Fletcher, and a dozen others; and you learn those things unforgettably, for they are woven into an entrancing group of tales. You begin to be conscious of a new sense of mastery over the English language. You feel that you are not taking so many words for granted—not taking them any more as arbitrary signs but as rich and tasteful growths.

Chaucer is not dead, nor recondite, nor a school task. How close, do you think, is he to your daily speech and thought? Nearer, I trow, than you wot of. Take this double handful of agate type as proof. Listen to these familiars coming to your surprised but accustomed ears across five centuries:

> And certeinly he was a good felaw.
> He hasteth well that wisely can abide.
> Forbede us thyng, and that desiren we.
> I hate hym that my vices tellen me.
> A man shal wynne us best with flaterye.
> But I woot best wher wryngeth me my sho.
> So was hire joly whistle wel ywette.
> In his owene grece I made him frye.
> And for to see, and eek for to be seye.
> That he is grentil that doth gentil dedis.
> Full wise is he that can himselven knowe.
> Mordre wol out, that see we day by day.
> Of harmes two the lesse is for to cheese.
> One eare it heard, at the other out it went.
> For lif may keep a counsel if twain be away
> For losse of catel may recovered be.
> But losse of tyme shendeth us, quod he.
> For dronkennesse is veray sepulture
> Of mannes wit, and his discrecioun.
> My sone keepe wel thy tonge, and keepe thy freend.
> Thanne is it wysdom, as it thynketh me,
> To maken vertu of necessitee.
> I hold a mouse's wit nat worth a leke.
> That hath but on hole for to sterten to.
> Therefore behoveth him a ful long spoone,
> That shall eat with a fend.
> The firste vertue, sone, if thou wilt lere,
> Is to restreine and kepen wel thy tonge.
> The proverbe saith that many a smale maketh a grate.
> The lyfe so short, the craft so long to lerne,
> Th' assay so hard, so sharpe the conquering.
> There n' is no werkman whatever he be,
> That may both werken wel and hastily.
> This wol be done at leisure parfitly.
> For of fortunes sharpe adversite,
> The worst kind of infortune is this,—
> A man to han ben in prosperite,
> And it remembrer whan it passed is.

I copied those bits of Chaucer from different texts of the poet—some with the spelling a little simplified—so that you should see how "nat" and "not" are equivalents, and "thanne" and "then," how y and i are interchangeable, how the same word may be written sometimes with two e's and sometimes with one, and so on.

But I do not suppose that it is the instruction so much as the delight that ought to lure us to this book that was from the reign of Richard II. to the reign of Elizabeth the best selling poem in the English language and that still is steadily bought, but has ceased to be a real possession of us plain folk. The delight, the witchery, the charm, the humor, the pathos, the humanity, the pictorial bits, the grace, the joyousness, and the wisdom that make great poetry the supreme refreshment and solace of sensitive beings all bloom in Chaucer's garden. I can remember a little boy who used dearly to love the sheer word-witchery of Arcite's dying speech to Emelye (Emily) in the long, long "Knight's Tale," which is the first of the twenty-four Canterbury tales. This child, no doubt a moonstruck oddment of humanity, would go about the house sing-songing the words to himself, making a long, soft moaning on the last line—"Alone—withouten an-y com-pa-ny." You cannot tell me that the child knew why he loved the lines, or that he loved the colde grave or to be withouten any company, but turning now to my Chaucer I can see that somehow was wrought in that small mind the spell which true poets ever are striving for—the spell which has its source in cadence—that first of all, I suppose—in simple means grandly used, in a directness of appeal that seems very artless and is unforced, in vigor of diction, and in a pathos so unlabored that it is like a soft crying in the still night. Thus move the lines in the Ellesmere text of "The Knight's Tale":

> Allas the wo! allas, the peynes stronge,
> That I for yow have suffred, and so longe!
> Allas, the deeth! allas, myn Emelye!
> Allas, departynge of our compaignye!
> Allas, myn hertes queene! allas, my wyf!
> Myn hertes lady, endere of my lyf!
> What is this world? what asketh men to have?
> Now with his love, now in his colde grave
> Allone, with outen any compaignye.

Therein I find but two words that could have baffled the child. "Departynge" he would hardly make out as "sundering" and "endere" may not have come to him as "ender," but I daresay those hard places did not much detain or worry him.

Long years thereafter this child marked with a certain fatuous complacency—for he was not so childlike nor so unselfconscious now—that the passage he had so loved was also a favorite passage of Tennyson's, and he read that Palgrave, recalling how the laureate would speak the lines, said that the tone on the last line was always "amorously lingering," which, no doubt, was the equivalent of the child's moonstruck moaning. He read, too, how his favorite Leigh Hunt, coming to that same haunting last line, would remark, "How piteous the tautology, 'alone—withouten any company'!"

We have glanced at the gnomic Chaucer and the pathetic Chaucer. We must save a word for the roguish, merry Chaucer, the Chaucer of the tireless relish for the whims and brags and foibles and follies of mankind. I like to think of the Tales as a kind of fourteenth century "Pickwick Papers" and of that gallus company of so many callings and kinds and interests—there were a knight, a squire, a yeoman, a prioress, a nun, a priest, a monk, a merchant, a clerk, a lawyer, a physician, a haberdasher, a carpenter, a weaver, a dyer, a cook, a mariner, a plowman, a miller, and a poet among the nine and twenty pilgrims—as a kind of mediæval Rotary club, each member bent, as a Rotarian now is, on hearing a good story, extolling his own calling, and doing his own soul and the souls of others a bit of good if perchance matters agreeably fall that way. So in this three day ride, in April, 1383, of sixty miles from the Tabard inn in London to the shrine of Thomas à Becket in Canterbury cathedral did matters fall, and the result was a group of four and twenty tales, of which the masterpieces are the Knight's, the Nun's, the Nun's Priest's, the Physician's, the Clerk's and the second Nun's.

One word in parting from that delectable company of wits and sentimentalists—you will never regret getting a fine edition of Chaucer, for when you buy his book you are buying a lifetime treasure—a book of instruction and a book of delight.

ART AND ARTISTS

Chance to Study Two Masters in Different Moods

By Eleanor Jewett.

"Woman with Masks," by Iacovleff, a riddle in femininity posed at the Art institute by the clever young Russian painter, whose exhibition continues to create comment through the summer months.

It is not often that a number of paintings by Corot or a number of canvases by Millet are offered in a group for public inspection. A single picture illustrative of the genius of these men is the more customary way in which we enjoy them. Perhaps it is fortunate that this is so. Perhaps if their work were as generally shown as that, for instance, of some of our modern artists, we might appreciate it less. And yet, thinking of the beautiful room of Inness paintings at the Art institute, one hesitates to suggest such heresy, even lightly.

It may, however, be considered a truth that while the work of one man will grow upon you and the more you see of it the more it appeals to you, the work of another painter seen under similar circumstances decreases in beauty, and familiarity may even multiply the tiny peculiarities of the man's manner into faults. If this be so in the case of some painters or writers, sculptors or musicians now living, why can it not be true of men who have died many years ago? Time is no sanctifier of taste.

All of which is merely a slow approach to the Potter Palmer paintings now on view, in their customary galleries at the Art institute. To those paintings shown before as being part of this collection, have been added a number of new canvases. Not new in the sense of being modern, but new inasmuch as they are less familiar to us than others in the same group which have been exhibited for several years in the institute.

Some of these paintings are works by Corot and Millet. It is from having enjoyed them last week that the opening thought of this discussion sprang. Does one or does one not get a little weary of the eternal detached leaf in the Corot landscapes? Does one wish that Millet had not so repeatedly dealt with his human figures as bulky blocked forms? Does one, or does one not? It would be heresy of the maddest to say one did. Therefore, probably, one does not.

Notwithstanding which, this is one of the best opoprtunities to study these masters in different moods that has ever been vouchsafed us. Which of us, offhand, can think of a Corot that is not a landscape? In this exhibit is a canvas, "Interrupted Reading," by Corot. It shows simply a woman, an intimate portrait it might be called, seated. One hand has fallen to her lap and in the relaxed fingers a book is held. Around the woman's neck are strings of glass beads and a line of coral. There is not a leaf to be seen, yet is the painting as worthy a Corot as any of the beautiful landscapes which have caused his name to become a byword in the very nursery.

In like manner, there is a Millet to be seen in this gallery, a Millet as unlike the customary Jean François as may well be imagined. Much more, indeed, is it like a Rubens. This is the plump, insouciant, rosy portrait of the "First Mme. Millet," a title that intrigues while it tells, for if a first then of course a second, and possibly a third or fourth Mme. Millet loom out of the shadows of the past, rendering the artist less of an old master and more of a man to us who pause in appreciation of his genius.

Undoubtedly the most horrible picture in the gallery, but at the same time one of the most unforgettable and wonderful, a picture that sends chills down your spine but lights your eye with the excellence of its workmanship, is the little canvas by Delacroix, "Dante and Virgil Cross the Lake Around Dité." Mere words can add nothing to the power of it; you must see for yourself if you would be moved to your depths by the futile agonies of the tormented there portrayed.

Drawings by Sir Edward Burne-Jones, purchased from the Ida E. S. Noyes fund, are hung in the hall outside the Potter Palmer gallery.

Last Tuesday the Art institute became the recipient of another magnificent gift. Mr. and Mrs. John G. Shedd gave the sum of $50,000 to the museum. What is possibly as important as the size of the gift is the fact that the institute is left free to make what use it wishes of the money. In other words, it is an unrestricted gift. In appreciation a gallery in the museum is to be named the John G. Shedd and Mary R. Shedd gallery. It will probably be one of the period rooms which are to be an important feature in the addition to the institute now building.

Anna L. Stacey is spending the summer in Woodstock, N. Y.

Another of our famous women artists, Pauline Palmer, is at Provincetown, Mass., for the summer. Word comes that she has purchased a house with studio possibilities there.

Frederic M. Grant, now in California for a short stay, plans to sail for Europe early in September for an indefinite period of travel, work, and study.

Edgar Payne has made plans to go abroad in the fall. He intends making Paris his headquarters.

WE are adding to our business a department for the sale of expensive sets of books of general and educational interest. We would like to hear from those who have had experience in the sale of subscription editions of various kinds and who have sold only to customers of high credit rating.

Through the Microscope

Inside the cavity.

LITTLE GERMS MAKE BIG PAINS.

ABOUT 98 per cent of all people suffer from toothache at some time during their lives. The cause of bad teeth was long a mystery. In spite of tooth brushes, mouth washes, and dental creams some teeth still persisted in decaying. It remained for bacteriologists to discover the reason.

Dentists report that most cavities occur between the teeth, more rarely do they come on the outer surfaces, and least often of all on the inner or lingual side. Disease attacks between the teeth, they found, because it is here that germs find an easy lodgment and a good breeding ground. Teeth press tightly together near their crowns, forming hidden crypts that fill with food particles and are not easily cleaned.

About sixty different kinds of germs have been discovered in the human mouth. Some of them wiggle vigorously. Most of them eat the decaying remains of food that stick in the tight places between the teeth. The growths that start decay are believed to be pus germs. Pusses first take hold as saprophytes, and eat decaying food. If they are not cleaned off they eventually form large colonies whose excretions corrode the enamel of the teeth. Enamel contains fluorine, and is purposely hard and resisting. When it is dissolved the inner portions of the tooth are left exposed and unprotected and are at once attacked by other more parasitic bacteria, chief among whom is leptotherix bucalis. Neglected cavities are often seen where the growth of leptotherix is as thick and furry as mold on rotten bread. This bacterium eats living tissue. Eventually it works its way into the center of the tooth and produces toothache.

Bacteriologists say it is comparatively easy to prevent decayed teeth. It is only necessary to keep food from lodging in crevices and pus pockets from collecting. To do this the gelatinous protective sheath which every colony of germs excretes to protect itself should be destroyed.

This is best done with a thread, or better with a length of dental floss. Once injured, the microörganisms are quickly killed by saliva.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Speakers of Note to Address Rock River Assembly

By the Rev. W. B. Norton

THE thirty-fifth annual session of the Rock River assembly at Dixon, Ill., began last evening with an address of welcome by the Rev. C. Edward Kerr, Ph. D., pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Ascension, Chicago, and president of the board of directors of the assembly. While under Lutheran auspices, the management has speakers of various denominations and attendance is open to all.

Beginning tomorrow and closing next Sunday there will be a school for religious workers. Among the speakers will be Prof. S. G. Hefelbower, Prof. Henry F. Schaeffer, Dr. H. D. Hoover, president of Carthage college; the Rev. W. W. Kennerely, the Rev. Thomas B. Uber, the Rev. R. Neuman, and the Rev. H. E. Dickey. The Rev. Simon P. Long, D. D., pastor Wicker Park church, Chicago, who recently returned from Palestine, will speak next Friday afternoon on his travels and preach on next Sunday evening.

The School of Missions will begin Aug. 7, continuing to Aug. 12. Miss Belle L. Hill of New York and her assistants will be in charge.

Among the speakers on popular themes will be Judge Marcus Kavanagh, Aug. 4; Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, Aug. 10; Maude Ballington Booth, Aug. 13, and William Jennings Bryan, Aug. 14.

The second annual Unitarian Layman's league institute for religion education began yesterday at the Isle of Shoals, N. H., and will continue until Aug. 12. Prof. Theodore G. Soares, president of the religious education association and professor of practical theology at the University of Chicago, is one of the teachers. The full quota of delegates allowed, 261, was complete early 6, coming from twenty-five states. There were 132 delegates at the first convention last year, and of the number seventy-four accepted positions as leaders in their various churches. The layment's league pays one-half of the expenses of tuition, travel, and hotel, and local chapters or individuals pay the other half.

THE REV. C. S. LINKLETTER.
[Gibson, Sykes & Fowler photo.]

The Rev. C. S. Linkletter is pastor of the Austin Christian church, which will lay the cornerstone of a new $75,000 church building today at 3:30 p. m. at Austin boulevard and Superior street. The location of the church in which services will continue to be held until the structure is ready for occupancy is at Race and Pine avenues.

The new building will be of brick with stone trimmings. The dimensions are 104x64 feet. The principal speaker at the cornerstone laying will be the Rev. Perry J. Rice, superintendent of the city missionary society.

The Rev. Mr. Linkletter graduated from Drake university, Des Moines, Ia., in 1917. He preached at Exira, Ia., until April 1, 1918, when he became pastor of the Austin church. The lot for the new church building was purchased a year ago last spring.

During the absence on vacation of the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, which meets Sundays at 11 o'clock in Powers theater, 124 West Randolph street, the pulpit will be supplied by the Rev. J. P. Brushingham. Dr. Brushingham will preach today. He was for nine years pastor of the First church while it was located at Washington and Clark streets. It is expected that the old site will be occupied within a year by a new building to be called the Chicago Temple, when the First church will resume services there.

Olivet camp on the shore of Lake Geneva, Wis., which is managed by the Olivet institute, 444 Blackhawk street, Chicago, takes care of mothers, babies, boys, girls, and what is not usual in such camps, aged or infirm men. The Rev. Norman B. Barr is superintendent. The work is dependent, as all such charities are, on the generosity of those able and willing to give. Dr. Barr expresses his appeal in the following form: "What will you enjoy more this summer than helping to put
A bit more flesh upon some frail form;
A glint of light into a pair of dull eyes;
A touch of color in two wan cheeks;
A ray of hope in a fainting heart;
A spark of cheer in a despairing soul?"

There were 275 delegates who attended the assembly of the worldwide guild of the department of religious education of the Baptist board of education held July 16-22 at Shurtleff college, Alton, Ill., according to a report of Miss Bessie M. Stickney, 1115 East 47th street, Chicago, state secretary.

The farmers of Illinois are being asked by the agricultural committee of the Near East Relief association, 19 South La Salle street, Chicago, for fifty car loads of wheat for Armenia and Turkey. It is hoped donations of from ten to forty bushels each will be made and that the milling and transportation of the wheat will be free.

The Presbyterian board of foreign missions desires a correction of the rumor that came from India announcing the death of Dr. William J. Wanless in charge of the hospital at Miraj, India. Dr. Wanless, the board announces, is well. His hospital treated last year 2,709 in-patients and 53,651 out-patients. The India government honored Dr. Wanless with the Kaisar-I-Hind medal for especially meritorious service.

W. G. Landes, Philadelphia, has accepted the position of general secretary of the World's Sunday School association, and will assume his duties Oct. 1. The next World's Sunday School convention will be held in 1924 in Glasgow, Scotland. The American headquarters of the association are 216 Metropolitan Tower, N. Y. Marion Lawrance, Chicago, is the president of the World Pilgrims' association made up of persons who attended any of the former World conventions. Mr. Lawrance attended seven of the eight which have been held.

A special communion service will be held at the Garibaldi institute, 1208 West Taylor street, at 10:45 this morning by the Rev. Pasquale R. De Carlo. "The interesting thing about the service," the Rev. Mr. De Carlo says, "is that the service will be held in the same room that the men who are to partake of the communion, formerly drank and caroused in. The old saloon bar is used for the communion table. There will be about fifty communicants. The Garibaldi institute is under Presbyterian auspices.

The Rev. Robert Stephenson, pastor of Halsted Street Institutional church, 1835 South Halsted street, sailed from New York yesterday. He is scheduled for addresses in London and Leeds, England, and is planning to be back in Chicago Sept. 26.

The Rev. William Hiram Foulkes, general secretary of the new era movement of the Presbyterian church, left last Thursday from Vancouver, B. C., for a visit of the mission fields in the Philippines, Japan, Corea, and China.

A tabulation of church building in the south is printed in the Manufacturers' Record, Baltimore, Md. In sixteen southern states and the District of Columbia it lists 361 churches under construction, with a total valuation of $23,612,595. The First Baptist church of Shreveport, La., will cost $500,000; and the First Methodist Episcopal church, South, Dallas, Tex., will cost $850,000. The Catholic church of the Sisters of Divine Providence, San Antonio, Tex., will cost $300,000.

The Rev. Calvin C. Hays, moderator of the Presbyterian church, is in Alaska visiting the mission stations there, extending as far north as Point Barrow, where a Presbyterian church hospital is located.

Nine Million a Day!

During 1921 Milwaukee purchases averaged more than nine million dollars every business day—more than a million dollars every hour—more than nineteen thousand dollars every minute—better than $323.38 every second (figuring eight hours to the day).

Now business is better in Milwaukee than in 1921.

Here, where purchases run so high, lies one of the best try-out markets—test territories—in the United States for new sales-and-advertising campaigns. Milwaukee is the buying center for Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. It is the right size—not too large nor too small—representative!

The Milwaukee-Wisconsin Market can be covered with one newspaper—The Journal. For this dominant seven-day medium is read by more Milwaukee and Wisconsin people than any other publication in the world. It is read by four out of every five English-speaking families in Milwaukee. It penetrates to every corner of Wisconsin and to Upper Michigan—the territory covered by Milwaukee jobbers.

News of CHICAGO SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Maddock of Oak Park left by boat Friday for Mackinac island and Duluth, from where they will motor back via St. Paul and Minneapolis, stopping at various northern resorts. They expect to be gone two weeks.

Miss Kate Williams of Oak Park will leave Wednesday for a two months' trip to Europe. She will motor through England, Scotland, France, and Switzerland.

Mrs. John Root is passing the summer on Cape Cod, Mass., with Mrs. James M. Cox of Dayton, O., formerly of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pickus of Sioux City, Ia., left for Wisconsin, where they will remain for the summer. They recently were the guests of Mrs. Pickus' mother, Mrs. Fannie Pats of 5746 South Park avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Edmunds of Oak Park are spending the months of July and August in Montreal, Can. They expect to sail later for England to be gone three months. They are accompanied in Canada by their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Edmunds of Oak Park.

Miss Harriet Monroe will leave next month for the North Carolina mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram F. Rieman are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a daughter on July 22. Mrs. Rieman was formerly Miss Charlotte Howe of 4610 Drexel boulevard.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas V. Skelly of Oak Park, with their daughter, Barbara, and sons, Harold and Thomas, are motoring through Canada, where they will visit in Toronto. They will return by way of Niagara Falls and New York, expecting to be back by Sept. 1.

Miss Lucretia Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ogden Green, and Miss Harriet Pardridge, daughter of Mrs. Edward Pardridge, are leaving tomorrow for Maidstone inn, Easthampton, L. I., for the month of August.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Davidson Tough are returning from Scotland this week and will visit with friends in Oak Park before leaving for California, where they will make their future home.

MISS JOSEPHINE CHISHOLM DRAKE.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

The engagement is announced this week of Miss Josephine Chisholm Drake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Edwin Drake of Rye Beach, N. H., and Cleveland, O., to Edwin Clapp Lincoln of Hingham, Mass. Miss Drake is the niece of Tracy C. Drake and John B. Drake of Chicago, and has many friends among the young people of this city. She was graduated from the Choate school in Brookline, Mass., and has recently returned from Europe, where she attended Miss Elizabeth F. Risser's school in Rome.

To Hawaii—

A new service on U. S. Government ships

SEND the information blank below and let your Government tell you about your ships that now ply between Los Angeles and Hawaii. You will be under no obligation.

These great swift ships, formerly in the trans-Atlantic service, have been recently reconditioned for the new direct service between Los Angeles and Honolulu. They bear the names of the great ports, the "City of Los Angeles" and the "City of Honolulu."

If you plan to extend your California trip to include a quick, luxurious trip to Hawaii, do not fail to send the information blank today. The land of everlasting summer, of gorgeous scenery, and green, delightful seas, is now only a few luxurious days away from Los Angeles, but it is still America—a part of your own United States. In Hawaii, you find our own people, American comforts, and American standards of living—yet everywhere around you will be the exotic civilization of the South Seas.

Let your Government tell how easily, how quickly, and how economically you may now go to Hawaii. Write today.

The MAURETANIA to the MEDITERRANEAN

The Luxury Cruise Next Winter

Under the Management of the American Express Travel Dept.

From New York, February 10, 1923

All that can be said for perfection of travel on sea is expressed in that magical word, MAURETANIA—the Cunard's blue ribbon ship of the Atlantic.

And as for MEDITERRANEAN—no single word is so full of meaning, so storied, so pictured, so compelling to the imagination. Blue skies, blue waters, sunny fascinating lands. Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Monte Carlo, Italy, the Dardanelles, Constantinople, Greece, Palestine, Egypt.

Together—and under the experienced management of the American Express Travel Department—these two words, MAURETANIA—MEDITERRANEAN present the supreme opportunity for an interesting and luxurious winter's vacation.

Duluth Cruise

The "North American" comparable only to the finest ocean liner leaves Chicago every Monday at 2:00 P.M. (Central Time) for a trip of over

2,000 Miles on 3 Great Lakes & Georgian Bay (30,000 Isl's)

traveling through Lake Michigan directly to Mackinac Island, where ample time is allowed to drive around the island and visit the many historical points of interest. She then enters the Beautiful St. Mary's River

for an enchanting trip by daylight of 50 miles of wonderfully wooded shores, islands and other enticing scenery, from there on to the where it is a wonderful sight to watch the immense freighters raised or lowered from one great lake to another. The "North American" then enters the cool refreshing waters of Lake Superior and after a stop at Houghton (Hancock) continues to Duluth at the head of the Great Lakes—a city of many attractions. Upon the return trip Steamer also enters Lake Huron and Georgian Bay passing close to many of the picturesque islands and stops at Parry Sound. You can be quiet and secluded or enjoy a week of gaiety and amusement as you prefer. A socially gifted hostess introduces the passengers and arranges special entertainments; Music and dancing in Ball Room and Roof Garden every evening except Sunday; Splendid Orchestra; Piano and Phonograph on all decks; Complete Radio-phone Apparatus. You will eat well, sleep well and return thoroughly rested and invigorated.

Call or write for pamphlet; any Railway Ticket Office or Tourist Agency, or G. P. A.

Time to Be Thinking Where You Will Live

October 1st comes—and with it the problem of where to live most comfortably.

Of all the excellent apartment hotels in Chicago, I believe the Rogers Park is outstandingly first. I welcome careful comparisons on these points:

1—Comfort—as to rooms, furniture and furnishings;
2—Service—as to everything you choose to ask for;
3—Economy—as to rentals, foodstuffs, dining-room charges;
4—Accessibility—as to elevated, busses, taxis, and trains;
5—Surroundings—as to the lake, as well as to this particularly attractive location;
6—Conveniences—as to stores, churches, garages, etc., and a bank right in the building.

I especially invite a careful checking-up on these and all other points of apartment hotel service. Early inspection is invited. Telephone me personally, if you prefer.

CIRCLE TOURS

Special Privileges

When you buy Grand Trunk circle tour tickets you can stop over at any point indicated south of Toronto and north of Niagara Falls, Detroit, Chicago, Buffalo to Highlands of Ontario, the Muskoka Lakes, the Lake of Bays, the Georgian Bay district, the Thousand Islands and the picturesque St. Lawrence River portion. Montreal, etc. No portion of your route is retraced. You enjoy the height of diversity and take undue advantage of interest.

Go one way via Canada on the Grand Trunk.

To Boston and New York

These most popular tours enable the tourist to travel in one direction via the principal cities of Canada, through the beautiful mountains of New England; thence by boat or rail to New York City and home via Niagara Falls or Washington. Combinations can be made, if desired, to include historic Quebec, Halifax and Norfolk by steamer. Folder showing routes of the principal tours free on request.

HOW WOULD A REAL SALES CONNECTION INTEREST YOU?
Six men, possessing good appearance, the necessary punch to put over a real sales proposition, would do well to investigate this real sales connection. In place of butting your head against lines that cannot sell during the present depression, why don't you join a force where sales are being made by average individuals who have something that even a panic could not make impossible to sell? If you are a hustler we want you and you want us. This is not a stock proposition, but a moneymaker for the purchaser who is in mood to buy nothing that does not turn instantly into certain and big profits. Average commissions with us exceed $150. Old company, million dollars invested.
Advertised all over North America, and our line is selling NOW. See Sales Manager Monday, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Room 652 Marine Bldg., 136 W. Lake-st.

IF YOU THINK IN TERMS OF $6,000 THE FIRST YEAR, WRITE ME.

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—WEST.

HOMESEEKERS, INVESTORS, BUILDERS.

I have subdivided the finest and most desirably located tract in the heart of the most exclusive residential section of beautiful and will immediately offer to those who are looking for a choice highly restricted home-site or investment, large lot 50x175 ft. at unusually low prices of $1,325 to $1,500 and will sell on very easy terms to responsible parties. There is no other property in Hinsdale for sale at anywhere near these prices and adjoining property is now being offered at nearly three times my prices. Each lot has a 40 ft. building line, $4,000 restricted and is one of the very few places around Chicago where you are absolutely protected in the future against any undesirable element.

To those who are not familiar with Hinsdale, let me say that it is a completely and restricted community of artistic homes and fine improvements, situated on the very edge of Chicago in the direct path of the city's greatest growth. It is reached by 33 trains daily on the C. B. & Q. R. R. only 25 minutes from the loop, and a monthly commutation fare of less than 13 cents.

In convenience, beauty, healthfulness, social life, and everything that makes a home location attractive, this property presents a combination of city and country advantages that cannot be surpassed.

The time to buy is the best advantage is now. Write today for map and full particulars. We will also send tickets to those who wish to go out and look over the property over. Address Y F 563, Tribune.

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

Bird-Sykes
2215 Michigan-av.
Paige Distributors.

WHEN "BIRD SYKES" SAY "REBUILT"

they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle, measuring or testing parts to determine wear, replacing worn parts with new, rebuilding, adjusting, tuning up, repairing body, refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt car satisfies the eye as a new car, and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every "Rebuilt" Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in A1 mechanical condition. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within the guarantee time Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage.

We do not ask our customers to pay exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" car on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE SEDAN, 6-66, 1921. This current model car can hardly be distinguished from new. The car has been rebuilt and carries our standard warranty. Has been refinished in a standard blue color and bright parts, including radiator shell, nickeled. Upholstery is very high grade mohair velour, shows little or no wear, and is clean. Equipped with a brand new set of cord tires, spare tire, Biflex bumper front and rear, bar-peled type headlamps, motometer, lock, cap, cowl lamps, inner control spotlight, cowl ventilator, built in lock, power tire pump, cutout, heater, tools, etc. A luxurious, extremely comfortable car, particularly easy to operate and reputed for its brilliant performance. Very reasonably priced at $2,350.

PAIGE SPORT, 6-66. This car has just been beautifully refinished in moleskin gray, with black fenders, and in appearance satisfies the eye as a new car. Mechanically it will render the same satisfactory service as a new Paige, as it has been completely rebuilt in our shops and will be sold with our guarantee. Is fully equipped, including 5 good tires, motometer, spotlight and rear vision mirror, and specially upholstered in pencil grained leather. An opportunity to buy one of those popular cars that are reputed for brilliant performance and durability. Offered at the most reasonable price of $1,650.

PAIGE SPORT, 1921, LIGHT 6 CYL., ROOMY 4 PASS. Rebuilt in our own shops and carries our standard used car warranty. Refinished in moleskin gray and in appearance satisfies the eye as a new automobile. This model has deep, luxurious cushions and very long, easy riding, semi-elliptic rear springs. Easy to handle and offers dependable, reliable service at a very reasonable rate. Is equipped with a good set of cord tires, new spare cord, spring bumpers front and rear, motometer, spotlight, built in transmission lock, bullet cowl lights. Very reasonably priced at $1,250.

PAIGE 6-55 TOURING, ROOMY 7 PASS. CAR. Has been entirely rebuilt in our own shops and carries our guarantee. Repainted a standard blue color and looks new. The top is new; upholstery in very good condition. Has bumper, tonneau windshield. An excellent set of tires, lock, power tire pump, bullet lights, etc. Continental engine. A wonderful, sturdy chassis with long flexible easy riding cantilever rear springs. $975.

PAIGE 6-46 TOURING CAR. We have just refinished, renickeled and thoroughly rebuilt this car in our shops. Painted Paige royal blue. The top is new; upholstery excellent, and equipped with 5 excellent tires, built-in lock, etc. A high grade, smooth running car with the dependable Continental engine. Is a 7 passenger, with 2 extra seats. We believe at the price this car is offered that it represents better value from the service standpoint than any car you can buy at the same price. Don't expect to find this car here two days from now. $550.

H. C. S. SPORT ROADSTER. This is a smart appearing 2 passenger car that is distinctly individual. We have given it a high grade "burn off" paint job in our own paint shop. Painted a rich wine color. It has individual fenders of the molded type, aluminum step plates, and the wind shield, which is nickeled, is set at a rakish angle. Large sized nickeled barrel type head lamps and nickeled radiator. Top and upholstery are excellent. Six wire wheels, 6 good cord tires, Biflex bumpers fore and aft, spotlight, heater, cutout, radio signal, snubbers, motometer and cap. Mechanically this car is A1 and carries our used car warranty. This powerful, smooth running car is a pleasure to drive and is dependability itself. Price $1,350.

HUPMOBILE TOURING, LATE '21. Delivered new late last winter. It is in excellent mechanical condition; motor is very quiet. The original paint looks much like new. Top and upholstery perfect. Has an excellent set of cord tires, spare, clock, motometer, etc. A stunning, economical little car at the very reasonable price of $975.

NASH, 1921 TOURING, 7 PASS. Car driven less than 5,000 miles and is in practically new car condition. The paint, top and upholstery are like new and it runs with smoothness and quietness. Car is equipped with 4 good cord tires, brand new spare, clock, etc. Price $975.

HUPMOBILE ROADSTER, 1919. In excellent mechanical condition. Has been repainted a blue black color and has the appearance of a new car. Top and upholstery very good. Is equipped with spring bumper, transmission lock, spotlight, cowl, cutout, a good set of cord tires, has ample carrying space in rear deck, making it an ideal car for salesman or small family. A sturdy, dependable small car. Price $650.

KISSEL SEDAN, MODEL 38, 5 PASS. In very fine mechanical condition. Has been recently repainted a dark Brewster green. Well equipped, with 5 good tires, spring bumper, motometer, and cross arm cap, heater, tools, lock, etc. This car can be depended upon to give good service. Any one desiring a good all year car at a very reasonable price should see this car today. Price $550.

BUICK TOURING, LIGHT 4 CYL., 1918 MODEL. This car has just gone through our shops, where we overhauled, removed carbon, ground valves and did everything necessary to put it in good running condition. The top, upholstery and the original finish are excellent and the tires are very good. Equipped with bumper, rear shaft lock, spotlight, tools, etc. A light, peppy car with electric starter, lights, dem. rims, etc., for only $395.

MAXWELL LIGHT 4 CYL., 5 PASS., 1918 CAR. Has very good care, original paint still very good. Has had only a little mileage and mechanically is excellent. A small 4 cylinder passenger car that offers good, reliable service at a very reasonable price; $250.

5 Bargains
AT THE Peerless Motor Car Co.
OF ILLINOIS.

STUTZ TOURING, MODEL "C." This is about as good a looking Stutz as you have ever seen on the streets of Chicago. It has just received a first class refinishing, with nickeled headlamps, radiator shell, nickeled windshield and spotlight. It is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, 6 extra, 6 wire wheel and many other equipments. This particular Stutz car is way above the average in condition. The motor runs smoothly and quietly. It is truly a car that cannot be classed as the ordinary used automobile. If you are interested in the purchase of a high grade car of this type you could not buy anything that would give you any more satisfaction at such a ridiculously low price. Special for this sale, $975.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1921. This car has just been put through our Mechanical Department and refinished a deep maroon with natural wood wheels. The permanent top is the same as our current model. This car is one that originally was owned by one of Chicago's most prominent families and when turned in to us was above the average in condition. In fact, it is such a good car that we found but very little work necessary to put it in the condition it is in today, and we do not believe that it can be distinguished from new. It is equipped with a brand new set of cord tires, 1 extra, bumper, motometer and many other extras. This highly reliable and smart appearing Peerless car is being offered at such a price that we do not believe you can afford to pass it up if you are interested in the purchase of a high grade car of this type. Your immediate action will be necessary if you would avail yourself of this bargain. Special for this sale, $1,250.

STUDEBAKER TOURING, MODEL SC-6. This car is one that cannot be distinguished from new. It is light, economical and extremely powerful. The paint, which is a dark green, is in excellent condition. The cord tires are exceptionally fine with 1 brand new spare. Mechanically it will bear the most rigid examination and demonstration. It also has a set of glass sides, which to duplicate today would cost $250. A car in the condition that this one is in cannot be described in such a way that you can really appreciate its value without first seeing it, and, for that reason would suggest your immediate inspection. Special for this sale, $600.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1917. This car we consider to be one of the best bargains in a Peerless Touring car that we have ever offered. It is painted a beautiful shade of green with a white wire wheels, 1 extra wire wheel, and a very fine set of cord tires. The equipment is very complete, and if you could see it you would agree that it is a car that has always had the very best of attention. This is the first car of this series we have had to offer for some time and that we are very fortunate in being able to offer it at such an exceptional price. Cars of this series are very quick sell rapidly at this price, so if you are looking for a very serviceable high grade car that will outperform and outlast anything that you might buy new at the same price, this car will meet with your requirements. Special for this sale, $550.

DODGE TAXICAB. This very late model Dodge Cab, we believe we are fortunate in being able to offer at a price that is within the reach of all buyers. This car is in very serviceable condition, and the tires are practically new. Mechanically it will go out and give remarkable service. In view of the possible street car strike the demand for a car of this type, at the price, will exceed the supply, and for that reason, if you are contemplating the purchase of a Cab for taxi work see this snap at once. Special for this sale, $500.

HUDSON SEDAN MODEL 11-0. This Hudson is coming into our hands from the original owner, in such condition that it is ready for many thousands of miles of good uninterrupted service. It is equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, bumper, cowl lamps, clock, seat covers and other extras. It is what we believe to be an exceptional buy and we are sure that it is a car worth the offering for today. Special for this sale, $1,000.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1920. This car has come into our hands from one of our oldest customers, and is in what we believe to be almost new condition. The paint, which is a dark wine color, is in excellent condition. The tires and upholstery show practically no wear. Mechanically it will bear the most rigid examination and demonstration. A high grade car that has seen but a very few thousand miles of care and one that we will carry the standard warranty of the Peerless Motor Car company. Do not delay seeing this particular car, as it is a real bargain at the price we are offering it. Price $1,600.

Do not delay seeing this particular car, as it is a real bargain at the price we are offering it. Price $1,600.

CHANDLER 1921 SEDAN. This 7 passenger sedan represents one of the best closed car buys we have been able to offer. Here is a car that presents the appearance of new. Black enamelled hood and fenders with blue and black body, just refinished. Upholstery of striped velour in excellent condition; in fact, every detail of this car will please a discriminating buyer. This is the first late model sedan we have offered in the last three months. If interested we advise that you call at your earliest convenience. Special today, $1,450.

CHANDLER 1921 TOUR. California top and sides. A car just received from one of our oldest customers. This car sold new less than one year ago. Driven very little and given the best of care. Entire finish and trimming still has that new car luster. Equipped with best quality California top with specially fitted detachable heavy plate glass sides. Seat covers to match lining of top. Other extras are sturdy spring bumper, spotlight, motometer with cross bar lock, cap, and stop light rear signal, electric cigar lighter, rear vision mirror, outside parking light, polished aluminum step plate on running boards.

This car is in such sound condition throughout that it may be purchased with the same feeling of safety that you would experience in the purchase of a new car. $1,250.

CHANDLER DISPATCH. This car traded in by original owner has only been driven 8,779 miles in Chicago. Seldom, if ever have we received a car in such wonderful condition. Every detail has received unusual care. Has had mechanical inspection every 1,000 miles and Simonized every thirty days. The original factory finish is as good today as when new. The operation and condition of car is in keeping with its appearance. Car is equipped with front and rear bumper, spot light, motometer lock and spare tire with cover. The serial no. is 100,539, which classes the car as very late 1920. This is an unusual value and will almost immediately be purchased on sight. We recommend prompt action if interested. $900.

HAYNES SPORT. This close coupled 4 passenger 4 door body fitted to a late 1920 model 45 chassis makes a sturdy, dependable as well as beautiful car. We received this car from the original owner after being driven only a little over 16,000 miles. It is equipped with 2 bumpers, motometer and gear lock. Original dark green factory finish is still in very good condition. Top, upholstery, etc., looks like they were never used. This car priced to sell on sight. $750.

OLDS TOURING, SERIAL No. 5401. This Model 43 was sold new in 1920; it was traded in on a new Cleveland sedan by the original owner. The mechanical condition of this car always received specially good attention; tires are all good; top and upholstery, very good; paint is fair. Car is offered specially priced as it stands at $675.

STUDEBAKER 5 PASS. TOURING. This is a 1919 car with transmission mounted on motor. This is the latest type of original factory finish, top, upholstery, tires very good. Mechanically as good as ever. Equipped with 2 sets of curtains, one winter inclosure, which can be taken off in warm weather. Price extremely reasonable, $395.

HUDSON SUPER SIX TOURING MODEL H. This car comes from the original owner, and is equipped with removable winter top and standard summer touring top. Painted a dark green; five very good tires. The general condition of the car is such as to make it a very attractive buy at our price, $400.

BRADLEY TOURING, 1921. This is a fairly light weight 5 pass. touring car. Top, upholstery, tires, etc., very good. Original finish. Four cyl. 4 cycle running motor. Has Inghouse electric equipment. This is a much better buy than a low priced new car. Special, $485.

CHEVROLET SEDAN, F. B., 1919. This model is generally conceded by the trade to be their best model. Velour upholstery, mechanical condition excellent. This is a very good buy for some one who is interested in a roomy 5 passenger closed car. Specially priced at $425.

REO TOURING, 1917. This is one of the most dependable and comfortable 4 cylinder 5 passenger cars on the street; condition is very good throughout; every detail up for above the average. Priced specially at $275.
